

Navy Recruits Due Oct. 1

By BILL GENTRY

Orlandoans will see the first naval recruits Oct. 1 when 400 arrive for an 11-week course, Capt. E. P. Huey, commander of the new Naval Training Center said Thursday night.

Huey spoke to about 250 members and friends attending the annual meeting of the Central Florida Chapter of the American Red Cross. The members elected 18 directors.

THE COMMANDER said 90 per cent of the recruits would be high school graduates with an average age of 19. To accommodate them, four 3-story barracks, drill field, training building and mess hall are under construction at Orlando Air Force Base at a cost of $15 million.

Later a fifth barracks and a training gym with swimming pool will be added to what Huey envisions as a campus-like training center.

Chapter president MacDonnell Tyre said the war in Vietnam had resulted in a increase in Red Cross services to servicemen and their families. He said 4,392 cases were serviced and more than 2,000 telegrams and 12,500 telephone calls were handled in 1967. The "Voices From Home" calls from relatives to servicemen and the Vietnam Wives program both have been enlarged, he said.

Special guests were 25 members of the "Waiting Wives Club," a Red Cross sponsored organization for women whose husbands are serving overseas.

ELECTED DIRECTORS for three-year terms were: North Division, Randall Chase, Mrs. C. Vernon Mize Jr., Ralph A. Smith, all of Sanford.

Directors at large, D. L. Smith, Sanford; Bruce A. Murray, St. Cloud; Curtis H. Stanton, Orlando; Russell P. Hulbert, Winter Park; Robert W. Walko; Col. Gail Roberts and Richard Staub, all of Orlando.

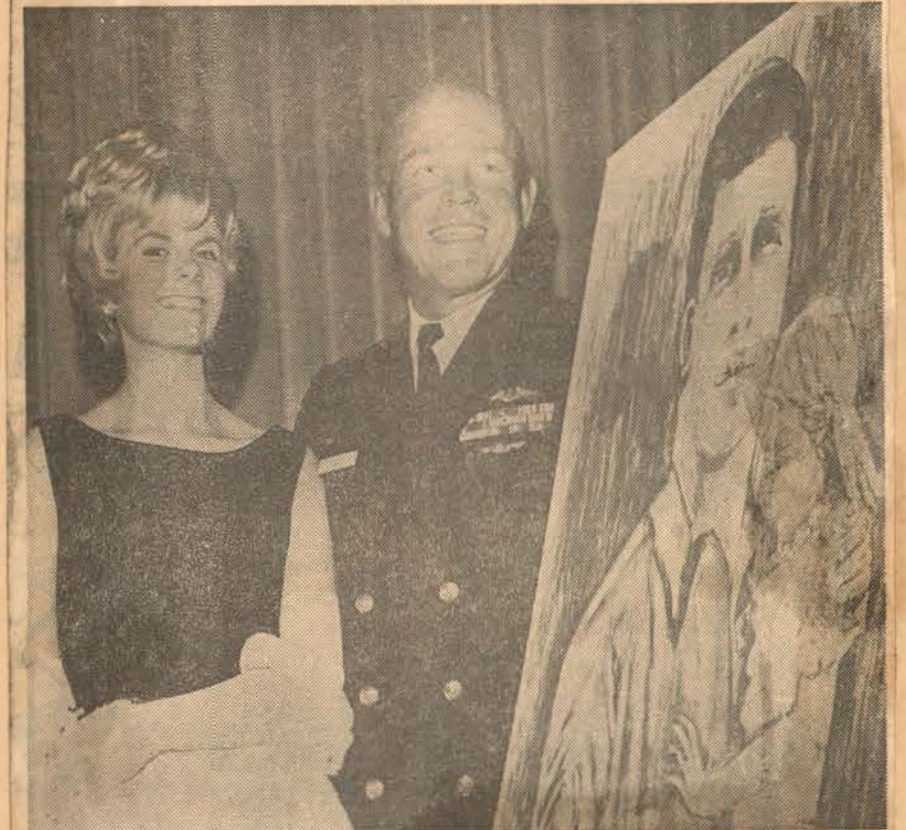

Capt. D. Finnigan, U.S.N. (Ret.) was elected to fill an at-large vacancy for a one-year period.

Commander Joe Ball, USN, receives a Gold Star in lieu of a second award of the Legion of Merit Medal from Captain Enders P. Huey, USN, Commander, Naval Training Center, Orlando during retirement ceremonies May 31st. Cdr. Ball was the Assistant Commander, Naval Training Center, Orlando.

Silks from Singapore, pearls from Japan and handmade shoes from Hong Kong are just some of the side benefits which come from being a member of the Navy Nurse Corps.

Lt. Mary Ellen Guccione and Lt. Betty Pisani are the first two nurses to arrive for the U. S. Naval Hospital, Orlando, other than the chief nurse, Commander Adelyn Yankoski. They are young women who have been "on the go" for the past few years.

THEY FIRST met at Newport, R. I., when both were in officer's training. When their paths did not cross again for three years until they met aboard the hospital ship "Sanctuary" while serving in the Vietnam war zone.

Both nurses believe their year on the hospital ship was one of the most rewarding in their career of nursing. This ship took emergency cases and the experience was priceless.

"IT GAVE me great faith in the youth of today," said 26-year-old Betty. "They have what it takes."

Mary Ellen joined the Navy because she wanted to travel, and travel she did. She has been to Hong Kong, Singapore, Philip-pinas, Japan and Vietnam.

On her days off, Mary Ellen "shopped" the Far East. She bought jade (with certificate of origin), china, silk, cashmere and a stereo.

Dust created by one million-dollar construction project doesn't get a chance to settle before another building is started at Orlando's Navy Training Center. "And it's likely to be that way for another four or five years," a Navy officer said, stooping to get around a barricade.

HE LED THE WAY into an almost-completed three-story barracks that will house 800 recruits for the first 11 weeks of their naval careers sometime this fall.

About 70 Per Cent Complete

"I'd say we're about 70 per cent complete on the first increment," Lt. Cmdr. Norman Cervanka said. Cervanka went down the list:

— A $1.6 million mess hall, big enough to feed the entire center in 90 minutes.

— A $1.2 million site preparation contract that removed more than 20,000 cubic yards of sand and buried utility pipes.

— A $1.3 million training center building with a television studio and 26 classrooms. — And four 800-man barracks, being constructed at a cost of $5.3 million.

The entire $9.4 million package is scheduled to be finished before the arrival of the first Navy recruits.

CERVANKA, AS OFFICER in charge of construction, will relinquish his post later this month to Lt. Cmdr. Al Goins. Cervanka will go to Georgia Tech where the Navy is financing his study toward a master's degree in civil engineering.

Change Started More Than Year Ago

The Navy first started changing the skyline of Orlando Air Force Base a little over a year ago.

The first change was a 400,000-gallon water tank, painted blue to match the sky but located near the middle of the first building group to break the monotony of three-story buildings.

WHEN COMPARED to other service bases and camps, the blue water tower will be even more unusual.

The $1.2 million site preparation contract eliminated all utility lines, poles and overhead pipes that characterize military bases.

Buildings are designed for "the Florida climate," Cervanka said. Exteriors are of buff bricks sandwiched between white mortar, all encased in a border of white concrete with sun-reflecting quartz chips.

"WE'VE TRIED to give it all a campus effect," Cervanka said without a smile. "The whole thing will be air conditioned and tile will cover the floors."

Barracks will be of the open-bay variety, with 67 recruits sleeping in bunk beds on each floor. A bathroom (head) will be at the end of each bay.

The head will perhaps pose the only headache to the Navy when mothers find there are only eight shower heads for every 67 recruits.

ATOP EACH OF THE four barracks are concrete and steel poles that will be laced together with clothes lines as the Navy instills its tradition of washing your own clothes in its recruits.

The $1.3 million three-story training building has staircases wide enough for four-abreast to march to the classrooms.

It has an administration wing on one end. The wing will become the center of the training building, however, when and if the Navy expands to a second increment of buildings and doubles its capacity.

THE $1.6 MILLION mess hall will have 1,380 seats. It's not hard to believe the Navy boasts that the entire camp can be fed in 90 minutes when it's realized the recruits will have less than 15 minutes to eat.

200 Dozen Doughnuts Per Hour

An $11,000 doughnut machine, capable of preparing the batter, punching the holes and deep-frying 200 dozen doughnuts each hour, will grace the electric, gas and oil operated kitchen.

Huge walk-in freezers and coolers and exhaust fans will also highlight the kitchen.

A $300,000 LANDLOCKED ship, built on the site and scaled to two-thirds the size of a regular destroyer, will be at the end of a 12-acre drill field.

The buildings will be connected with 20-foot wide concrete walks, wide enough for two platoons to pass.

Trees have been preserved throughout the 100-acre site to insure the base will not have the barren effect many military camps have with visitors and residents alike.

INSTANT HERITAGE and tradition will be scattered around the recruit training center in the form of old anchors, cannon anchor chains and bells.

To Start With 300 Men Each Week

The current, official Navy calendar shows 300 long-haired recruits arriving fresh from civilian life during the first two weeks of October.

Another 300 men will arrive each week thereafter with the initial class of 300 being graduated as crew-cut seamen 11 weeks later.

THE CAMP WILL BE dedicated July 1, and a permanent party of about 3,500 will come aboard then.

A fifth barracks, slated for completion a little over a year from now, will push the recruit population to the 4,000-man mark.

Tentative plans, contingent upon appropriations and many other things, call for duplicating the initial base during the next four or five years.

A COMMUNITY BUILDING, (post exchange) will be completed in another year and a gymnasium should be ready in August of 1969.

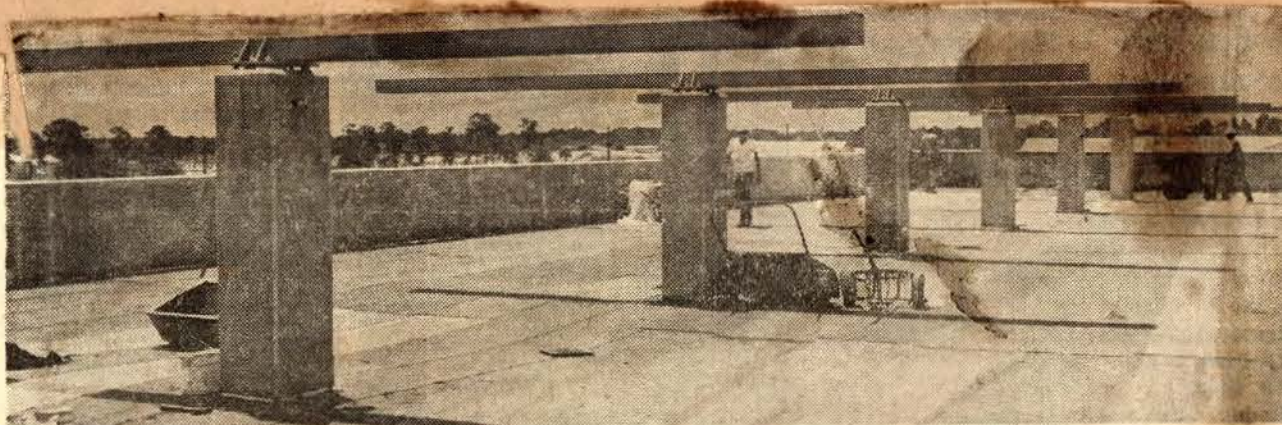

Meanwhile, other buildings to house advanced Navy specialty schools are being planned and constructed.

Ground was broken last week on a $2.2 million two-story building to house the Advanced Underseas Weapons School.

BY 1973, TENTATIVE PLANS call for 15,800 recruits, permanent party and civilian aides to be at Navy Training Center, Orlando.

Long before that, however, plans call for the base to become "the showplace of the Navy," according to Cervanka.

"This has been planned from the very first, it's modern and functional. It'll really be the showcase of the Navy," he said.

Orlando, AF Exchange Tributes

By GLORIA MELTZER

Metropolitan Orlando's leading citizens turned out by the hundreds Thursday night to pay tribute to the U.S. Air Force at a formal banquet marking its departure from Orlando Air Force Base.

But the Air Force also turned the occasion into a tribute to Orlando.

MAJ. GEN. JOSEPH A. Cunningham, former Orlando AFB commander, presented two of the Military Airlift Command's five distinguished citizens awards to Orlando Mayor Carl Langford and to the Orlando Area Chamber of Commerce for their outstanding work in supporting the Air Force efforts to provide adequate and segregated housing for military personnel.

"For the past 17 years the chamber has been a strong friend of the Air Force," Cunningham said, praising its efforts in 1952 to help provide adequate housing and again in 1967 to help carry out the Department of Defense's directive on equal housing.

HE ALSO praised the chamber for counteracting a move among area businesses to cut off credit to military men after the closing of the base was announced in 1964.

He praised Mayor Langford as the one man with sufficient influence who stood up to assure the desegregation directive could be fulfilled.

Cunningham, deputy director of the Civil Disturbance Directorate, Headquarters United States Air Force, was the key speaker, representing Gen. J. P. McConnell, USAF chief of staff, and Gen. Howell M. Estes Jr., MAC commander.

Cunningham was commander of the Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service here for four years, starting in 1959.

MAYOR LANGFORD presented a memorial plaque from the city honoring the Air Force for the active and productive participation of thousands of men in the community. It is to be permanently erected at the base.

He also presented a plaque to Navy Capt. Jack N. Miller welcoming the Navy to Orlando AFB.

Dinner chairman William H. Dial honored the three departing Air Force commanders, Col. William Barksdale, Gen. Allison C. Brooks and Col. W. W. Wilson, saying the relations between the community and the Air Force "has been a happy marriage."

WILSON IS BASE commander; Brooks heads the Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service and Barksdale commands the Aerospace Audio Visual Service.

Retired Col. Stanley I. Hand, chairman of the chamber's military affairs committee paid tribute to William Charette, who won the Medal of Honor in Korea as a medical corpsman. His heroic efforts in combat saved the lives of many men, Hand said.

AT LEAST 40 Air Force men, including former base commanders Gen. Clifford Rees, Col. James W. Lansing, Col. Kenneth Kienth and Col. L. B. Matthews, and representatives of the new Navy command were feted.

TRAINING BUILDING IS EXAMPLE OF MODERN ARCHITECTURAL STYLE
... Inside up to date, too, with television studio among classrooms

Navy is Really Landing On Central Florida Shores

You've heard what it will be like. You've heard plenty of new articles about it.

Now, welcome aboard for a firsthand look at the U.S. Naval Training Center at present, and a peek at what it is expected to be in a few short years.

To get statistics out of the way, although they are impressive, the Navy will officially take over the OAFB in July. The first phase of the recruit training complex will accept its first 300 trainees in October. Three hundred more will come in each week for 10 weeks when the original 300 will graduate.

The facility will gradually increase in size from 3,000 to 4,000 plus another 3,000 Naval military and civilian personnel.

Add another complete section of the training base by late 1971, another 4,000 trainees, 4,000 members of the School Command, plus a complete Naval Hospital, the Naval Training Device Center, the Advanced Underwater Weapons School and you will have, by late 1971, a total complement of 15,800 Naval and civilian personnel on the third and most modern training facility in the country.

The figures are hard to imagine on paper, or even in the mind's eye.

They become a whole new seasickness when you actually see the facility taking physical shape.

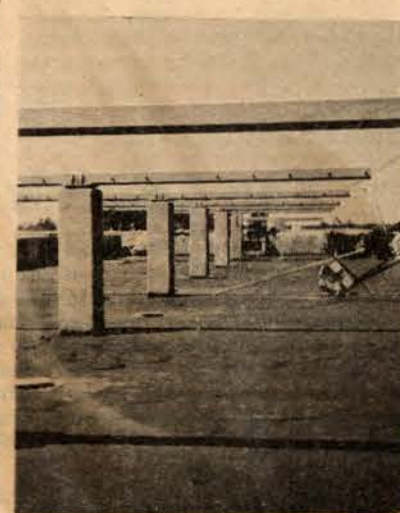

And when you are given a tour through the eyes of an enthusiastic young Navy man, Journalist Second Class Jay Simmons, who looked Navy from his cap to his bell-bottom trousers, it's even more fantastic.

Simmons was not permitted to express an opinion about the way the facility was being fitted out, but it was obvious he was as proud as punch as we slogged through the drifts of dry sand, common to every construction site.

Workmen in hardhats and Navy personnel in fatigues ebbed and flowed all over the area.

We climbed to the top of one of the four, immense barracks being readied. From there we could see the entire panorama of what will be the academic center of the Navy's training program in this country.

(And for the worriers among you, the Navy isn't planning to keep a hoard of lusty, young sailors cooped up for 10 weeks just to spring them on the citizenry of Central Florida.) The atmosphere here will be a college atmosphere, except for the physical training. It will be a learning process; to be gentlemen as well as men. The graduates may not all want to go to Bok Tower on their leave time, but they certainly won't be pillaging either. This won't be the run-of-the-mill boot camp. (The name "boot camp" makes the Navy brass here wince, anyway.) The barracks will be air-conditioned and designed for comfortable, communal living. There will be recreation rooms throughout.

Tradition is not forgotten. Row and rows of clothes poles rise like metal masts from the roof of each barracks. A Navy man is expected to clean his duds in air, scented by salt or orange blossoms.

From the top of the building, still goosy with tar paper, we could see modern architecture rising out of a sea of sand. The multistoried training building where classes will be the major part of the trainee's program; the adjoining tramp of thousands of pairs of boots marching to and from classes. With 300 young men graduating each week, Orange County businessmen and tourist attractors can only drool at the prospect of at least 600 parents and sweethearts journeying to Florida to see their loved one parade proudly before them.

It will make the heart of an old salt and a motel owner skip a beat to know that the Navy has really landed on the shores of Central Florida.

administration building—a cube of accordion panels designed to ward off summer heat—and the sprawling mess hall that will feed nearly 5,000 men at one time; and feed them well, from the looks of the giant freezers and copper cooking kettles inside.

There will be four more barracks, each three floors high, on the south side of the training building hub. That will come later.

Everything will be beautifully landscaped. Everything, that is, except the "grinder" as J2d Simmons refers to an aircraft carrier-sized expanse of asphalt west of the complex. What can you do to make a marching and physical training ground area look attractive? It won't look so hot at 5:30 in the morning when the trainees fall in, or in the evening on some extra duty marching.

But then, the Navy won't be running a prep school.

If you look closely at the interior of the buildings, you can see that they are simple and serviceable. There's plenty of good, tough tile on the floors to withstand the

$7.5 Million Request 2 Years Away

Navy Eyes Hospital Here

Fund requests for construction of a $7.5 million regional naval hospital at the Orlando Naval Training Center will get under way in about two years, Capt. Bernard W. Brender, who will head the recruit training command in Orlando, said Friday.

The hospital is not in the fiscal 1968 plans, Brender said.

U. S. REP. ROBERT L. F. Sikes of Crestview, visiting his son, Robert K., and family in Orlando, said he was aware the hospital will be built and said he foresaw no difficulty in its funding.

Plans for the multistoried modern facility will be prepared on the basis of the number of persons on the base, the number of other military people from other bases now being serviced by the Orlando Air Force Base Hospital, and continued service for retired military personnel in the area, Brender said.

The OAFB Hospital is being operated efficiently by the Air Force and the facility is adequate for immediate needs, he said.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY
WASHINGTON, D. C. 20350

21 June 1968

Dear Mayor Langford:

The commissioning of the Naval Training Center, Orlando, is an important event in naval history. The facility to be dedicated will be the third of its type in the Navy, joining centers at Great Lakes, Illinois, and San Diego, California, in providing trained men for the Navy.

Today, the Navy's worldwide operations are assuming increasing importance in the free world's quest for freedom. Technology employed in the Navy requires that the training given its recruits be the best and most modern. Orlando will have all the facilities to provide this basic and advanced training.

Please extend my appreciation to the people of Orlando and Central Florida for the manner in which the Navy has been received into your community. Rest assured that the Navy will make every effort to continue the high standards set by our Air Force predecessors at Orlando Air Force Base in the excellent military-community relationship which has prevailed over the years.

I am confident that both the Orlando community and the Navy can look forward to many years of pleasant association.

Sincerely,

HOSPITAL CORPSMAN WILLIAM R. CHARETTE RECEIVES MEDAL OF HONOR FOR GALLANTRY IN KOREA.

His company was engaged in a fierce encounter with well-dug-in North Korean forces, far in advance of the main line of resistance, on 27 Mar 1953. Charette repeatedly and unhesitatingly moved about through a murderous barrage of hostile small-arms and mortar fire to render assistance to his wounded comrades. When an enemy grenade landed within a few feet of a Marine he was attending, Charette threw himself on the stricken man and absorbed the concussion of the exploding grenade with his own body.

The blast ripped off his helmet and medical kit, and left him with painful facial wounds. In spite of the resulting shock, Charette continued administering to the wounded, improvising emergency bandages by tearing off part of his clothing.

Discovering a seriously wounded Marine whose armored battle vest had been torn from his body by the blast from an exploding shell, Charette removed his own vest and placed it upon the helpless man. He repeatedly exposed himself to enemy fire in order to lend effective aid to wounded men in his own unit and adjacent platoon areas as well. As a result, he was directly responsible for saving many lives.

RECRUITS ARRIVE AT RTC IN OCTOBER

The Recruit Training Command, located aboard Naval Training Center, Orlando, presently consists of one 3,200-man recruit camp scheduled to be completed in September 1968.

The camp includes a 888-seat mess hall capable of feeding 4,600 recruits and the staff in 90 minutes, a three-story training building with a closed circuit television studio, 26 classrooms, and four 800-man barracks, complete with recreational facilities.

All buildings are designed for the Florida climate with air conditioning and tile floors throughout. Building exteriors are of buff bricks sandwiched between white mortar and encased in a border of white concrete with sun-reflecting quartz chips.

Ultra-modern design and functional arrangement of the buildings has been stressed giving the training complex a "campus-like" atmosphere.

A 249-foot, landlocked training ship, built on the site, and scaled to two-thirds the size of a Destroyer Escort, will be at the end of the 12-acre drill field.

The various buildings will be connected by 20-foot wide concrete walks, enabling the recruits to march eight abreast as they go from class to class.

Utility lines, poles, and overhead pipes have been eliminated and the trees and foliage have been preserved throughout the 100-acre site lending to the overall beauty of the Naval Training Center.

The first segment of the 11-week training cycle will begin in October when the first class of 300 recruits arrive.

After the completion of the fifth barracks next year, the recruit population will increase to approximately 4,000 plus a staff of 300.

Five additional barracks, identical to the first five and sharing the administration building and reception facilities, will be completed by 1972.

By that time, recruits will arrive at the rate of 800 per week with an on-board count of about 8,000 recruits.

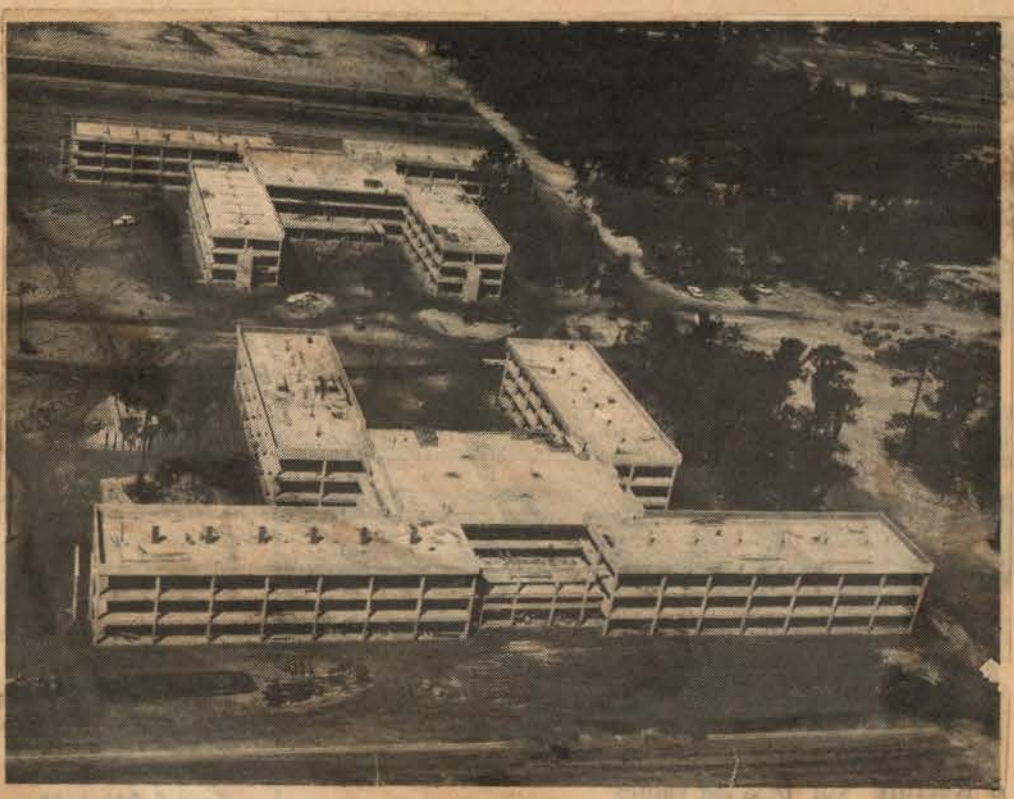

Recruit graduation ceremonies will be held each Friday at 10 a.m.

Join Navy And See Disney World Is New Slogan

Join the Navy and see Disney World!

Effective July 1, 1968, that might well be the recruiting slogan of the U. S. Navy. For on that day the U. S. Navy Recruit Training Center opens its barracks doors in Orlando.

Not too many months later the fabulous $600-million Disney World attraction, currently being constructed on 27,000 acres of land nearby will be in operation.

CENTRAL FLORIDIANS are doubly happy about their two newest neighbors, even though the departing old friends from the Orlando Air Force Base will be missed by all.

But, through the years Orlandoans have been quick to make fast friends with all military newcomers, as they have with new Navy base commander, Captain Enders P. Huey.

HUEY, WITH his ready wit and warm smile has captured the hearts of every Orlandoan he's met while preparing to open the Navy's third U. S. recruit training center. And, he's enthused the entire city on the merits of the Navy's newest big move.

"The new Naval Training Center in Orlando affords the Navy an opportunity for an excellent 'show place,'" explains Huey.

"IT EMBODIES all the latest concepts of construction and layout which have been developed over the past several decades. The modern functional arrangement of the buildings facilitate the administration and daily movement of the large population of recruits."

Future plans indicate that the Navy will ultimately spend $80 million on the 1,100 acre Training Center.

"WE WILL have a most attractive base which will convey to the recruit that the Navy cares about its people," Huey said.

Orlando, "the city beautiful," is pleased that its many attractive new neighbors from the Navy, along with Disney, Florida's Technological University (actually five colleges all in one), and a multitude of new business firms all will be building modern facilities to prove that each also cares about their people and want to create the very best impression on all who come in contact with them.

AS THE Orlando Area Chamber of Commerce President, Robert G. Neel, stated recently: "Orlando is on the move like never before in its history. Such fantastic growth brings with it equally big opportunities and challenges. What chambers in some parts of the country might regard as a crisis, we take in our stride."

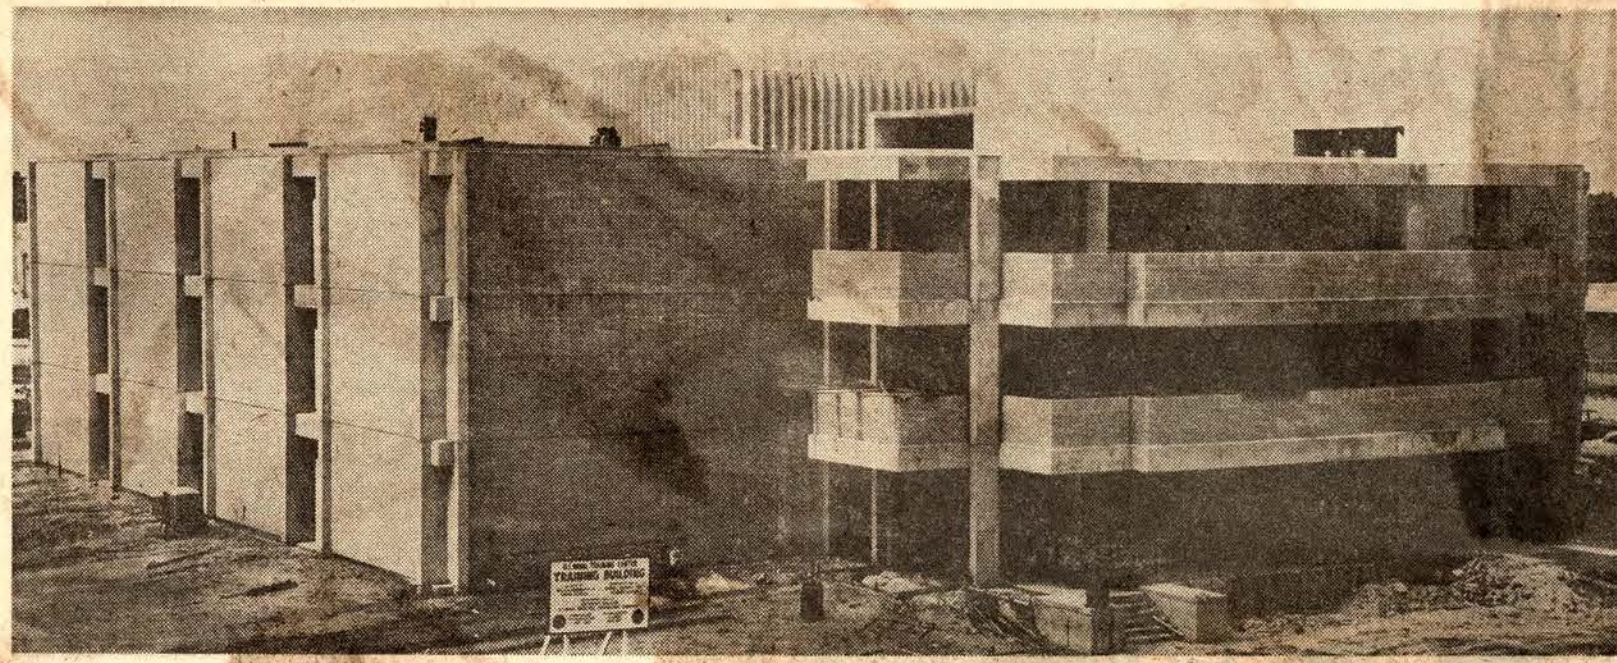

"We're proud and happy that Orlando has been selected as the locale for so many big projects and developments. And, day by day, we realize more and more that it's a privilege to live in Central Florida."

WHAT ARE some of these privileges and advantages that the Navy will enjoy here? Why, of all the places in the entire United States did the Navy prefer Orlando?

There are many factors that were taken into consideration before the Navy made its decision to locate a Naval Recruit Training Center in "The City Beautiful." Because thousands of Navy men and their families would frequent the new base an attractive, warm setting was desirable.

TODAY, OVER 600,000 sailors man and maintain the surface ships, submarines, aircraft and supporting bases of the U. S. Navy's globe-encircling fleet.

To keep this force constantly up to strength the Navy processes and trains 130,000 regular and reserve recruits annually. All of these are volunteers. For a long time the facilities used at the recruit training centers in San Diego and the Great Lakes were strained to capacity to keep abreast of the requirements set forth by the Navy Department in Washington.

INTENSIVE STUDIES were undertaken by the Navy to determine the best methods to meet the ever-increasing recruit training requirements. During these studies it became evident that a third recruit Training Center would offer many advantages to the Navy.

All available military installations in the Eastern States were surveyed and evaluated. Quite by chance, the United States Air Force, which had been operating and maintaining two installations in Orlando, decided to close down and deactivate the Orlando Air Force Base.

THIS OFFERED some five facilities and accommodations suitable for the use of the Navy. But this alone was not the deciding factor. A comparison of construction costs showed Orlando to be the most economic location.

It permitted a saving of more than $17 million when such factors as availability of existing Air Force facilities and excellent local community support in the form of family housing and other items for military personnel and their dependents were considered.

THE STUDY of require-

Still other beneficial factors which swayed the decision in favor of Orlando was an abundance of varied recreational activities such as fishing, swimming, water skiing, golf and tennis.

The Navy has taken over the 175-bed 1360th Air Force Hospital Orlando, Fla. Now known as the Orlando Naval Hospital, it will provide primary support for the new Naval Training Center there and McCoy Air Force Base. The hospital, the Navy's 28th, will be in development status until July 1, when it is expected to be placed in commission. Initial staffing will be 84 officers, 191 enlisted men and civilian employees.

The Navy plans, by degrees, to move into Orlando its Service Schools Command, its Nuclear Power and Advanced Undersea Weapons Schools, its naval training devices and Navy Photo Centers, and its recruit training camp for enlisted women.

THERE WILL eventually be about 7,500 to 8,000 permanent Navy personnel at the installation. In addition, the mass graduation ceremonies of the Navy recruits will become another major tourist attraction of Orlando.

Central Florida will benefit substantially from this new installation. Once the training center is in full operation it has been estimated that over 100,000 people will visit Orlando annually to visit Navy trainees and personnel.

THIS NEW NAVAL Training Center, Disney World and Florida Technological University augers well for the future growth and continued prosperity of Central Florida.

The new Disney World will have a tremendous impact on the economy of the area. In the first year of operation it is expected to create 7,585 new full-time jobs in basic tourist-oriented activities.

Recruits Will Hang Out 'Personal' Laundry On Roof ... Part of recruit training

DURING ITS initial construction stage and first 10 years of operation, Disney World will directly generate $6.6 billion in measurable economic benefits for the State of Florida as a whole.

By the end of its tenth year of operation Disney World will have generated for the Sunshine State an additional 50,000 full-time jobs, 25,000 of which will be Disney World oriented, and an additional 25,000 of which will support this new population.

The entire 27,400 acre Disney World development is expected to cost at least $600 million.

BUILDING SO vast a playground is a pleasant change in Central Florida, as Orlando has been a space age boom town since 1958, working hand-in-glove with the military who lived and many who eventually retired here.

The Orlando Area Chamber of Commerce can point with pride to the many natural gifts that have contributed to Orlando's growth: a central location in the nation's second fastest growing state, a mild climate, a b u n d a n t sunmonths after Sputnik. The U. S. launched its own satellite, Explorer 1, from a little-known spit of land on the east coast of Florida called Cape Canaveral (renamed Cape Kennedy).

The second event took place on Oct. 1, 1958 when Congress passed the Space Act of 1958. This act established a civilian space agency, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

It also insured the spectacular growth of the Orlando area, because of its proximity (less than one hour's drive on the newly opened

IN 1959 the population of the Greater Orlando area was 141,000. By 1960 it had climbed to 318,000 and to nearly 390,000 in 1965. By 1975 the area's population is expected to reach 625,000.

That Orlando has remained "The City Beautiful" while becoming "The Action Center of Florida" is a tribute to the vision, hard work and pride of Orlando's citizens.

ments clearly revealed, too, that the bulk of Navy recruits are generally from the eastern portion of the country. A training base in the East, therefore, would reduce travel time and costs for recruits. Transportation facilities, possibilities of epidemics by overcrowding and future requirements were other factors that were taken into consideration.

Then too, there were many advantages supporting the placement of a major Naval Training Center in the Orlando area.

"THE GENERAL environment of Orlando is going to be much more favorable to morale," said Rear Admiral Harry Hull, Navy director of Shore Activities Development, when he appeared before the House Appropriations Subcommittee in Washington and recommended that the Navy build a recruit training center in Orlando. "The recreational facilities and opportunities in Orlando are excellent," he added, "and the weather is superb."

Robert H. B. Baldwin, former Undersecretary of the Navy concurred.

What It Takes To Build Naval Training Center

On Dec. 6, 1966, the Honorable Robert H. B. Baldwin, then under secretary of the navy, announced that the City of Orlando had been chosen as the location for the Third Naval Training Center.

Eighteen months later on Monday the center will be commissioned along with the Recruit Training Command, Naval Hospital, and Navy Finance Office. Other activities located at NTC, Orlando, are Naval Training Device Center, Advanced Undersea Weapons School, Navy Printing and Publications Service Branch office, and Defense Contract Administrative Services District. (The Air Force 1365th Photo Squadron will remain at NTC, Orlando until July 1969).

THE REASON for establishing a third Naval Training Center was to increase the manpower training capabilities of the Navy. The Navy currently requires 130,000 to 140,000 new recruits be trained each year. With completion of the recruit training facilities at NTC, Orlando, the Navy will be able to fulfill its manpower training requirements.

The construction of the first increment of the Recruit Training Command will be completed in September 1968 and the first contingent of recruits will begin arriving in early October.

INITIALLY THE first increment of the Recruit Training Command will include four — 800 man barracks, a training building consisting of 26 classrooms and closed circuit television, and a 4,600 man Mess Hall. With the completion of a fifth recruit barracks in October 1969, the recruit population will gradually increase from 2,300 to 4,000.

The second 4,000 man Recruit Training Camp is scheduled for completion in mid-1972. This will bring the total recruit population to 8,000.

THE ADVANCED Undersea Weapons School had its first graduation in April 1968, and currently has an enrollment of 27 students. Construction of the second increment is scheduled for completion in October 1968.

Construction of the Service Schools is scheduled to begin in 1971. Scheduled for completion in mid-1974, the Service Schools Command will include approximately 500 staff members and 4,000 students.

IT IS ESTIMATED THAT the total center population, including recruits and students, will be in excess of 16,000 by mid-1974.

There are four recruit barracks presently under construction. A fifth barracks will be completed in October 1969. The barracks are constructed in a north-south mall producing a "campus like" atmosphere. Each of the barracks is completely air conditioned and capable of housing 800 recruits.

THE BARRACKS are composed of four three-story wings clustered around a central core. Each floor of each wing contains a dormitory which is designed to house a company of 67 men. In addition to the sleeping area, the dormitory wings contain a Master-at-Arms Office, Recreational Room and a small machinery room to handle the air conditioning and heating equipment.

The Central Core provides rest room and equipment facilities. The Core is sub-divided in order that each company of recruits will have its own toilet area. The toilet areas consist of shower rooms, toilet, lavatory, and scrub rooms.

THE RECRUITS WILL wash their clothing in the scrub rooms the traditional Navy way — by hand. The scrub room consists of three large pre-cast terrazzo tables weighing 1½ tons each. Clothes drying areas are located on the barracks roofs. Drying areas consist of 25,000 square feet of rooftop space.

Each barracks contains administrative offices which are located on the first floor of the central core.

Each barracks contains 106,000 square feet of floor space.

The Training Building is completely air conditioned, containing 26 regular classrooms, one staff training classroom and a test makeup classroom. Each classroom has approximately 1,300 square feet of floor space. The building also includes a television studio where training programs are originated and then viewed on remote TV monitors in each of the classrooms. Additionally, the Training Building contains a library room and recreation room.

THE MESS HALL is also air conditioned and capable of feeding 4600 recruits each meal. It has five dining rooms with a total seating capacity of 888 persons at one sitting.

The building which contains 51,500 square feet has two dishwashing rooms; four main serving lines; complete meat and vegetable storage and preparation areas; storage rooms for dry provisions, bread and dairy products; and a bakery. The bakery is equipped with both a continuous dough machine and a doughnut machine. The dough machine is capable of producing 300 pounds of white bread dough per hour or 200 pounds of sweet dough per hour. The doughnut machine is capable of producing 200 dozen doughnuts per hour.

THE DRILL FIELD encompasses an area of 67,000 square yards. One-half of the drill area is paved and the other half is grass. The water tank has a 400,000 gallon capacity.

On September 5, 1940, the Army Air Corps arrived at Orlando Air Base to set up a training program that eventually produced 5,000 tactical fighter pilots.

The Army Air Force School of Applied Tactics moved here in November 1942 to meet the ever increasing demand of training personnel to use new equipment and to improve battle tactics.

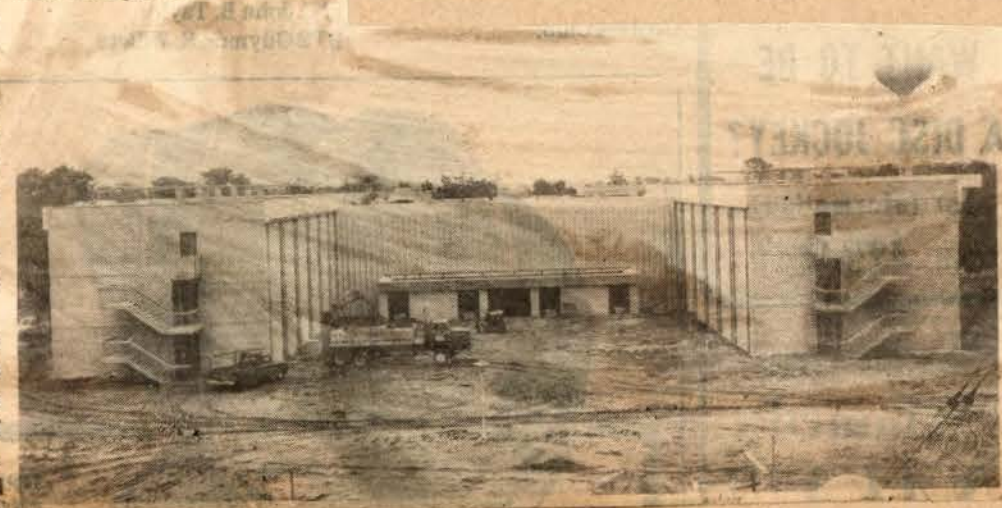

Following the hectic period of World War II, the base served as a separation center for thousands of returning military personnel. Orlando Air Base remained on a standby basis until 1951 when it was reactivated and continued to be utilized as a training site, this time for Aviation Engineers.

Other Air Force units arrived and the Military Airlift Command (MAC) received full jurisdiction of the base in 1953 and provided logistical support to military units at Orlando from that period until today.

Among the many units housed here, over the period of years, has included the famous "Flying Tigers," Aerospace Audio-Visual Service; Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service; 11th Tactical Missile Squadron; and the MAC Non Commissioned Officer's Academy.

The Air Force 1365th Photo Squadron will remain at the Naval Training Center until July 1969. The Defense Contract Administration will also remain here for an indefinite period.

COMMISSIONING

PRINCIPAL SPEAKER — The Honorable
Charles F. Baird
Under Secretary of the Navy

Naval Training Center, Orlando, was formally commissioned Monday, July 1 under warm and sunny Central Florida skies.

The day's events started at 8:30 a.m. when Under Secretary of the Navy, The Honorable Charles F. Baird, assisted Nova Ramsey, Miss Orange Juice Break, in christening the Naval Training Center by breaking a container of Florida orange juice on the sign at the entrance to the Main Gate.

Following this ceremony the members of the press proceeded to the Officer's Club where the Honorable Mr. Baird conducted a 9:00 a.m. press conference.

Meanwhile, approximately 2,000 guests were arriving at the Recruit Training area to witness the inauguration of the Navy's most modern training facilities.

Appropriate music for the occasion started at 9:15 at the ceremony site and was provided by the Sixth Naval District Band on hand for the formalities from Charleston.

The honored guests arrived by 10:00 a.m. and were greeted with arrival honors. Midway through the ceremonies Under Secretary Baird received full honors which included a 17-gun salute.

When Captain Enders P. Huey, Commander, Naval

At that moment, the Naval Training Center, Orlando, was on its way.

In addition to the Naval Training Center, the Recruit Training Command, Naval Hospital, and the Navy Finance Office were commissioned. This day also marked a shift in command for the Naval Training Device Center from the Chief of Naval Research to the Chief of Naval Materiel.

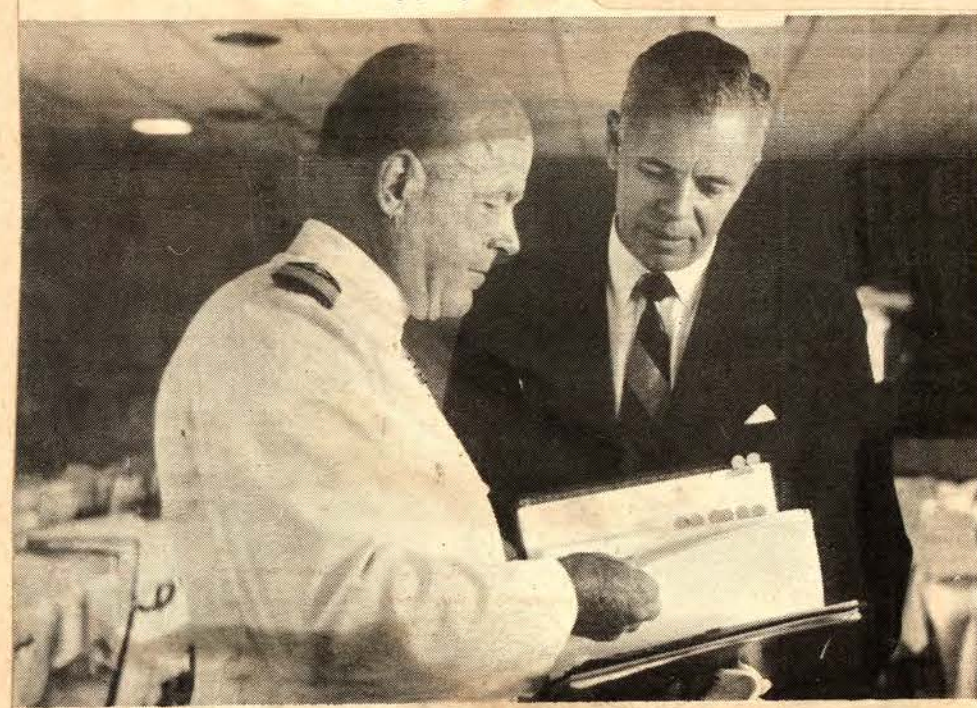

Following the reading of the official orders, the participants in the ceremony and the guests went on an escorted tour of the training building and the recruit barracks.

Receptions at both the Officers Club and the SPO Club followed the formal ceremonies.

Military and Civilian Dignitaries Arrive for Commissioning

Military and civilian dignitaries have been arriving in Orlando during the past few days to participate in today's formal ceremonies that commission the Navy's most modern Naval Training Center.

The formalities include the commissioning of the Naval Training Center, the Recruit Training Command, the Naval Hospital, and the Navy Finance Office. Additionally, command of the Naval Training Device Center will be shifted to the Chief of Naval Materiel from the Chief of Naval Research.

Naval Training Center, Orlando has the mission, "to provide basic indoctrination for enlisted personnel and primary, advanced, and specialized training for officer and enlisted personnel of the Regular Navy and the Naval Reserve."

The Navy has long needed a third Naval Training Center with Recruit Training facilities.

An important reason for establishing the Center here is that Orlando is close to many of the population centers of the eastern and southeastern sectors of the United States.

Also, a third Naval Training Center will enable the Navy to place itself in a better military posture for rapid expansion when needed in time of national emergency.

Initially, the capacity of the Recruit Training Command will be 3,200 recruits and upon completion of the planned construction of the planned construction 8,000 recruits will be accommodated.

Additionally, a Service School Command, that will provide advanced training in the various specialties practiced daily by the men in the fleet, will be added.

Both of these component commands will have a primary objective... to provide the Navy's operational forces with basically trained personnel.

The Chief, Bureau of Naval Personnel will be among the high-ranking dignitaries participating in the commissioning ceremonies here today.

Vice Admiral Charles K. Duncan, USN, will introduce the main speaker at the formal ceremonies, Under Secretary of the Navy, Charles F. Baird.

Admiral Duncan graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy and was commissioned Ensign on June 1, 1933. He then joined the cruiser USS Salt Lake City in the Pacific and served in her five years in all departments. He received a Letter of Commendation as Turret Officer for attaining the highest score in the Scouting Force for the year.

In the summer of 1938, he reported on board the destroyer Schenck in the Atlantic Fleet as Engineering Officer. From Schenck, he was assigned as Flag Lieutenant and Force Personnel Officer to Commander, Destroyers, Atlantic Fleet, followed by duty as Flag Lieutenant to Commander, Service Force, Atlantic Fleet.

In August 1942, he assumed command of the destroyer Wilson. Under his command, the Wilson, (See DUNCAN P-3)

operating with Task Force 38, became a part of the screen for a group of LSTs and LCIs in the occupation of Vella Lavella. She operated with Task Group 50.3 for the carrier strike on Rabaul and participated in the battle of November 11, 1943. She provided air, surface, and anti-submarine protection to the units defending Makin and Tarawa Islands, after which she participated in the strike on Kwajalein and the Marshall Islands operations, and the strikes on Saipan and Tinian.

For his services as Commanding Officer of the USS Wilson during the air attacks on Rabaul he received a Letter of Commendation from Commander, South Pacific. A second Letter of Commendation was received from the Commander in Chief, Pacific for services as Commanding Officer of the USS Wilson from January 25 to February 27, 1944, in areas of the Marshall Islands, Truk, Tinian, and Saipan. Both Commendation Ribbons carry the Combat "V".

In the spring of 1944, he was assigned to his first shore duty in the Bureau of Naval Personnel as Assistant Director and later Director of Naval Officer Procurement, where he served two years. As director of Officer Procurement, he was charged with all direct appointments from civilian life and for procurement of all officer candidates. Over one hundred thousand officers were commissioned in the Navy during this period.

At the latter period of his tour in the Bureau of Naval Personnel, he served as a member of the "Holloway Board". This board was established in September 1945 by the Secretary of the Navy to study the Form, System, and Method of Education of Naval Officers of the Post War United States Navy. The recommendations of this Board, approved by the Secretary of the Navy, resulted in far reaching programs in the Navy, including the NROTC Program as it is today, the "Holloway Plan".

He was Executive Officer of the fast battleship Wisconsin from June 1946 until January of 1948. On completion of the Armed Forces Staff College course in July 1948, he served for three years in the Plans Division, Staff of Commander in Chief, Atlantic Fleet.

In October 1951, he reported as Commander, Destroyer Division 62. In the spring of 1952, he was transferred to the newly-formed International Staff of the Supreme Allied Commander, Atlantic, the NATO Sea Command, and was assigned as the U. S. Naval Officer in the Policy and Plans Section of this Staff.

When detached in the summer of 1953, he became Administrative Aide to the Chief of Naval Personnel, Navy Department. He reported in August 1955 as Commanding Officer of the USS Chilton (APA-38) of the Atlantic Fleet. During this period of command, Chilton won the Battle Readiness Plaque. In November 1956, he became Assistant Chief of Staff (Operations) to Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet.

After his selection to the rank of Rear Admiral in July 1958, he reported the next month as Commander, Amphibious Group One, in the Amphibious Force, Pacific. Amphibious Group One participated in four large amphibious exercises during the year.

On August 28, 1959, he was relieved as Commander, Amphibious Group One and assumed command of the Amphibious Training Command, Pacific Fleet.

He was Commander, Naval Base, Subic Bay, Luzon, Republic of the Philippines from January 1961 until April 1962, when he became Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Plans, Bureau of Naval Personnel, Navy Department.

From March 1964 to June 1965, he was Commander Cruiser-Destroyer Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, after which he commanded the Amphibious Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet. He was promoted to the rank of Vice Admiral on June 1, 1965.

"For exceptionally meritorious service..." in the latter assignment, he was awarded the Legion of Merit.

In May 1967, he became Commander Second Fleet and on April 5, 1968 assumed the duties of Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Manpower and Naval Reserve) and Chief of Naval Personnel, Navy Department.

Admiral Duncan's "home town" is 125 Cherokee Park, Lexington, Kentucky. He is married to the former Miss Sheila Taylor of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and has two children, Bruce and Anne.

Orlando Air Force Base officially becomes Orlando Naval Training Center Monday, ending 28 years of Air Force occupation at the sprawling reservation.

Principal speaker at the 10 a. m. formal ceremonies will be Under Secretary of the Navy Charles F. Baird.

THE COMMISSIONING will include the Naval Training Center, Recruit Training Command, Naval Hospital and Navy Finance Office. Also, command of the Naval Training Device Center will be shifted from the offices of Chief of Naval Research to the Chief of Naval Materiel.

Capt. Enders P. Huey commands the overall center and Capt. Bernard W. Brender will head the Recruit Training Command.

THE CEREMONIES will mark the Navy's third Recruit Training Command. It has others at Great Lakes, Ill., and San Diego.

However, the Orlando base won't receive its first recruit for another three months. The first class is scheduled for graduation in mid-December, with graduation ceremonies scheduled at 10 a. m. every Friday from then on.

By 1972, recruits will arrive at the rate of 800 every week with an on-board count of about 8,000 recruits. The center's entire population eventually will reach more than 16,000.

BUT THEY WON'T all be with the Recruit Training Command. The Orlando center also will host the Naval Training Device Center, Naval Hospital, Navy Finance Office, Advanced Undersea Weapons School, branch office of the District Printing and Publications Office, an Air Force photo squadron and special communications unit and a branch office of the Defense Contract Agency.

Future plans call for a Service School Command which will provide the fleet with the highly skilled and technically trained Navy men needed to operate the sophisticated weapons and machinery of today's fleet.

PRIMARY function, however, is the Recruit Training Command. And scheduled for completion by September is a 3,200-man recruit camp.

The camp includes an 888-seat mess hall capable of feeding 4,600 recruits and staff in 90 minutes; a three-story training building with 26 classrooms, and four 800-man barracks.

Other facilities to be constructed include a training ship mock-up, community center and a gymnasium-field house.

ACTUALLY, the technical Air Force-to-Navy changeover will take place Sunday when military brass from both services sign official papers. The signing will take place between Capt. Huey and Air Force Col. Willard W. Wilson in the outgoing Air Force base commander's office.

Other participants in the signing will be CWO Norman Glass, Air Force civil engineering officer; Robert Boyette, Air Force property accountable officer, and Lt. Cmdr. Joseph Laufersweiler, public works officer.

MONDAY'S ceremonies will take place on the balcony of the newly-constructed Recruit Training Building.

The Sixth Naval District Band will provide music starting at 9:15 a. m. Arrival honors for Baird are scheduled for 9:55, and the commissioning ceremonies are at 10.

At 10:40 a. m., the Navy will offer refreshments and a tour of the newly-constructed training facilities. The ceremonies will close with invitation-only receptions at the Officers Club and the Senior Petty Officers Club.

From: Commander, Naval Training Center
To: All Officers, Enlisted Personnel and Civilians on board the Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida 32813
Subj: Open Letter of Commendation

1. 1 July 1968 is the most important milestone in the establishment of the Naval Training Center, Orlando. This is a date to which we have all looked forward, and one which represents the culmination of a great effort by all concerned.
2. It is this effort of all concerned which I would like to commend at this time, for an establishment of the magnitude of the Naval Training Center is not something which just happens. Hard work, dedication, and sometimes a good deal of frustration was involved. However, all concerned have displayed the capability to overcome any obstacles encountered; and the effort of each individual is apparent.
3. Of course, the cooperation and friendly reception we have received from the Air Force personnel involved, as well as the citizens and officials in the Central Florida area, have made our tasks not only less difficult but also a pleasure. We are especially grateful for this. It's sure we all agree that a better place than Central Florida could not have been chosen for the nation's newest Naval Training Center.
4. Although 1 July represents an objective for which we have strived, and is a very tangible result of hard work by a lot of people, in many ways it is a beginning. A great deal of work remains to be accomplished, and it will be some time before we will be able to see the end result of our mission which is to train Navy recruits. The success which we mark on 1 July, however, presages continued successes in the future.

the Navy comes to Orlando . . . July 1, 1968

The U. S. Naval Training Center, Orlando, officially commissioned July 1, 1968, will become, according to Navy officials, "the Showcase of the Navy," when construction of the new training facilities are complete.

The transformation of Orlando, from Air Force to Navy, began with a government memorandum from the Secretary of Defense dated December 6, 1966 which authorized the Navy to establish its third Naval Training Center at this site.

At this time, the Secretary of the Navy announced, from the seat of government in Washington, that the city of Orlando had been chosen as the location of the Navy's newest, and most modern, training complex.

Orlando was chosen as the site of the Training Center after extensive study.

Some of the reasons for the selection of Orlando are the climate, transportation facilities, and the availability of Orlando Air Force Base under the Department of Defense Base Closure Program.

Officially opened on December 1, 1940, by the Army Air Force the base became the center of the Interceptor Command School.

In November 1942, the Army Air Force, School of Applied Tactics moved here to meet the ever increasing demand of training personnel to use new equipment and improving battle tactics.

Following the hectic period of World War II, the base served as a separation center for thousands of returning military personnel.

The base remained on a stand-by basis until 1951 when it was reactivated and continued as a training site for Aviation Engineers.

Other Air Force units arrived and the Military Airlift Command (MAC) received full jurisdiction of the base in 1953 and provided logistical support to military units at Orlando from that period until the present time.

Among the many units housed here, over the period of years, has included the famous "Flying Tigers"; Aerospace Audio-Visual Service; Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service; 11th Tactical Missile Squadron; and the MAC Non-Commissioned Officers' Academy.

The Navy maintains two other Training Centers, one at Great Lakes, Illinois, and the other at San Diego, California. These Centers are overburdened with the task of training and indoctrinating approximately 130,000 young men into the Navy "way of life" each year.

The Naval Training Center, Orlando, will provide basic indoctrination in the form of recruit training. The Recruit Training Command enables a smooth transition from civilian to Navy life for the newly inducted young men.

Tenant units, that will be hosted by the Naval Training Center, are the Naval Training Device Center, Naval Hospital, and the Advanced Undersea Weapons School.

Support and Services to the units at the Naval Training Center will be provided by the Navy Finance Office, Navy Exchange, and the Commissary Store.

Some Air Force units will continue to reside at the Naval Training Center for periods up to 1969. These are: 1365 Photo Squadron; and the Special Communications Unit.

The Defense Contract Administration will remain at the Naval Training Center for an indefinite period.

The site of the Naval Training Center has been used for training military men for the past 28 years.

From pilots of the Army Air Corps to Air Force Missiles, up to present-day torpedomen, the undersea warfare technicians of our Ballistic Missile Submarines, have all been . . . "trained in Orlando."

u.s. naval hospital, orlando . . .

Captain William Glenn Lawson (Medical Corps), USN, commanding officer, Naval Hospital, Orlando, arrived here following a tour of duty as Commanding Officer of the U. S. Naval Hospital, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with additional duty as Base Medical Officer on the staff of Commander, U. S. Naval Base, Guantanamo Bay.

Following his schooling at the University of Texas, in the field of medicine, Doctor Lawson assumed private practice and entered the Navy on December 8, 1942. In 1943 he completed training at the Deep Sea Diving School at the Naval Gun Factory, Washington, D. C. which was followed by tours of duty at the Submarine Repair Unit, Destroyer Base, San Diego; Submarine Base, Pearl Harbor; Submarine Base, Midway; Submarine Force, Pacific; and at the Naval Hospital, Mare Island, California.

Captain Lawson is a Diplomate of the American Board of Dermatology, a Fellow of the American Academy of Dermatology and a member of the American Medical Association, Society of Tropical Dermatology, Society of Military Dermatologists, and the Association of Military Surgeons.

Doctor Lawson is entitled to wear the following medals: American Defense, American Theater, Asiatic-Pacific Theater, World War II Victory, and the National Defense Service.

The Naval Hospital, located on Lakeview Drive along the Northeastern shore of Lake Baldwin, adjacent to the Naval Training Center, is currently a 175-bed facility.

A combined medical and dental staff of 607 will support the Naval Training Center and other military installations in the Central Florida region.

A modern "high rise" replacement hospital is planned for the future Naval Hospital, Orlando. This new facility will provide the most modern and complete medical care to the ever increasing active duty and retired military population in this, and surrounding communities.

advanced undersea weapons school

The Advanced Undersea Weapons School (AUWS), Orlando, is currently a detachment of the school at the U. S. Naval Base, Key West, Florida, and will gradually grow in size and importance.

The Orlando detachment is scheduled to become the main school in 1970 when the facility at Key West will close its doors.

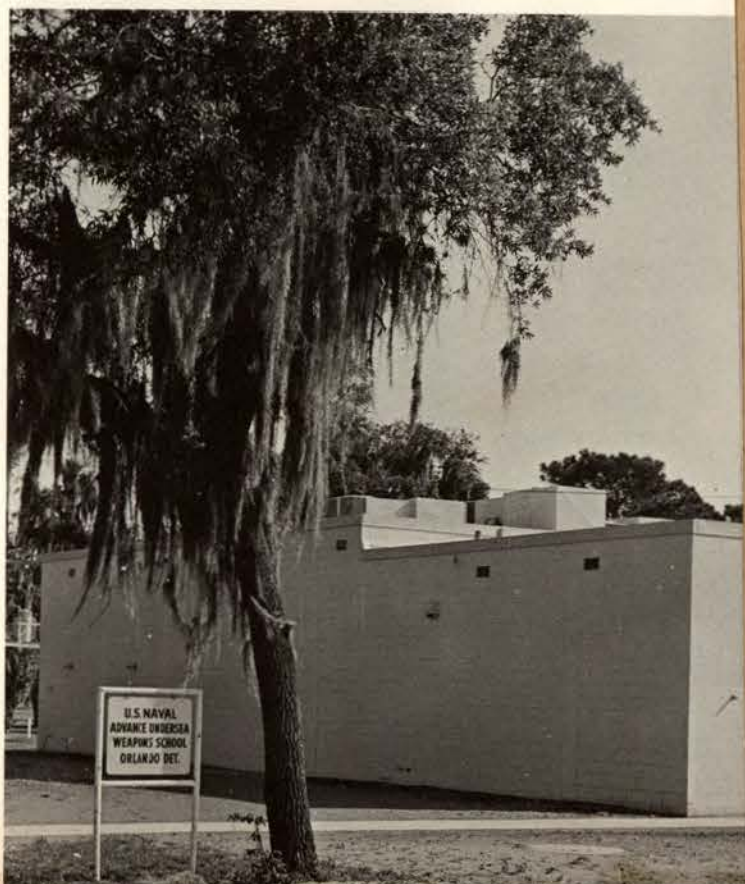

Currently, the Orlando detachment is housed in a new, light-colored brick, structure located on 6,100 square feet of real estate at the Naval Training Center.

When the school is complete, its area will total 109,000 square feet with this modern facility housing classrooms, laboratories, and an auditorium to be used for indoctrination and classroom lectures.

The instructors, all of the Torpedoman rate, conduct one 53-week course and a 16-week course dealing strictly with underwater weaponry. They are also scheduled to train 32 Civil Service technicians this year.

The AUWS reached a major milestone in April, this year, when they graduated the first class of nine men whose curriculum dealt with underwater circuitry. These students then passed on to the advanced course in underwater weapons.

The Advanced Undersea Weapons School, Orlando, was established to provide the utmost in modern training facilities and knowledge for Navy Torpedomen, this generation's undersea warfare technicians.

The Recruit Training Command, located aboard Naval Training Center, Orlando, presently consists of one 3,200-man recruit camp scheduled to be completed in September 1968.

The camp includes a 888-seat mess hall capable of feeding 4,600 recruits and the staff in 90 minutes, a three-story training building with a closed circuit television studio, 26 classrooms, and four 800-man barracks, complete with recreational facilities.

All buildings are designed for the Florida climate with air conditioning and tile floors throughout. Building exteriors are of buff bricks sandwiched between white mortar and encased in a border of white concrete with sun-reflecting quartz chips.

Ultra-modern design and functional arrangement of the buildings has been stressed giving the training complex a "campus-like" atmosphere.

A 249-foot, landlocked training ship, built on the site, and scaled to two-thirds the size of a Destroyer Escort, will be at the end of the 12-acre drill field.

The various buildings will be connected by 20-foot wide concrete walks, enabling the recruits to march eight abreast as they go from class to class.

Utility lines, poles, and overhead pipes have been eliminated and the trees and foliage have been preserved throughout the 100-acre site lending to the overall beauty of the Naval Training Center.

The first segment of the 11-week training cycle will begin in October when the first class of 300 recruits arrive.

After the completion of the fifth barracks next year, the recruit population will increase to approximately 4,000 plus a staff of 300.

Five additional barracks, identical to the first five and sharing the administration building and reception facilities, will be completed by 1972.

By that time, recruits will arrive at the rate of 800 per week with an on-board count of about 8,000 recruits.

Recruit graduation ceremonies will be held each Friday at 10 a.m.

Capt. Enders P. Huey, commander of the Navy Training Center, is used to making decisions "real quick and real right."

The decisions now, however, don't have to come as fast as they did during World War II when Huey was gunnery and torpedo officer aboard a submarine operating in Japanese-controlled waters.

HUEY, NOW 50, was awarded the Silver Star during that war for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity" when his quick and correct decisions

HE'S COMMANDED the USS Hackleback, USS Skate, USS Chopper and the USS Tang.

On board the USS Tang, and under Huey's command was Capt. William Anderson. Anderson, now a Tennessee Congressman, has the distinction of being the man who commanded the nuclear powered submarine Nautilus as they sailed under the North Pole in 1958.

HUEY, WHO once commanded Submarine Flotilla Seven, was officer-in-charge of the U.S. Naval Submarine School in New London, Conn. in 1960.

The Cisco, Tex. native was director of Navy Recruiting until March 1967 when he was assigned to the assistant secretary of defense as director of individual training.

HIS COMMAND at Orlando began on Jan. 5, since then "there has been a smooth transition created by the willingness of Air Force civilian employees willing to become a part of the Navy," Huey said.

THE HUEYS — Mrs. Jane Pickard Huey, formerly of Abilene, Tex., children: James Kade, 23, Jan. 23, and Ruth, 18 — will live at the base.

Capt. Huey's real job — "taking all American youth and turning them into the finest sailors in the world" — will begin on July 1, when the Navy Training Center is officially commissioned.

Capt. Huey Heads NTC Orlando

Captain Enders P. Huey, USN, graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, in 1941. Throughout his Navy service, submarines, education, training, and executive management have figured prominently.

His first sea duty, as Engineering and Gunnery Officer on the cruiser USS Richmond, initiated him into the fleet and also combat. As an Ensign, Captain Huey was aboard this cruiser when Pearl Harbor was bombed by the Japanese on December 7 and continued to serve on the Richmond until September 1942.

Following this assignment, he attended Submarine School, New London, Connecticut, and joined the USS Permit as Gunnery Officer, rising through the ranks to become the submarine's Executive Officer.

In November 1944, he reported to the submarine USS Mapiro to fit her out for duty and became the vessel's Executive Officer upon her commissioning in April 1945.

Captain Huey assumed command of the submarine USS Hackleback in January 1946, and from March to December of that year commanded the USS Skate, followed by a tour as Executive Officer of the USS Sea Fox in 1947.

The veteran submarine officer proceeded to the nation's capital to serve in the Office of Naval Research and returned to sea to serve as Commanding Officer of the USS Chopper.

In October 1951, he commissioned the second—

USS Tang, named after the vessel bearing the same name which was lost in Pacific waters in 1943 after a brief, but very productive, wartime career.

Captain Huey returned to Washington in 1953 to a tour of duty as a Detailer of Junior Officers in the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

In March 1956, he reported as Operations Officer on the staff of Commander Submarine Squadron Two and served in that capacity until August 1957 when he became Division Commander, Submarine Division 101.

Captain Huey proceeded to the Naval War College, Newport, Rhode Island, in June 1958, and became a student for a short period prior to becoming the Force Tactical and Training Officer on the staff of Commander Submarine Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet. He remained in this position until June 1960 when he became Officer-in-Charge of the U. S. Naval Submarine School, New London.

Captain Huey received the Silver Star Medal during World War II... "for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as Gunnery and Torpedo Officer of a United States Submarine during a war patrol in Japanese-controlled waters... which resulted in the sinking of three enemy ships totalling over 27,500 tons with the remarkable record of eighty-nine percent hits for all torpedoes fired..."

His other decorations and awards include the Navy Unit Commendation awarded the USS Permit for her Tenth War Patrol, American Defense Service Medal, American Campaign Medal, Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with Operations Stars, World War II Victory Medal, and the National Defense Service Medal.

Captain Huey is married to the former Jane Pickard of Abilene, Texas. They have three children.

Captain Brender at Helm of Recruit Training Command

Captain Bernard W. Brender, USN, former Head of Enlisted Training for the Bureau of Naval Personnel, and more recently the Chief Staff Officer, Fleet Air Wing-Three at the Naval Air Station, Brunswick, Maine is the first commanding officer of the Navy's third, and most modern, Recruit Training Command.

The Navy Captain has had an extensive background in personnel and administration, being a former Chief Yeoman, as well as now being an active naval aviator with over 20-years of flying experience.

He enlisted in the Navy in Lima, Ohio in September 1939 as a seaman recruit, completed recruit training at Norfolk, Virginia and reported aboard the battleship Oklahoma at Long Beach, California for his first duty.

Captain Brender served aboard the Oklahoma until he had to abandon the ship when she sank during the attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

While recovering from minor wounds suffered during the attack, he served as Pacific Fleet Salvage Coordinator for Personal Effects, while a second class yeoman, and was commended for his handling the return of personal effects to the next of kin of more than 2000 Pearl Harbor fatalities.

After a year on the island of Maui, he applied for, and was selected, for flight training as an aviation cadet.

Upon completion of flight training at Corpus Christi, Texas and commissioning as Ensign in 1944, he reported directly to the heavy cruiser USS San Francisco for flying duties.

Captain Brender served aboard the San Francisco with distinction in the South Pacific and China seas until the ship's return to the United States in January 1946.

He completed more than 50 combat missions, was shot down and wounded over Okinawa and Iwo Jima, participated in seven major campaigns and in the occupation of Korea and China after World War Two ended.

Following this period, he left the San Francisco as a Lieutenant (junior grade) and senior aviator, reporting to Corpus Christi as a flight instructor and later personnel officer.

In April 1948, he reported to Helicopter Squadron-Two at Lakehurst, New Jersey for helicopter pilot training, becoming one of the Navy's first helicopter pilots.

During his three-year tour in helicopters, he served aboard almost every carrier, battleship, and cruiser in the Atlantic Fleet as senior helicopter pilot.

During this period he flew helos in the Arctic, Atlantic, and Mediterranean areas and was commended for rescuing over a dozen Navy fliers from a possible watery grave.

In 1953, Captain Brender attended the General Line School, Monterey, California, completing the course with an "A" average.

His next tour of duty was with Tactical Air Control Squadron-21 based at Norfolk, Virginia as Operations Officer for Helicopters on the Staff of the Commander Amphibious Forces, U. S. Atlantic Fleet. During this tour he received a number of commendations while serving as Tactical Air Commander on the Staff of the Commander Sixth Fleet for planning and directing amphibious air support during various exercises of France, Italy, Greece and Turkey.

Captain Brender then qualified as an anti-submarine warfare pilot and patrol plane commander while flying with Patrol Squadron-49 out of Bermuda.

From 1958 to 1960, he attended Ohio State University as a student in the Navy's College Training Program. He majored in Political Science and International Relations, graduating Cum Laude and number two in the Ohio State graduating class.

He was promoted to the rank of Commander in 1959.

The veteran aviator then reported to San Diego, California as Executive Officer of Patrol Squadron-42, and a year later assumed command of the squadron in 1961.

During his tour as Commanding Officer, he won the Pacific Air Battle Efficiency Award and the Isbell Anti-Submarine Warfare Award.

He then reported aboard the aircraft carrier USS Lake Champlain as Navigator and was on the Staff of Commander Carrier Division-20 during the Cuban Crisis of 1962.

Captain Brender reported to the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Washington, D.C. in May 1963 as Head of Enlisted Training. During the latter part of his tour there he was Head of Recruit, Engineering and Non-Technical Training Branch.

He received his promotion to the rank of Captain August 1, 1965.

During his three-year tour of duty in the Bureau of Naval Personnel, he served as a member of the original Navy board that selected Orlando as the site for the Naval Training Center and Recruit Training Command and assisted in the preparation of necessary material for final approval of the project by the Department of Defense and the U.S. Congress.

Captain Brender, his wife Ruth, and two sons, Gary, aged 16, and Keith, aged 8, reside on board the Naval Training Center. A third son, Mark, aged 19, is attending Miami University.

Captain Brender's combat awards include two Distinguished Flying Crosses, five Air Medals, two Purple Hearts, the Navy Commendation, China Service Medal, Navy Occupation, Philippine Presidential Citation and Liberation, Asiatic-Pacific Ribbon with seven battle stars, and the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal.

Brender Heads Up Boot Camp

From their first Navy haircut to their last parade 10 weeks later, Captain Bernard W. Brender will be mother, brother and father confessor to trainees at the Navy Recruit Training Center.

"I EXPECT it's going to be real challenging," the 47-year-old Navy career officer said.

Brender will become the first aviation officer in the Navy's history to head up a boot camp—"Don't call it that, we prefer to call it a recruit camp since we don't boot them around anymore."

HE'S A NATIVE of New York, N.Y., married, father of three boys and was an enlisted man for five years before becoming an officer in 1944.

Brender joined the Navy to get "away from the depression" and later went to flight school. He was aboard the USS Oklahoma when she was bombed in Pearl Harbor and escaped through a port hole before the ship sank.

SHOT DOWN twice during combat missions in World War II, Brender has two Purple Hearts among his many other medals and decorations.

Brender's first act when recruits arrive at the training center will be to "send a two-page letter to the parent or guardian of each boy. We want them to know what their son will be doing here in Orlando," he said.

BRENDER WILL watch 50 or 60 recruits come into the center each day beginning Oct. 1. After 18 months the number of recruits streaming into the center will be 70 every day. Some 30 months later, Brender estimates 100 will arrive and depart daily.

Captain Jack N. Miller, USN
Commanding Officer, Naval Training Device Center

Device Center, Orlando, Florida on December 7, 1967.

Training Device Center At Orlando Since 1967

The Naval Training Device Center, which has been in existence for more than 25 years, is responsible for the research, development, production, maintenance, and modification of air, sea, subsurface, land, and space trainers applicable to all types of military situations. The Center provides equipment to improve the effectiveness of training, primarily in the Navy, but also in the other services and in other Government agencies.

Under the command of the Chief of Naval Research since 1946, the Center transferred to the Chief of Naval Material in July 1968.

Located at Sands Point near Port Washington, Long Island, for 20 years, as well as at two additional locations on Long Island and at Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania, the Center completed a three-stage move to Orlando, Florida, in July 1967. An authorized personnel strength of approximately 1,300 persons, including 50 military, are assigned to the headquarters in Orlando and to four regional and seven area offices. Regional offices are located at Norfolk, Pensacola, San Diego, and Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii.

The Center's mission is to contribute to the operational readiness of the fleet by developing, procuring, and delivering training devices.

The Center is the only activity in Government that is concerned exclusively with the unique field of simulation as applied to training equipment of various types. These devices vary in design and use from the very simple to the very complex, and from those intended for mass training to those intended for individual training. In addition to the fleet tactical trainers, they include jet aircraft and submarine simulators, space environment and weapon system trainers, and innumerable radar, sonar, and electronic devices. This training equipment not only contributes to the combat readiness of the Armed Forces but also has proved cost effective in the modern world of complex military equipment and systems.

NAVY CHANGE — A "sign of the times" at Orlando Air Force Base is prepared by George Wilson, Navy Exchange sign painter, when the Navy assumed operation of the facility. The Navy becomes more evident, daily, as Navy men arrive to prepare for the commissioning of Naval Training Center, Orlando, scheduled for July 1.

Many OAFB Facilities Already In Navy Hands

The official date of the Navy takeover of Orlando AFB is not until July 1 but already many activities are being placed under the operation of the new tenants.

And not everyone, particularly the numerous retired personnel in the area, are happy with the new setup. One chief gripe from the former servicemen is that cigarettes have been removed from the commissary now that it is under Navy operation.

A spokesman for the Naval Training Center said this was because the Navy uses much more of its funds from the Navy Exchange to finance its Special Service facilities such as theater, boat dock, and library.

By moving the cigarettes from the commissary, where they sold at $1.85 a carton and limiting sales to the Navy Exchange, where they sell for $2.10, more income is derived for Special Services.

Another switch which has caused some confusion for retirees is at the Navy Exchange Service Station where the Navy dropped the contract for gas from Gulf Oil and installed Texaco tanks.

This meant that many patrons with Gulf Credit cards can't make charges until they can get Texaco credit cards.

Operation of the mess has also been turned over to the Navy, and Air Force personnel, still at the base, got a shock when they were served typical Navy fare for breakfast... baked beans and cornbread.

Clubs for Officers and NCOs will be turned over to the Navy on May 26 and officials at the center said there were no plans to open facilities for package sale of alcoholic beverages at the clubs. The Air Force did not have such a facility at OAFB.

One operation which has not been turned over to the Navy as yet is security and police duties. Navy officials said that civilian guards would be used on the base beginning July 1 until a Marine Detachment could be assigned.

Security is expected to be tightened up when the Navy takes over on July 1 but officials would make no comment except to state that the subject is under study. At the present time an "open gate" policy exists at the air base.

Officials said the early take over of some facilities by the Navy was to create an orderly flow of transfer of responsibility and that by July 1 the operation transfer would be virtually completed.

The "welcome, aboard" was warm and friendly, Orlando-style, Tuesday, when Henri Guertin and the executive staff of Jordan Marsh entertained wives of commissioned officers from the Naval Training Center.

The informal coffee held in the Jordan Marsh Auditorium was a gracious "welcome to the City Beautiful" and a "glad you've come to the heart of living in this United States" from Guertin and Jordan Marsh.

It gave many of the women, newly-arrived in Orlando, a chance to get acquainted. And in one instance, it provided a surprise reunion for two Navy wives.

It was eight years ago, during their husband's tours of duty in Morocco, that Mrs. Philip Scanlan and Mrs. J. E. Coates had last seen each other.

In responding to the hosts words of welcome, Mrs. E. P. Huey said... "if everyone is this friendly we may all just stay down here."

We hope so.

Hello,

Dear Sir -

I would like to bring to your attention the personnel of Ward 4, Naval Hospital, U.T.C., Orlando.

My father, Mr. W.F. Parrish, is a retired military man who currently resides in Winter Park, Fla. My mother, Mrs. M.C. Parrish, was a patient in Ward 4 from Dec. 29 to Jan. 14. Mrs. Parrish was seriously ill with cancer.

During the time of my mother's stay in ward 4 I had occasion to visit with her every day. I left my family, my job, and my home and travelled three thousand miles from California to be with her during this critical time in her life.

On behalf of our entire family, I would like to commend the personnel of Ward 4 for their cooperation, kindness, and concern toward all of us. The doctors, Orlando Air Force Base will become Navy Training Center, Orlando, officially, in ceremonies on July 1.

Main unit on the Navy base will be the Recruit Training Command, headed by Capt. Bernard W. Brender.

His command will consist of a 3,200-man boot camp, the third in the nation, scheduled for completion in September.

THIS CAMP includes an 888-seat mess hall capable of feeding 4,600 recruits and the staff, in 90 minutes; a three-story training building with 26 classrooms, and four 800-man barracks. Additional facilities to be constructed include a training ship mock-up, community center and a gymnasium-fieldhouse.

The first segment of the 11-week training cycle will begin in October when the initial input of recruits arrive.

After completion of the fifth barracks next year, the recruit population will be 4,000, with a staff of 400.

Five additional barracks, identical to the first five, and sharing the administration building and reception facilities, will be completed by 1972.

BY THAT time recruits will arrive at the rate of 800 per week with an on-board count of 8,000 recruits. When all construction is completed, the Naval Training Center will have a total population in excess of 16,000 personnel.

Capt. Enders P. Huey commands Naval Training Center, Orlando, which, in addition to the Recruit Training Command, will host Naval Training Device Center, naval hospital, Navy finance office, Advanced Undersea Weapons School, a branch office of the District Printing and Publications Office, an Air Force photo squadron and special communications unit, plus a branch office of the Defense Contract Agency.

Future plans call for a Service School Command for advanced training in technical skills.

Captain Lawson -- Captain Huey -- Captain Young -- Captain Pariser
-- Captain Brender -- Captain Simms -- Commander Yankoski -- Commander Preston -- Commander Kirkhorn -- Fellow Medical Service Corps Officers -- and Guests.

It is a real pleasure for me to welcome each one of you to the First Anniversary of the Navy Medical Service Corps in Orlando.
This is the 21st Anniversary of the Medical Service Corps of the Navy -- and with this birthday, we can truly say that our Corps has become of age.

A new high of 1669 officers in the active duty strength of the Navy Medical Service Corps was reached at the start of this fiscal year as compared to 1535 last year and 1468 the previous year.

As you know, the allowance of Medical Service Corps officers for the Naval Hospital and the Naval Training Center Orlando is 18, of which 14 are already on board. I can assure you that all of us are pleased to be here as a part of the Medical Department team and enjoy with you the action center of Orlando.

I understand that some 180 Medical Service Corps officers are now retired in Florida, of which 24 reside in the Orlando area. Thirteen of these officers and their wives are here this evening to celebrate this birthday. They have traveled far -- some all the way from Key West -- to make the celebration a success.

On behalf of all the Medical Service Corps officers, active and retired, we want you to know how glad we are to have you and your families celebrate with us.

Now I would like to share with you -- three birthday messages received this week.

- (1) Read Surgeon General of the Navy greetings.
- (2) Read Chief of Medical Service Corps greetings.
- (3) Read CO Naval Hospital Orlando greetings.

We are most appreciative of each one of these letters of congratulations and birthday wishes. We would especially like to express our appreciation for the exceptionally warm greetings from Captain Lawson, our Commanding Officer.

Now -- to perform the operation of cutting the MSC birthday cake, we will have Captain E. W. White MSC USN Retired and LTJG H. D.
Gray MSC USNR to make the incision. Thank you very much.

NAVAL TRAINING CENTER VETERINARY SERVICES

THE SURPRISE — At the unexpected "tingle".

Webster's dictionary defines veterinarian as, "one qualified and duly authorized to treat diseases of animals." So it would seem that the Naval Training Center Veterinary Clinic would have but one job on it's hands — the treating of sick animals. On closer examination it can be found that besides administering rabie and distemper shots, and providing for emergency cases, the Veterinary Services also inspects food received for the Commissary Store, General Mess, Clubs, Exchange Cafeteria and other on-station food service establishments. In addition to this the Veterinary Service Office also conducts sanitary inspection of approximately 70 food establishments in and around the Central Florida area which are used in the procurement of subsistence for military installations.

With animal bite cases amounting to more than 100 per year, the Veterinary Clinic works closely with the local Health Department in order to suppress cases of rabies.

Owners of pets can safe-guard the health of the animal and themselves by having their dog or cat vaccinated at the Clinic. Rabie immunization should start when the animal is at three months of age and he should then be re-immunized annually thereafter.

The Naval Training Center Veterinary Clinic also supports the Civil Defense Shelter Program by providing periodic inspection of all supplies and water that will be used in time of an emergency.

The Clinic, which is located in building 2237, is open to military personnel on Thursday between the hours of 1300 and 1530 by appointment only. Appointments can be made on the preceeding Friday by calling 613 or 2193.

Two containers of his own antivenin were sped by Navy jet from the zoo to Maj. Herschel Flowers, struck on the right index finger, by the most dangerous snake in Central and South America, a fer-de-lance, Thursday while he was transferring it into a sack for transport to Ross Allen Reptile Institute in Ocala.

Maj. Flowers, who was due to leave for Vietnam Friday, was visiting his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Flowers, 3713 Sutton Drive, when the pit viper described by Allen as "the most dangerous snake in Central and South America" struck.

Maj. Flowers had brought 13 poisonous snakes with him from Costa Rica, where for three and a half years he researched snake antivenins for the Army and received the Legion of Merit, highest non-combat award, for his work.

In Daytona Beach another snake bite victim, 19-year-old Michael Walch of New Orleans, remained in poor condition after being bitten by a deadly Russell's viper last week.

The Ross Allen organization, aided by the Florida Highway Patrol, sped five packages of Wyeth Drug Co. antivenin to the Army veterinarian in the early hours of the day after an employee at the scene supplied his first two doses.

Airboats Replace Skiers On Center Lakes August 1968

The Navy has awarded a weed control contract in the amount of $36,608.00 to the Aqua Weed Control Corporation of Orlando.

The contract covers the application of 1200 gallons of diquat aquatic herbicide and 4800 pounds of copper sulfate to Lake Susannah and Lake Baldwin, both located within the confines of the Naval Training Center.

The program being initiated by the Navy is designed to give intermediate term control of elodea and an associated algae (both submerged aquatic vegetation) until a permanent means of control is found through State and Federal research which is now being conducted.

Dr. Robert Blackburn, USDA research botanist from the Plantation Experimental Station in South Florida has been retained by the Navy to coordinate and supervise the initial application of chemicals in addition to of safety.

Another advantage of this program is that the chemicals tend to disintegrate the undesirable underwater weeds and no big clean-up project will be necessary when the program is completed.

maintaining experimental test plots on the eastern shore of Lake Baldwin.

The chemicals are being distributed by air boat so as to minimize any stirring up of the chemicals in the water, and the personnel and residents of the new Training Center have been asked not to use the lakes for a period of ten days for the same reason. The contractors emphasized that fishing should improve with the eradication of the weeds and skiers and swimmers would be able to participate in their activities with a greater degree

Newly Constructed Recruit Buildings Accepted By Navy

Another milestone in the short but active history of the Naval Training Center Orlando was reached this week when the Navy accepted and occupied two of the new buildings which will soon be occupied by recruits.

The two buildings, which represent almost 2.6 million dollars are the Training building and the first of the four barracks scheduled for completion prior to October of this year.

Captain Enders P. Huey, Commander Naval Training

Center, and Captain Bernard W. Brender, Commander of the Recruit Training Center accepted the two buildings which had been completed on schedule. Both buildings are three stories high and completely air conditioned.

The Training Building contains twenty-six closed circuit TV fed classrooms, a closed circuit TV studio, a recruit technical library, training staff offices and staff and student lounges. It was designed by the firm of McElvey & Jennewein of Tampa, Florida and constructed by Frank J. Rooney Inc. of Orlando.

The recruit barracks, each of which will house twelve recruit companies has four open bay wings laid out around a central cove which contains showers, heads and clothes-scrubbing facilities as well as offices for the battalion staff.

The barracks was designed by the Midwest Division of the Naval Facilities Engineering Command and was constructed by A K W A - Downey Construction Company.

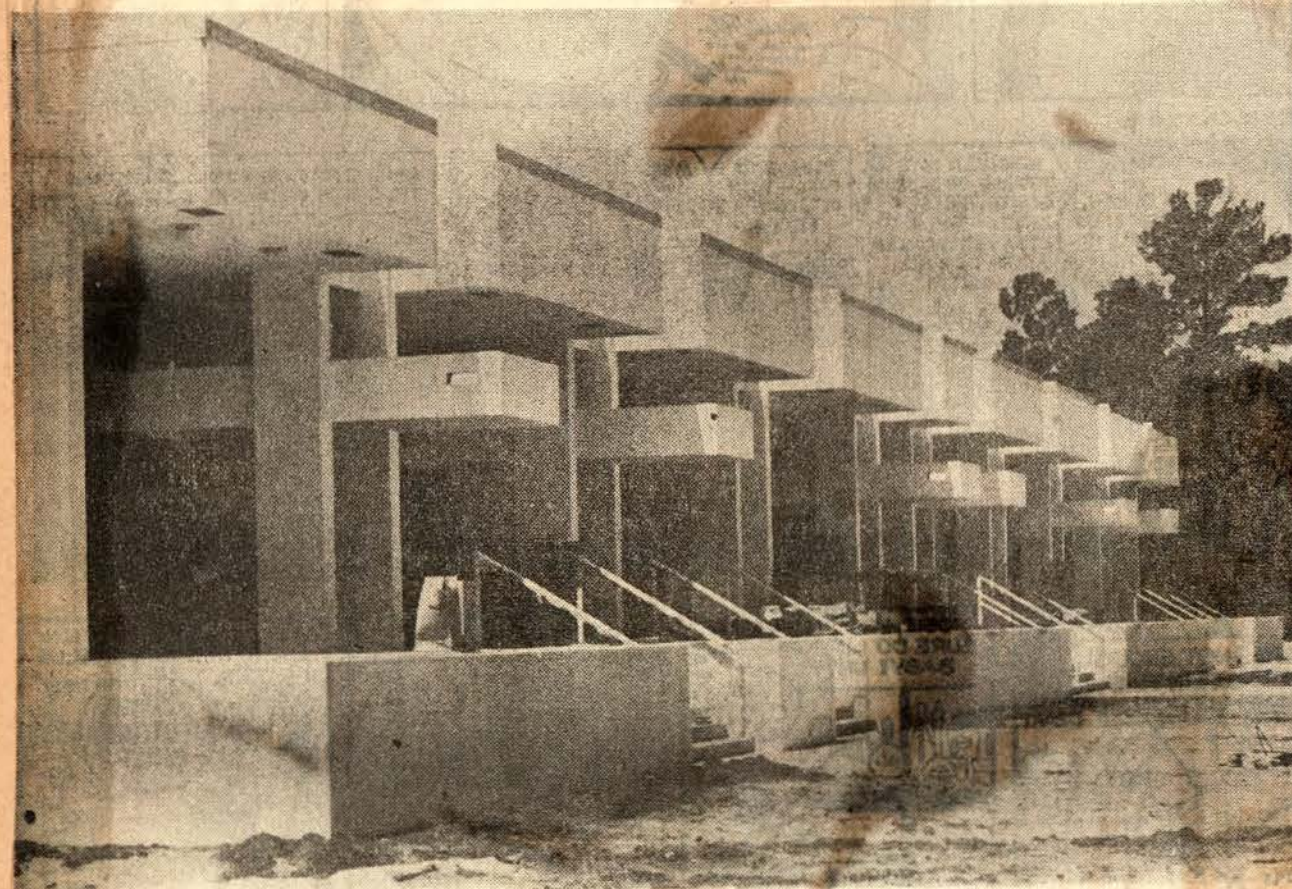

While the first recruits won't arrive until early October, the buildings will be used during the last two weeks of August when 300 Sea Cadets report aboard for training. The Sea Cadets are a Youth Corps sponsored jointly by the Navy and the Navy League.

Naval Training Center Work On Schedule

First phase construction is on schedule at the Naval Training Center here, Navy officials said Friday, and they see no problems in the offing that would put a crimp in the works.

"Everything's hunky dory right now," said one official.

The $28 million first phase includes four 800-man barracks, a three-story training building and an 888-seat mess hall.

The training building and one of the barracks have been completed and accepted by the Navy.

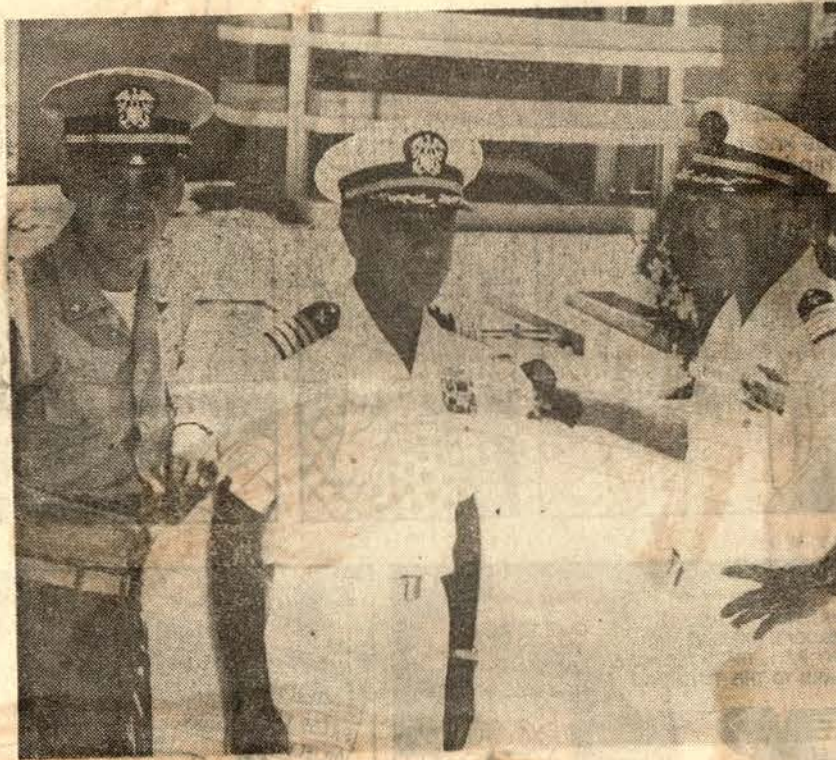

HOWEVER, A problem might loom after the first phase is completed.

The Senate Appropriations Committee recently chopped out all funds scheduled for future development at the new base. And the Senate itself usually goes along with the committee's recommendations.

Congress is now haggling over appropriations for Phase II and future development of the base. The appropriation is expected to be settled upon when a House-Senate conference committee meets on the problem when Congress reconvenes.

THEN, BY SEPT. 6, the second barracks will be completed. The third barracks is scheduled for completion by Oct. 3, and the fourth by Nov. 1.

Capt. E. P. Huey is commanding officer of the Naval Training Center. Capt. B. W. Brender is commanding officer of the Recruit Training Command and Lt. Cmdr. P. A. Goins is resident officer in charge of construction.

Hospital Passes Century Mark

On August 8, the Inpatient Census of the Naval Hospital passed the hundred mark when 107 patients were hospitalized.

On July 1 when the Naval Hospital was established, there was a census of 59 patients received from the Air Force.

During the first month of operation there were 296 admissions to the Naval Hospital and the hospital's two obstetricians delivered 54 babies.

The 14 clinics now in operation at the hospital treated 7,637 outpatients during July.

The Pharmacy filled

17,235 prescriptions while the laboratory completed 9,453 tests.

The Radiology Service took 4,040 X-ray exposures, 144 physical examinations were done and 469 immunizations were provided.

The Dental Service of the hospital completed 4,716 procedures during its first month of operation.

With the arrival of more personnel each day at the Naval Training Center and recent additions to the staff, Captain Wm. G. Lawson, Commanding Officer of the Naval Hospital, estimates that both the Inpatient Census and the Outpatient workload will grow significantly by the beginning of September.

Captain Lawson encourages patients desiring appointments to write to the 2665 or dial direct at hospital Outpatient Service or 841-1090 and 841-1091.

Sea Cadets to Train At Recruit Center

Three hundred and fifty Naval Sea Cadets will start arriving at the Orlando Naval Training Center tomorrow for two weeks of summer training conducted by the Recruit Training Command.

The cadets are coming from nine states in the East and South, plus Texas and Ohio. Those from outside the state of Florida are being flown to Orlando in Navy aircraft, while the Florida cadets will come by bus.

They will undergo an abbreviated version of the training curriculum established for recruits. Such subjects as military drill, weapons training, damage control, citizenship, military customs and courtesy, and first aid will be taught in the daily sessions.

Part of each day will be devoted to physical training and organized sports. During the second week the cadets will make a field trip to Kennedy Space Center, followed by a late afternoon swim at the beach at Patrick Air Force Base.

The youths will be housed in one of the new recruit barracks and will attend classes in the RTC Training Building. Since the new RTC Mess Hall is not in operation yet, they will eat at the NTC General Mess.

A graduation review on Friday, August 30, will be the last item on the trainees' agenda.

Sea Cadets, who range in age from 14 to 17, are members of the Naval Sea Cadets Corps. The Corps, chartered by the U. S. Congress, is sponsored jointly by the Navy Department and the Navy League, a civilian organization which develops and maintains public interest in the Navy and its missions.

KING MEMORIAL AWARD TO CORPSMAN HODGE

HM3 James M. Hodge, winner of two Purple Hearts in the Republic of Vietnam, became the first winner of the "Lieutenant William G. King" memorial award during ceremonies conducted as part of the Civil Air Patrol Awards Banquet at the Rio Pinar country club last Friday evening.

The William G. King award is a memorial award sponsored by the Rio Pinar Country Club and will be presented annually to the Navy enlisted man who, through personal example and superior leadership, has distinguished himself as a most effective enlisted leader at the Naval Training Center.

Captain Enders P. Huey, Commander, Naval Training Center, pinned the Gold Medal on the native of Jefferson City, Tennessee during the award ceremonies that were attended by military and civilian dignitaries.

In nominating Hodge by letter, Capt. W. G. Lawson, Commanding Officer, Naval Hospital, penned the following comments concerning his Corpsman's performance:

"During his assignment to the Naval Hospital since May 23, 1968, Hodge has displayed a high degree of integrity, intelligence, initiative, and perseverance.

As a member of the development staff of the Naval Hospital, HM3 Hodge frequently took the initiative to perform the tasks he knew must be done without awaiting instructions.

He assigned tasks to lower rated men and would follow through to their completion.

In his present assignment in the Operating Services Division, HM3 Hodge has established a program to qualify staff members for duty as ambulance drivers and coordinated all transportation requirements for the hospital.

He has unselfishly given of his time, working long hours to insure that services are provided for the 24-hour operation of the hospital. His "can do" attitude has been admired by his peers and appreciated by his superiors in all the tasks he has undertaken."

Captain Lawson concluded, "It is with personal pride and pleasure that I nominate HM3 Hodge for the Lieutenant William G. King, USMC, Award.

Hodge, who entered the Navy in May 1962, was assigned to the Third Battalion, Third Marine Division in Vietnam.

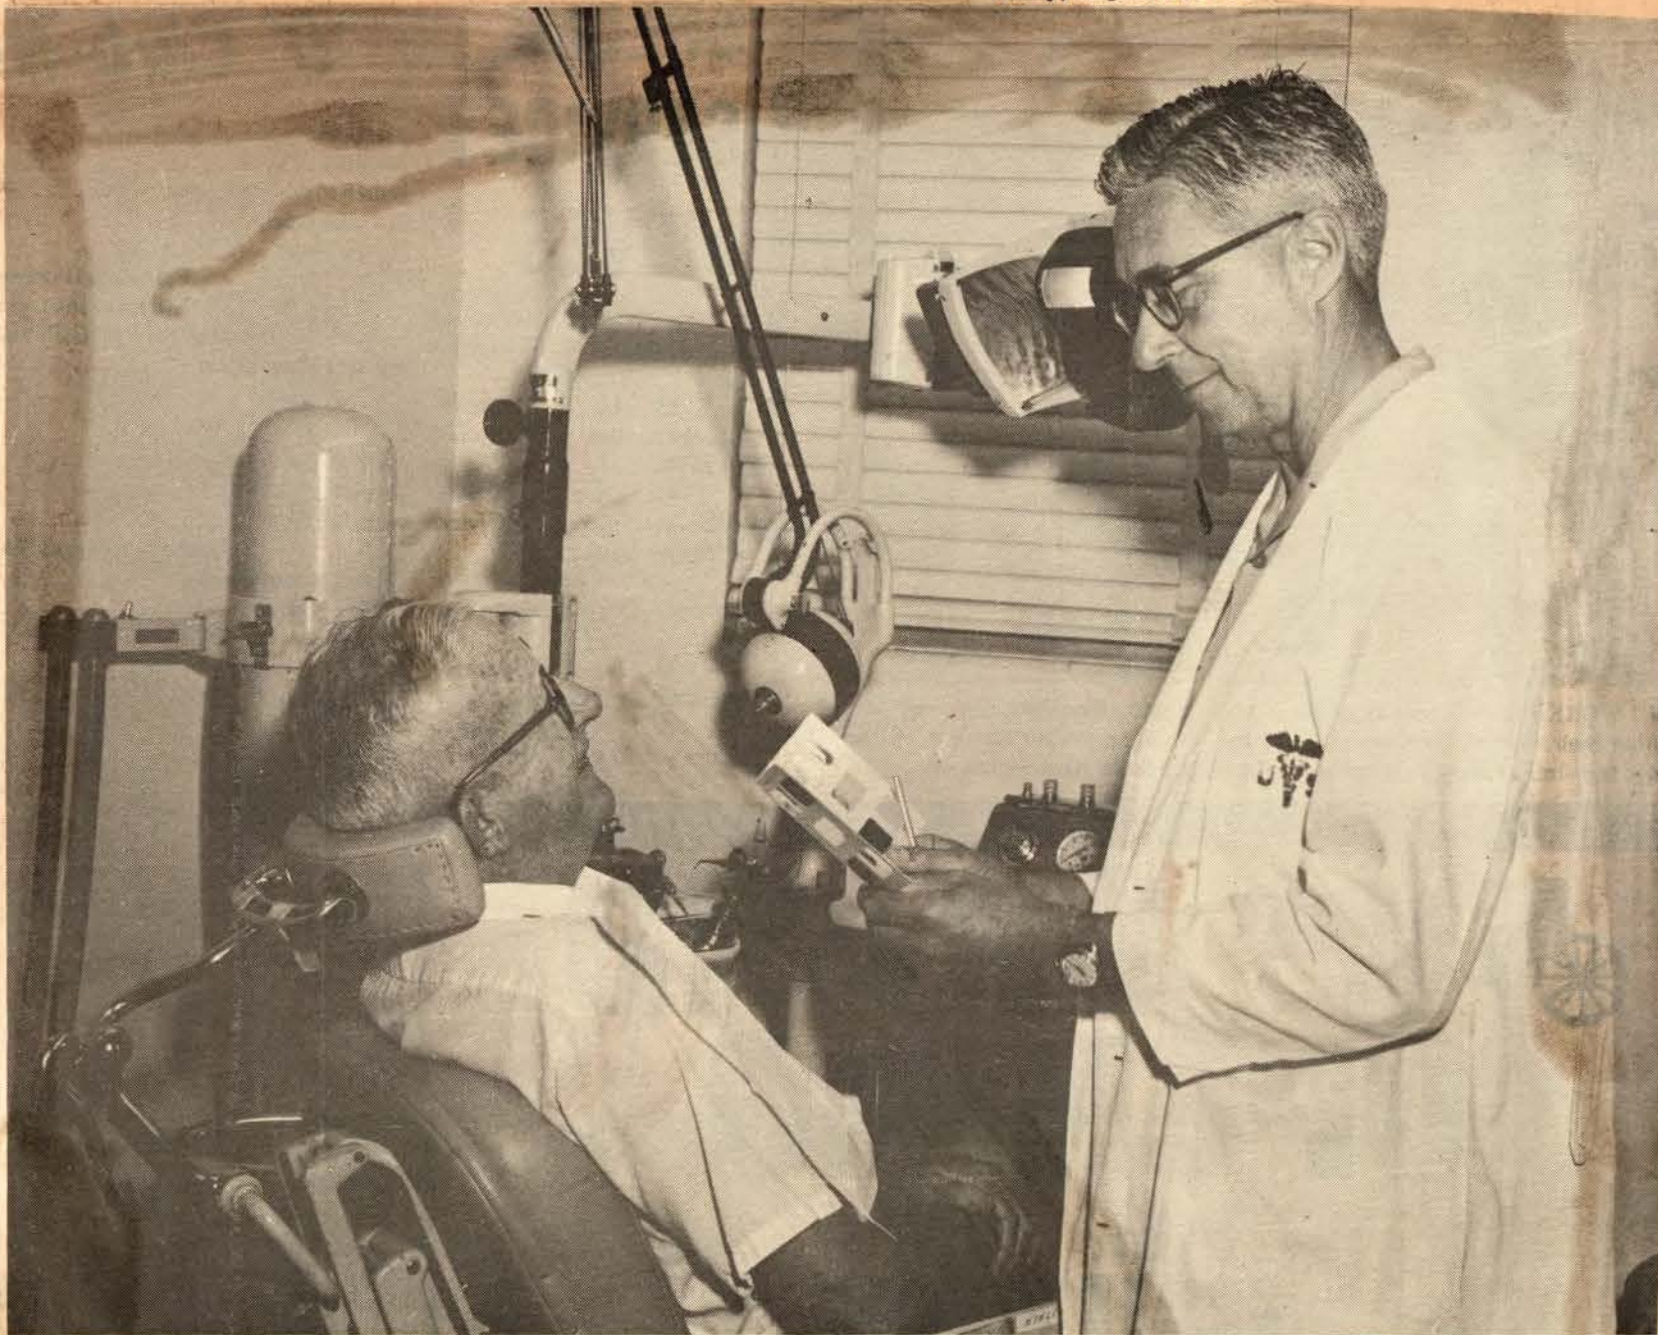

In addition to two Purple Hearts, the award-winning Corpsman is also entitled to wear the Vietnam Service Ribbon with two Bronze Stars; the Navy Unit Commendation; and the Good Conduct Medal.

Hodge is married to the former Patricia Mae Sartain and they reside at Lake Mary, Florida.

Dental Corps Celebrates 56th Anniversary

On August 22, 1912, President Taft signed the establishing Act which officially authorized the Naval Dental Corps. Thursday, dental officers in the Orlando Navy complex celebrate the 56th anniversary of their founding.

The dental service has emerged from its sketchy beginning of a Corps of 30 officers to its present strength of approximately 2000. In World War II, there was almost vertical rise in active duty dental officers to over 7000, including the first woman dental officer.

In the last 22 years there has been a steady improvement and broadening of clinical services, preventive dentistry, officer and enlisted training and dental research.

Leadership in the clinical services is now provided by board-certified diplomates in oral surgery, prosthodontics, periodontics, oral pathology, endodontics, and pedodontics.

In-service training for officers is provided at the Naval Dental School, Bethesda, Maryland, together with courses for enlisted personnel. The Bethesda school administers an extensive program of correspondence courses on administrative and clinical subjects for officers.

The preventive dentistry program includes a world-wide program of fluoridating the water of Navy facilities, intensive lecturing of recruits on dental health and oral hygiene, distributing films on oral hygiene and conducting a research program to determine the effectiveness of topical applications of stannous fluoride for naval personnel.

The dental research program has as its first objectives the development of dental health programs and support for such naval operational programs as cold-weather, extended submarine, aerospace, bacteriological, nuclear radiation, mass-casualty and field operations.

In the research field, the invention of the first air-turbine handpiece was the pivotal development which set in motion a virtual revolution in dental operative procedures.

Everchanging programs, such as those mentioned, are the Naval Dental Corps' answers to the challenges of maintaining oral health.

Only four elements remain virtually unchanged since the birthday on August 22, 1912. They are love of country, faith in the United States Navy, dedication to the Corps and a deep concern for the welfare and comfort of the patient.

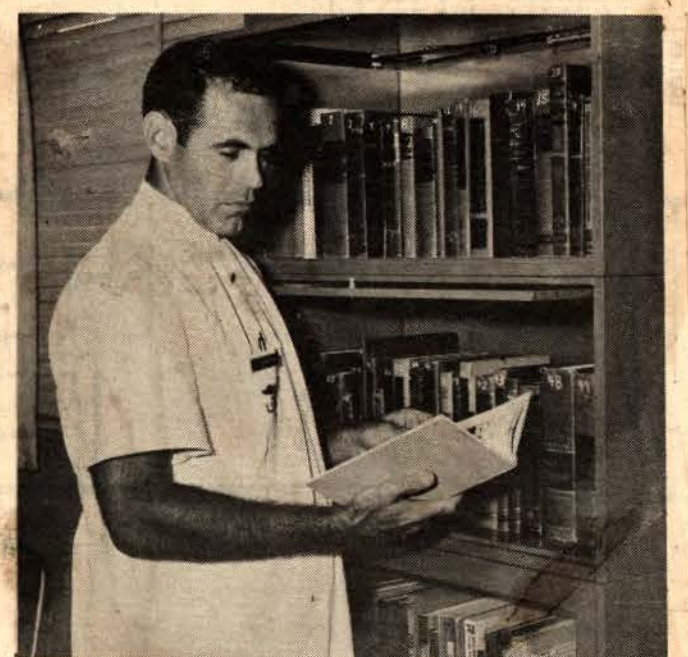

We will soon have on board here at Orlando, 28 dental officers, 59 dental technicians and two civilian clerical employees.

This dental staff is charged with the responsibility for providing dental care in the Recruit Input Facility, the Recruit Dental Clinic, (interim location Building 3050, Naval Hospital) and in the existing facilities of the Naval Hospital dental service.

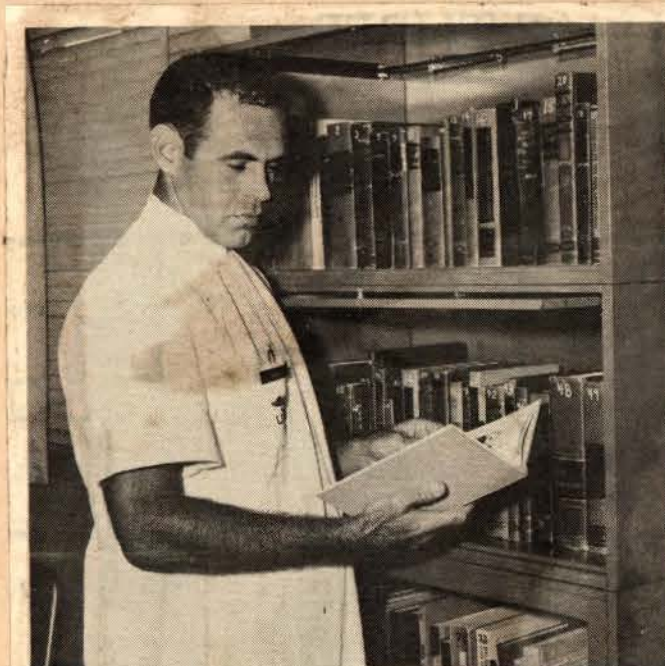

Ship's Company and other eligible personnel who require dental treatment will receive such care in Naval Hospital dental service, Building 3021.

205 SEA CADETS TRAIN AT RTC

WELCOME ABOARD

"Welcome Aboard" was the phrase of the day for 205 Naval Sea Cadets Monday as they were greeted by Captain Enders P. Huey, Commander of the Naval Training Center, Captain B. W. Brender, Commanding Officer of the Recruit Training Command, and Commander F. J. Urbano, NTC Assistant Chaplain.

The four companies of cadets massed in front to the RTC Training Building to hear brief remarks from each of the three officers.

Captain Huey used the Japanese term "ichi-bon" to emphasize that the cadets were "number one", the first trainees to be taught at the Recruit Training Command, Orlando.

Reminding the youths that "the eyes of Central Florida are upon you", Captain Brender explained some of the procedures, and some basic rules and regulations to be followed during their two weeks of training. He also introduced the RTC Department Heads and Sea Cadet Officers who are supervising the instruction.

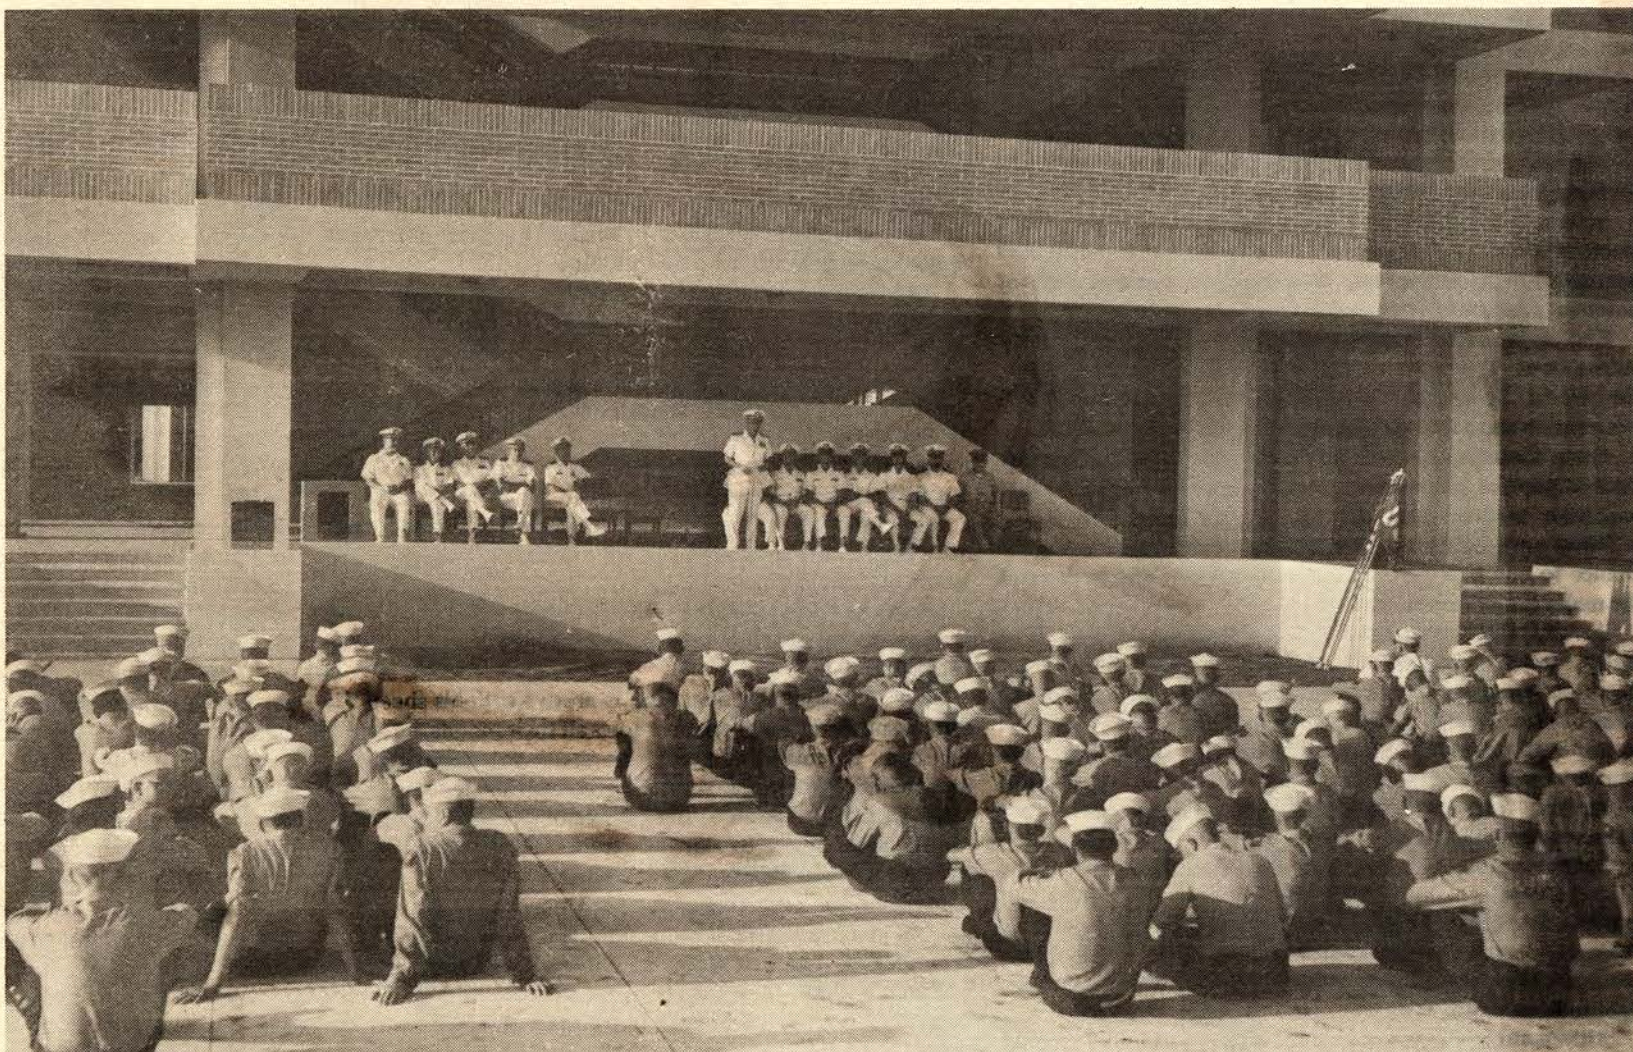

Chaplain Urbano offered the cadets any help and guidance they needed from the chaplains, and admonished them to make the most of their training by doing their best.

The Sea Cadets arrived here Saturday and Sunday from the states of Texas, Illinois, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, Georgia, New Jersey, South Carolina, Washington, D.C., Kentucky, Virginia, Maryland and Florida.

They are undergoing a two-weeks training program to augment their two hour weekly drill at their home bases, which are usually Navy and Marine Corps Reserve Training Centers.

The U.S. Naval Sea Cadet Corps program is aimed toward readying boys 14 through 17 for a Navy career using available Navy facilities and curricula for training the Navy way.

A boy reaching the age of 18 and having gone through all the phases of recruit and advanced training and having completed certain required correspondence courses may enter the Naval Reserve with an E-3 rating, and would not have to undergo the regular recruit training cycle.

Captain Bernard W. Brender, USN, Commanding Officer of Recruit Training Command, introduces the training officers to the Sea Cadets who are training here.

Hello, Mrs. Lawson

By VIRGINIA LOOG
Sentinel Staff

Mrs. William G. Lawson, wife of the commanding officer at the Naval Hospital, Orlando, is honorary president of the Naval Hospital Officers' Wives' Club.

Off the record she is honorary mother to most of the young women who have come to Orlando with their husbands and are attached to the hospital staff.

Gracious, pleasing and interested, are the qualities which draw other people to her. She likes people and they like her. She has an easy laugh, matching her soft Georgia voice.

SINCE being in Central Florida, Capt. and Mrs. Lawson have been looking around with an eye to staying here after retirement. What they have seen they like.

The people in the area are the most impressive persuasion for Florida over other areas of the country, Mrs. Lawson says. The Lawsons like the friendship given to them. They like the climate, and the summer days are not a bit too warm for them.

Capt. Lawson loves golf, while his wife likes to play bridge and go to parties. In her spare time she does knitting and crewel work which she learned in Cuba while stationed at Quantanamo.

THE LAWSONS have two daughters and three grandchildren all of whom have been visiting here for several weeks. Mrs. B. F. Fruehauf and her three children are from Greenville, S.C. where her husband is stationed with the Air Force. The other daughter, Mrs. W. L. Two Corpsmen Receive Navy Achievement Medal

Two Naval Hospital Petty Officers were presented Navy Achievement Medals by Captain William G. Lawson, MC, USN, during ceremonies September 13. They are:

Hospital Corpsman Second Class Danny L. Brevard was presented the Navy Achievement Medal for outstanding achievement in the superior performance of his duties. "While serving with the First Medical Battalion, First Marine Division in connection with operations against insurgent communist (Viet Cong) forces in the Republic of Vietnam from 4 July 1967 to 30 June 1968, Petty Officer Brevard performed his duties in a highly exemplary manner.

Serving in the Medical Supply Section, he demonstrated outstanding professionalism and initiative as he expeditiously accomplished all assigned tasks, thereby enhancing the efficiency and effectiveness of his unit.

When the battalion displaced from DaNang to Phu Bai, the move was completed and the supply section was fully operational within twenty-four hours, due in large measure to his foresight, planning and tireless efforts.

His detailed knowledge of Initial Outfitting Lists was instrumental in furnishing complete medical supplies for several companies which were being deployed from the battalion.

In addition, he was instrumental in the construction of a cool room which prevented the deterioration of valuable supplies of drugs.

Petty Officer Brevard's exceptional professional skill, initiative and loyal devotion to duty throughout contributed significantly to the accomplishment of his unit's mission and reflect great credit upon himself, the Marine Corps and the Naval Service."

Hospital Corpsman Second Class Brevard is authorized to wear the Combat "V".

Hospital Corpsman First Class Richard F. Gray received the Navy Achievement Medal for his service during combat in Viet Nam. His Citation reads: "While serving with the First Battalion, Fourth Marines, Third Marine Division in connection with operations against the enemy in the Republic of Vietnam from 18 December 1967 to 8 July 1968, Petty Officer Gray performed his duties in an exemplary and highly professional manner.

As Acting Administrative Chief of the Battalion Aid Station, he displayed outstanding leadership and initiative despite extremely adverse conditions and the difficulties of a combat environment. Distinguishing himself by his consistently high level of efficiency, he materially enhanced the operational effectiveness and morale of his unit.

As a result of his diligence and seemingly unlimited resourcefulness, he gained the respect and admiration of all who observed him and contributed significantly to the accomplishment of his unit's mission.

Petty Officer Gray's outstanding professional ability, untiring determination and steadfast devotion to duty throughout reflect great credit upon himself, the Marine Corps and the Naval Service."

Both men received their medals, on behalf of the Secretary of the Navy, from Lieutenant General H. W. Buse, Jr., USMC, Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific.

Hospital Wives Luncheon

Stanley A. Knight, Jr. Awarded Bronze Star

In ceremonies at the Naval Hospital on September 13, 1968, Captain W. G. Lawson, MC, USN, Commanding Officer, Naval Hospital presented awards to four hospital staff members:

HN Stanley A. Knight, Jr. was presented the Bronze Star Medal with Combat "V", the Navy Commendation Medal with Combat "V" and the Presidential Unit Citation.

He was awarded the Bronze Star Medal "For heroic achievement in connection with operations against the enemy in the Republic of Vietnam while serving as a Corpsman with Company H, Second Battalion, Fourth Marines, Third Marine Division.

In the early morning hours of 14 October 1967, Company H came under intense enemy rocket, mortar and artillery fire while occupying defensive positions near Con Thien.

The barrage was followed closely by an assault against the Marine perimeter by a determined enemy force, firing small arms and automatic weapons.

With complete disregard for his own safety, Hospitalman Knight repeatedly exposed himself to the heavy volume of fire to assist the wounded. Fearlessly moving across the hazardous terrain from one position to another, he skillfully administered first aid to his injured comrades and moved them to positions of relative safety.

His heroic and timely actions were an inspiration to all who observed him and undoubtedly saved the lives of several Marines.

Hospitalman Knight's courage, exceptional professionalism and selfless devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the Marine Corps and of the United States Naval Service."

He also received the Navy Commendation for his brave action just a month earlier. His Citation from Lieutenant General V. H. Krulak, USMC, Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, reads: "For heroic achievement while serving as a Corpsman with Company H, Second Battalion, Fourth Marines, Third Marine Division in connection with operations against insurgent communist (Viet Cong) forces in the Republic of Vietnam on 18 September 1967.

After a day of artillery and mortar attacks against his company's position, Hospitalman Knight received a call for assistance from the 81mm mortar section.

Upon arriving at the unit's position, he found a Marine in severe convulsions and having great difficulty in breathing. Realizing the need for immediate action and seemingly unmindful of the possibility of additional artillery attacks, Hospitalman Knight remained in the open and worked desperately to clear an airway to ease the patient's labored breathing. Unable to clear a passage in the man's throat, he requested assistance from his companions as he quickly and skillfully performed a tracheotomy and inserted a piece of plastic tubing into the patient's throat.

After preparing the man for evacuation, Hospitalman Knight personally accompanied his patient to reassure him and maintain a clear air passage until the man was placed under a doctor's care.

His decisive and skillful actions, under adverse field conditions were undoubtedly instrumental in saving the Marine's life.

By his exceptional professionalism, composure

Hospital Corpsman First Class Robert G. McNicol was presented the Air Medal (7th Strike/Flight Award) for service with Marine Air Base Squadron 36 operating against communist Viet Cong forces from March 8, 1968 to April 25, 1968.

Hospital Corpsman Second Class William E. Murchison, received the Navy Unit Commendation which was awarded to the USS Bon Homme Richard (CVA-31) and Attack Carrier Air Wing 21 for combat operations from February 26 to July 30 1967.

Dental Technician First Class David I. Roberts was awarded his third Good Conduct Award for service ending March 6, 1965.

In meeting a grave emergency and unflinching devotion to duty, Hospitalman Knight upheld the finest traditions of the Marine Corps and of the United States Naval Service."

First Navy Recruits Welcomed At Center

"Welcome aboard" was the greeting at Orlando Naval Training Center Tuesday and Wednesday as the first contingent of recruits reported in from various parts of the country.

The first four days of Navy life for the young men will include among other items, medical and dental examinations; a "Navy" haircut; instruction in the "Uniform Code of Military Justice," welcome from the chaplain, and inoculations against communicable diseases.

PROBABLY the most important item will be the classification tests which will affect the status of each recruit throughout his naval career.

Also on the new recruits' schedule are being fitted for naval clothing, ship- ping civilian clothing home, stenciling the naval clothing, learning how to swab decks, do their own laundry, and make up their bunks.

At the conclusion of the indoctrination period, the recruits will be formed into a company of approximately 86 men to begin their nine weeks of recruit training.

FROM NOW on, new recruits are scheduled to be arriving at the Orlando facility in batches of approximately 300 a week.

Reveille for the sailors is at 5 a.m. — or 0500 in military parlance — on weekdays and 6 a.m. Sundays and holidays.

Hospital Marks It's 1,000th

The Naval Hospital ended its first quarter of operation by entering its thousandth in-patient on the books. The patient was Mrs. Dean H. Weinstein, who presented her husband Sgt. David E. Weinstein of the 1365th Photo Squadron with a daughter 7:30 Sept. 28.

Of the thousand in-patients the bulk, 40 percent, were active duty dependents. Nineteen percent were active duty personnel. Retired personnel made up 16 percent of the in-patients while retired dependents made up twenty-three percent.

Treatment of active duty personnel is expected to rise sharply with the arrival of recruits into the Recruit Training Command.

Statistics for the hospital's first three months of operations showed most of the business was in out-patient treatment. Statistics released by the hospital showed:

+189 Babies delivered
+28,409 Out-patients treated +51,854 Prescriptions filled
+14,790 X-rays taken
+17,120 Dental procedures performed
+38,033 Lab procedures performed

001 Gobs Come Under Gun, But The Shots Are Painless

There they stood, 001 Company, looking quite bald and a bit forlorn.

It was physical examination day at the Navy's Recruit Training Center.

001 Company was the first to be processed through the new multi-million dollar complex that will be the pride of the Navy.

The men of 001 will brag to their grandchildren one day that they were the first recruits, but as they waited for their physicals, grandchildren seemed a pretty remove possibility.

The temporary examination room was in one of the recruit barracks, in one big room.

A group of air force photographers were setting up cameras to film the first physical.

It wasn't exactly private. The 80 plus recruits were lined up in one portion of the room and told to strip to their shorts.

A medical officer gave them a mass lecture on things to watch out for during their training period.

"We don't want you to be constipated," he told them. "Be careful of heat exhaustion."

He explained in detail how to avoid both.

Then, the medical team went from row to row, making quick but thorough checks of each man.

Another medic followed taking notes.

Shorts were lowered on command, and raised on command.

Then, another line was formed for shorts. The Navy uses high pressure serum guns that literally blast medicine into the arm. It's painless, but not bloodless if the recruit flinches.

Several were looking nervously at a trickle of blood coming down their arms when the medical team boomed out instructions that recruits should lean their arms into the gun, not pull away. There were no more bloody arms.

After the shots were given, the recruits huddled in a group waiting for more examinations. Many were told to "see the doctor" for one reason or another.

Several days later, Company 001 lined up in front of the officers' swimming pool for their first taste of water outside the shower. Once in their trunks, they again formed ranks behind the diving board. Each man was told to cross his arms over his shoulders and jump stiff legged into the water.

After the tests were completed, it was decided that 19 of the recruits couldn't pass swimming and needed more instruction.

Occasion was the presentation of a plaque to Dr. Snyder on 24 September 1968, making him an honorary member of Troop #246.

Orlando Gets Own Navy Band

Orlando has its first full-fledged military band since World War II. It's the 38-piece band of the Naval Training Center.

Ever since the departure of the Orlando Air Force Base following the second war, Orlando's had to call on the band at Patrick Air Force Base, Cocoa Beach, the nearest military installation, whenever a military orchestra was needed. No more.

ORLANDOANS will have their first chance to watch their new military band on Sunday, Oct. 27, when the band performs at 7:30 p.m. in the bandshell at Lake Eola Park. It's the band's first performance publicly and is part of the "Orlando Presents" program.

Under the baton of Lt. Dexter H. Reynolds Jr., the band will present a two-part concert with the first portion featuring selections from standard concert band literature. Richard Rodgers' "Victory at Sea" and Erikson's "Toccata for Band" will be performed by the concert band. Featured soloists will be Musician Second Class David Traxler playing Von Weber's "Concertino for Clarinet" and flutist Richard Hippert playing Kennen's "Night Soliloquy."

The second 30 minutes will feature the nineteen-member "Anchormen" playing "Big Band" sounds. Vocalist Marshall Depka will be featured.

SENIOR CHIEF Musician Gordon Taylor will conduct the "Anchormen" and solo in "Maybe Next Time."

The Naval Training Center Band reached full complement in the middle of September. Since that time they have been rehearsing under the direction of Chief Musician D. Palompo, associate conductor of the band.

In addition to performing as a concert group and a dance band, this Naval musical group also performs as a marching unit and recently participated in a parade in Jacksonville and Monday evening, October 7, marched and played at the Fire Prevention Week parade in Tampa.

THE VERSATILE Navy musicians have combos from the band ranging from a seven-piece "tenor band" which plays hotel-style music to a modern jazz quartet.

At the Naval Training Center their normal daily routine consists of playing martial music before and after colors (flag raising) and the playing of the National Anthem during the raising of the flag.

Mornings find the musicians at the Center Theatre practicing concert and afternoons are taken up playing dance band renditions.

BAND MEMBERS arrange many of the selections played by both the concert and the dance groups.

On Fridays the band plays a concert in front of the Navy Exchange and every other Wednesday evening the quartet from the band plays for the bedridden patients at the Naval Hospital, Orlando.

Navy Musicians attend a 26-week school at Little Creek, Va., before reporting for duty with their first band.

"DURING the course they study theory, harmony, ear training, dance band, concert band and military training," said Lt. Reynolds.

All Naval Training Center, Orlando band members are experienced musicians and reported here from duty with another band.

Nurses Head For Wilds

Is there another side to the life of a Navy Nurse? Is there something besides helping the sick and trying to supervise very junior corpmen? The Navy Nurse recruiting brochures think so! In brightly colored art they don't quite promise Paris, evening and wine. Six nurses from the Naval Hospital Orlando think so too! Only their approach to the other side of a Navy Nurses life reads more like "Wagons West" than "Europe on Uncle Sam."

The six nurses, headed by LCDR Mary Struble, packed up for a little vacation last week. The group didn't pack light. Included in the luggage was: one camp trailer rig, one medium size boat and trailer, one dog and one horse. Destination—a vacation camping with three other nurses from NAS Jacksonville at an isolated camp site in Ocala National Forest.

Besides LCDR Struble, the groups consisted of Lieutenant's Columba Barter, Mary Guccione, Sue Gregg, Betty Pisani and Rosemary Small.

SILVER STAR -- Hospital Corpsman Third Class James A. Machmer received the Silver Star Medal from Captain W. G. Lawson, MC, USN, Naval Hospital Commanding Officer.

Four at Naval Hospital Receive Vietnam Awards

Four awards for service in Vietnam including a Silver Star Medal to Hospital Corpsman Third Class James A. Machmer, were made during Personnel Inspection at the Naval Hospital Friday, October 11.

In addition to the presentation of the Silver Star, two men, Hospitalman Wilbur J. Strasser and Hospitalman Larry C. Dupont received Bronze Star Medals. Hospitalman John H. Jones received the Navy Achievement Medal.

The citation with Machmer's Silver Star states in part:

"Petty Officer Machmer was a member of a reconnaissance patrol which established a roving observation post in Quang Nam Province. When the patrol's defensive position came under intense enemy mortar attack, killing one Marine and wounding five others, he completely disregarded his own safety to assist the casualties.

"Advancing under heavy fire, Petty Officer Machmer reached the side of a Marine who was severely wounded in the legs...and immediately moved the man to cover. While comforting and encouraging the casualty...he realized the man required an immediate blood transfusion. The plasma bottles had been shattered due to shrapnel.

"Machmer determined his own blood would be compatible with that of his patient and decided to administer a direct transfusion. Aware of the danger to his own life -- he had no means by which to gauge the amount of blood he was giving -- he selflessly proceeded with the transfusion, completing the lifesaving treatment in total darkness.

"After a medical-evacuation helicopter arrived and his patient was safely aboard, Machmer began to treat the less seriously wounded Marines and prepare them for evacuation.

The citation concluded: By his courage, exceptional professionalism, and selfless devotion to duty, he undoubtedly saved the life of one Marine and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service.

Both Dupont and Strasser received their Bronze Stars for exposing themselves to intense enemy fire to aid injured Marines.

Dupont's citation reads in part:

"On 9 March 1968 (Dupont's) unit came under intense automatic weapons and grenade launcher fire from a well concealed enemy force. Reacting instantly, Hospitalman Dupont unhesitatingly maneuvered across the fire-swept area and began administering first aid to wounded men.

"After a helicopter had evacuated the (initially wounded) men, the hostile fire intensified, and the unit sustained several more casualties, including Hospitalman Dupont.

After treating his own wound, Dupont disregarding his painful wounds continued to treat the wounded.

Strasser's unit came under attack on March 30, 1968 while in a defensive position around a vital bridge. The citation with Strasser's Bronze Star states:

"In the initial moments of the attack, Hospitalman Strasser fearlessly moved across the fire-swept terrain to assist several wounded Marines. On (one) occasion, he disregarded his own safety to move two injured men to positions of relative safety. Subsequently, as Hospitalman Strasser was maneuvering to the aid of the wounded Marine on the bridge, several enemy soldiers directed a heavy volume of fire and hand grenades against him. He continued (trying to reach the Marine) until heavy fire forced him to withdraw to a covered position.

HN John Jones received his Navy Achievement Medal for "outstanding professionalism and initiative despite extremely adverse conditions and the difficulties of the combat environment," while attached to Marine Air Control Squadron Four.

STIFF UPPER LIP -- HN Clark Radford demonstrates a device that provides traction for neck muscles.

The sign over the door says Physical Therapy. For an average 30 people a day at the Naval Hospital, Orlando, passing through this doorway is the first step on the, often, long road towards recovery.

Patients who need physical therapy: victims of auto accidents, post-surgery patients, stroke victims and overstrained amateur athletes, understand that the pain that often goes hand in hand with physical therapy treatments isn't important. The treatment is important. It can often mean the difference between recovery from possible life long limitation. For some this difference is between walking again and confinement to a wheel chair or bed.

The Physical Therapy department is one of the smallest units in the hospital from the standpoint of staffing. It is headed by Lt. Commander Lorraine Melvin, one of the few physical therapy specialists on active duty with the Navy. Her entire crew consists of one man, HM3 Tom Hoody.

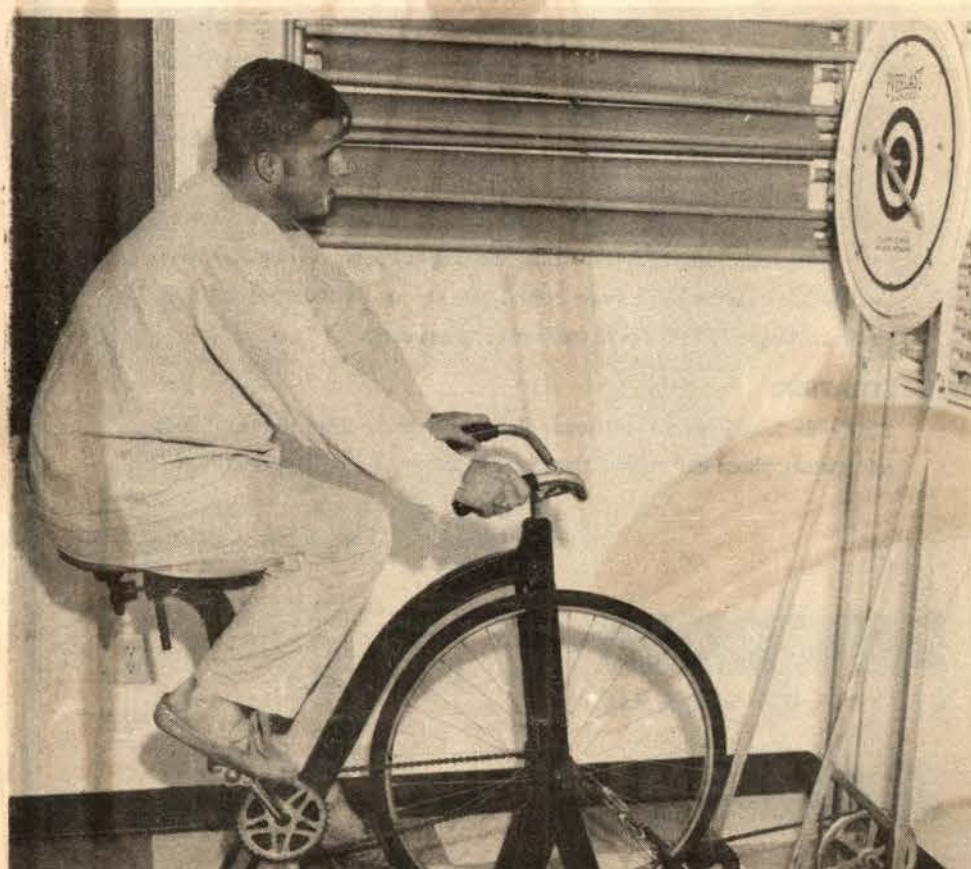

Physically, physical therapy is not impressive. Much of the equipment used in treatment, including an exercise bike, and weights can be found in any good gym. What counts is proper guidance--provided by the staff--and the patients will to stick with treatment.

The majority of patients in Physical Therapy right now are out-patients, including Air Force men from McCoy which lacks a PT clinic.

"A very high percent of our active duty patients," noted LCDR Melvin, "are here because of auto or motorcycle accidents."

We're equipped to treat all sorts of muscle and nerve problems, but only on an acute basis. We just don't have the set-up for long range therapy or rehabilitation."

MILAGE -- PCSN Noel Chandler went from a Volkswagon to the hospital. The exercise by bicycle is one of the prime tools for loosening stiff leg muscles or joints.

KEEPING THINGS LOOSE -- HM3 Tom Hoody assists retired Army Major General Charles Hoy with routine arm exercises. In many cases, particularly involving victims of strokes, the important thing is to keep muscles in tone and joints loose until the body can start taking over again.

Dear Sir:

During the period 2 July, 1968, to 27 September, 1968, I was a patient in Ward 10, Base Hospital, NTC, Orlando, Florida. All personnel, both Navy and civilian, with whom I came in contact were conscientious and highly qualified in their profession. With the help, kindness and professional skill of all concerned, I feel that my convalescent period was shortened greatly.

I would certainly be remiss if I did not try and express my thanks and appreciation to all personnel to whom I am indebted.

My sincere thanks to all.

Sincerely,

Whatever the outcome of Rays trip to Bethesda, let me now tell you what a comfort and display of human feeling both Dr. Stewart + Dr. Nocera have demonstrated - plus the kindness of those on Ward 7.

I had almost lost faith, but I must say, when the Navy waves, it waves fast, and we are most grateful.

Dear Captain Lawson -

I was referred to your Hospital as an 'In-Patient', by the McCoy Air Force Base Dispensary and entered your hospital on Friday, September 13th. I was discharged yesterday on September 24th, and while there, was in Ward Number 8. My treatment consisted of a series of tests having to do with some internal problems existing since I was physically retired from the Air Force in 1963 because of this condition.

My attending Physician was Dr. Necero; among the nurses whom I met were Miss Hay, Mr. M. Corda, Miss Dusebo, and Miss Gregg. Of course I am in contact with others and other doctors during the course of the many tests, many times and in other Departments such as X-Ray.

I was also attended by several Corpsmen on the Ward as well as two Civil Service Nurses from time to time.

I wish to complement and commend you upon the fine operation of your hospital; I have been hospitalized there before when it was under my own Service, as well as other Service Hospitals, but I have had no finer treatment nor care than I received during this period just past.

Everything was done for my comfort both mentally and physically. No one I met on duty there or connected with your Hospital could be identified as other than the highest caliber - and I include the lady who cleaned up the Ward each day whose name I neglected to get.

I am sorry that I cannot write to each individually and thank them in person, but to you, your Staff, and to those with whom I came in contact, my sincere congratulations for a well-run operation. I hope you pass this along to those especially who were on duty in Ward 8.

Faithfully

Dear Sir:

On 7 August 1968, my wife delivered our second child which was a healthy, six pound, twelve and one-half ounce girl at the Naval Hospital, Orlando. The professional medical care that my wife received during the prenatal and delivery periods were such that we feel that we would like to extend our appreciation for the outstanding services rendered by your clinics.

Since our first child was born in one of the finest civilian hospitals available for my family while I was overseas in 1962, it was very easy for my wife and gratifying for me for her to recognize the superior organization, interest, and professional capability that your hospital exhibited during the past few months. We feel that the efficient characteristics of your clinics reflect an outstanding example how competent and dedicated personnel can maximize on their training and experience in an attempt to implement a seemingly effortless routine which provides such outstanding results.

My wife and I thank the staff of the clinics concerned and especially Dr. Hoertz for the outstanding care provided to my wife and to the other women patients, some of whom were wives of servicemen in Vietnam. I am sure that it is a great source of comfort to the servicemen in Vietnam to hear that their wives are receiving such outstanding care by your competent staff.

Dear Dr. Lawson

This letter is written to appraise you, as Orlando Naval Station Hospital Commander, of the deep appreciation we of the 813th Medical Group, McCoy AFB, hold toward Lt Commander Thomas R. Bates.

From the very inception of your Ophthalmologic Service, Dr. Bates has been extremely cooperative and helpful with all of our eye cases. Emergency problems have been seen in the shortest possible time, regardless of the hour. Other eye problems, though not true emergencies, but which were distressing to the patient or parent or physician, have always been seen promptly.

Often these cases were seen as "extra" patients when Dr. Bates already had a completely-filled schedule. Let me also add that Dr. Bates has often personally called up as soon as he had examined the patient to inform us of his opinion and his plans for treatment.

All of the Medical Officers at McCoy AFB wish to thank Dr. Bates for his courtesy and kindness as well as his excellent consultation. Dr. Bates is indeed an asset to the Navy and to its medical service.

Sir:
This is in appreciation for excellent and outstanding dental service performed for me by Captain George J. Leclair, D.C., USN, and other members of the Naval Hospital Dental Department at the Naval Training Center, 15 August 1968.

I was astounded at the speed and efficiency of their work, and amazed at the remarkable results. I can now chew my food.

Proprio of the 56th Anniversary of the Dental Corps, and the surprise photo of myself in a dental chair, published in the Reich, I am privileged to advise that in February 1918 the first decorations for bravery under fire, in the famous 5th Regiment, U.S.M.C., were bestowed on the Dental Officer and two of his Captains. Meet The Staff

CHIEF ANDY

When a Navy Journalist meets a man who's been in the service since '39 one of the standard questions he asks is "what is the difference between the Navy today and the 'Old' Navy?" This week's Meet the Staff personality, HMCS Anthony Andy is such a man.

He joined the Navy in 1938, went into the Reserves in 1945 and was called back to active duty in February 1951 for Korea. He has been on active duty since.

To Chief Andy there really isn't much difference between the Navy of '68 and the Navy of '39. "The Navy doesn't change that much," he noted, "only the people do."

It is in the area of people that the Chief sees the real difference. "The men we are getting in the Navy today are a lot smarter, better educated than ever before. They can think. It's better for the Navy and it makes the Navy better but it causes problems too. You just can't use the same kind of leadership on these kids."

HMCS Andy reported to the Naval Hospital in last February when he went to work setting up the Patient Affairs Division of the hospital. Hospital Personnel Officer, Lcdr Davis gives the Chief much of the credit for getting the Division on its feet.

Dear Captain Lawson:

I want to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the excellent medical treatment rendered to my daughter, Sally Jo, on Sunday, November 17, 1968, and to let you know that members of your staff were courteous, cheerful, and most helpful.

My wife told me that despite the fact that the Doctor had obviously been busy throughout the day (she herself waited 5 hours), that he took a genuine interest in the welfare of our daughter and attended to her needs in a manner which leaves nothing to be desired. In addition, she reported that the corpsmen on duty were genuinely helpful, courteous, and professional in discharging their responsibilities.

I am aware that often your staff receives criticism and very little thanks for the outstanding services they provide daily. It is with this in mind that I want you to know how much I appreciate the extra effort the members of your duty section exhibited on Sunday, November 17, 1968.

Dear Captain Lawson:

The purpose of this letter is to note, for the record, my great appreciation of the very excellent treatment, care and attention which I received from your staff, Nurses, and corpsmen during my short stay in your fine hospital facility during early November 1968.

I had, during the summer of 1968, stayed a long two months and eighteen days in a hospital facility which was managed by my own branch of the military service. During that interval I developed a patient's viewpoint of hospital management and operation. One cannot logically conclude that an imposing hospital structure necessarily houses an effective hospital organization.

During my brief stay in your hospital I was very favorably impressed by the attitude of all of the hospital personnel with whom I had contact -- from Capt. George Mitchell to the corpsmen of Ward 8.

Initial examination, of my problem areas, was done by Dr. William Jones in the Outpatient Clinic. The eye examination was handled by Dr. Bates in the Ophthalmology Clinic. The Surgery was by Dr. James Davis.

LEDR Eusebio had, working with her in Ward 8, the most energetic and competent group of Nurses and Corpsmen that I have ever met. I must note, for the benefit of the unsung heroes of the galley, that the food which was served to me was the best I have ever had in any hospital.

I was, naturally, very greatly relieved to learn that the tumor was benign and that the retina of my left eye had suffered no damage.

We were very sorry to hear of the accident which happened in Dr. Davis brother's family. We hope that severe damage was not done.

When I left your hospital I passed to Corpsman Gatzke the summary report which Dr. Bates had prepared for me. I requested that Dr. Bates summary report be mailed to me, together with Dr. Davis' summary report, when the Davis report is typed. My mail address is given below my signature on this sheet.

Sincerely

Edmund C. Langmead

FORGET NOT ALL HIS BENEFITS. Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness are "benefits" from our Creator which are intended for all mankind. Real gratitude for these blessings requires our deepest thoughts and our finest judgments. Let us thank God for "all His benefits" today by striving for the fullest realization of our own potentialities in extending these blessings to others in our present duty assignment. Let us gratefully pursue happiness through our very best efforts to share the benefits of home, freedom and the basic needs of life with all men everywhere.

Commander McGrew Addresses Medical Staff

Commander C.J. McGrew, MC, USN, Chief of Medicine and Chief of Outpatient Services at the Naval Hospital gave an illustrated lecture to the Medical staff and other interested staff personnel at Florida Sanitarium Hospital on 10 December 1968. His subject was the "Hazards of Sport Diving".

Cdr. McGrew is well qualified on the subject and is the only qualified Navy Submarine and Diving Medical Officer in the area. He has been designated as the Navy's advisor for any military diving casualties which occur in Central Florida and is available for advice on similar civilian casualties cared for in local civilian hospitals.

The Commander had previously given a similar lecture at Orange Memorial Hospital in November titled, "Diving Physiology". Included in both talks were discussions on the "Bends" or decompression sickness, oxygen toxicity, air embolism, nitrogen narcosis or "raptures of the deep" and safety procedures in sport or scuba diving.

The importance of this subject is shown by the fact Florida has had about one death a month from scuba diving since 1962 due mainly to divers failing to follow safe practices.

Doctor McGrew spent a number of years on nuclear submarines and is a plank owner of the USS Skipjack and the ill-fated USS Scorpion. Doctor McGrew's presentations are a part of a cooperative teachers program between the Naval Hospital and the community hospitals.

Another lecture under the program was given by Lt. Commander Thomas R. Bates, MC, USN, Chief Ophthalmology Service to the medical staff, Patrick AFB Hospital, Friday, December 13. Dr. Bates' subject was "Ophthalmic Emergencies."

No eye specialist is available at the Air Force Hospital. The Naval Hospital, Orlando serves as the specialty referral center for Patrick AFB.

A Christmas Message From The Chief of Naval Operations

A Christmas message from the Chief of Naval Operations. This holiday season...with all its rejoicing and good cheer...is also a time for thoughts and reminiscence of home, family, and the spiritual values which have a singular meaning to each of us.

Although Christmas 1968 closes a year of profound international difficulty and national challenge, the season also heralds a new year of individual promise.

Much has been asked of you who have served this year in the Navy and Marine Corps of our country. You have given more than was asked. So, too, have your families and loved ones. They have borne the anxieties of separation and loneliness.

Many of you, at this moment, serve far away from the presence of families and the security of your homes. This absence is not pleasant...for the Christmas season is that special time of year when families and friends cherish the pleasures of being together. Were it not necessary, this individual sacrifice would not be asked of you and your families. But it is necessary.

Your service, be it in the United States or the remotest reach of the globe...afloat or ashore...represents your commitment to ensure that your family, your home, your country, and your heritage will not suffer from the hostile incursions of any enemy.

I am proud, as a Navyman and your Chief of Naval Operations, to share with you...this common commitment. By it, hopefully our actions can sometime soon be translated into mankind's most noble desire for real peace on earth and good will toward men.

May your Christmas be blessed by spiritual and material reward and your New Year be one of great happiness and inner satisfaction.

Dear Sir:-

About 1130 hrs. on 6 November I had occasion to call on the "white phone" for an appointment for a refraction. The young lady at the other end of the line had a very friendly voice and was most patient in giving a clear explanation as to why there would be a long delay for this service. The pressure on a person performing her service is very great to be abrupt and curt to an inquirer at a distance. With this young lady there was not the slightest suggestion of impatience and, indeed, it was almost a pleasure to have her give the unwelcome news. She is a real asset in your organization.

Cordially yours,

Wm. K. Jealous,
Colonel AUS (Ret.)

1. This letter is to let you know that I greatly appreciated the care that Dr. Scheffstat and his staff gave me when I was in dire need of medical assistance.

Early Advancement Slated For 111

The New Year brought good news for 111 men aboard the Naval Training Center and Naval Hospital. The news was the early arrival of a flock of new crows.

According to Navy Times, many of the advancements from the Service Wide Examination for Advancement test held last August had been set at the last possible date because of a dollar squeeze in the Navy's manpower budget. When the Navy Department found it had a little more up all advancements scheduled for February and March to January. The Naval Training Center reported 29 men effected by the up-dating of advancements. This included 5 men to Chief Petty Officer, 6 to PO1, 10 to PO2 and 8 to PO3.

At the Naval Hospital low flying crows all but crowded out the stork -- a bird more common to the far side of Lake Baldwin. Sixty-seven hospital staffers still be picking up their new ratings early. Included in the group are 4 new Chief's, 5 PO1's, 22 PO2's and 36 PO3's.

The Recruit Training Command picked up 15 new crows. Five of them will go to new Chief's. In addition, RTC will have one new PO1 four new PO2's and five new PO3's.

Combined, the three commands will have 14 men turning in their white hats on

CPO hats. They are: HM1 Floyd W. Fuller HM1 Robert M. Gaupel HM1 Aubrey D. Johnson HM1 Thomas L. Van Cleave

COMMANDING OFFICER'S MESSAGE

As we celebrate this Christmas Season of 1968 -- the first for Naval Hospital, Orlando -- let us be conscious of the enviable privilege and responsibility our medical and dental staff enjoys in providing for the health, comfort, and happiness of military personnel and their dependents. Scientific progress in medicine and dentistry, tireless devotion to the care of individual patients, and early return to local and far-flung duty stations will contribute significantly to the ultimate attainment of our goals for peace and good will among all men. This hope, compassion, and service for others reveal the true peace-seeking spirit of Christmas.

To each patient and hospital staff member and their families, I wish to extend my sincerest gratitude, kindest regards, and best wishes for a Merry Christmas and the hope for your abundant health, happiness, and prosperity throughout the New Year.

As we celebrate the birthday of Jesus Christ let us humbly ask for the Gift of All Gifts -- "Peace on earth and good will toward men." As citizens of the most powerful, richest, and most resourceful nation on earth, we need this gift above all else. This will remind us that our mission is not conquest, subjugation or tyranny. Rather, it is to extend peace throughout the earth, and to promote good will among all men everywhere. Let us look to the Giver of this gift of gifts for guidance toward this end always.

Corpsmen Receive Commendation

Two Naval Hospital staffers have been cited for outstanding professional performance of duty in ceremonies in the office of the Hospital's Commanding Officer, Captain William G. Lawson. Presented letters of commendation were HM1 Sam P. Hargrove and HM3 James M. Hodge.

HM1 Hargrove, assigned to the Laboratory, was cited for isolating and identifying the organism which causes meningitis under emergency conditions. The process of isolating this organism is according to the Letter of Commendation "a most difficult technical procedure," yet, working through the night, Hargrove was able to provide identification of the organism in time to allow a young child to receive appropriate therapy which resulted in recovery.

HM3 James Hodge was assisting a heart patient into bed in the Hospitals

Intensive Care Unit late in the afternoon of November 30. In his Letter of Commendation Captain Lawson wrote: "you noted that his respirations had ceased and the pulses were absent. Immediately sensing the situation you instituted external cardiac massage...You sought assistance from the Intensive Care Unit personnel and by your combined efforts the patient started heart rhythms."

Only Woman Surgeon In Navy Stationed At Orlando

By VIRGINIA LOOG
Staff Writer

The only practicing woman general surgeon in the U. S. Navy is stationed at the U. S. Naval Hospital in Orlando. She is one of ten women doctors in the Navy medical corps out of a complement of 4,500. There is another woman doctor in residency at the present time who will be a surgeon on completion of this phase of her training.

Dr. Alice O'Dell came here Jan. 13 on her first assignment and holds the rank of lieutenant.

WHILE A FIFTH OF

sixth grade student in a Lebanon, Mo., elementary school, Alice O'Dell did a term paper on the human body. She was fascinated with the muscles, nerve and organ sketches in the books she studied.

That, with the addition of bandaging up cuts on her seven brothers and sisters (her mother hated the sight of blood), was the beginning of her interest in medicine. The more she read, the more interested she became.

"IT WAS AN unending road and I was ready to go down it until I became interested in music. At one point in my education I thought I would major in music (voice) but I went back to medicine and am thankful that I did," Dr. O'Dell said. She is a graduate of Washington University, St. Louis, and did her internship at the University of Virginia Hospital. She has one year of surgical residency and one year of surgical research.

Dr. O'Dell is an interesting contrast in personality traits. Dedicated to her career, she is still enthusiastic about the things women like to do.

SHE MAKES all of her own clothes. "As one of five girls, if I wanted, truly nice things I had to make them," she noted. (All of her sisters also sew.) "I make all of my coats and suits."

She also likes to knit, crochet, cook and sing. She made three sweaters for Christmas presents and crocheted several afghans.

Sewing in grade school in the 4-H Club is credited for much of her skill. "We really worked for those blue ribbons, and if we won and were placed in state competition there was a chance of winning money, so I worked hard," she said.

DR. O'DELL likes to entertain and one of her favorite recipes is a jelled salad which she can mix up in a hurry and it always seems to be a hit.

She takes two packages of strawberry Jello and dissolves this in one and a half cups of water. She adds one large can of crushed pineapple packages of strawberries (juice and all). She then crushes two bananas and mixes everything in a large bowl. She puts half of this in a 9 by 13 pan and places it in the refrigerator to set. When it is ready she covers this with half a pint of sour cream and pours the remaining mixture on top and places back in the refrigerator. It can be made the day before serving and is quite elegant in both appearance and taste.

HER ASSIGNMENT at the naval hospital is her first and also her first visit to Florida. She finds both rewarding. Her work at the hospital is varied since the large retired military community, active personnel and dependants cover the spectrum of age levels, which in berries (juice and surgical possibilities.

Orlando, Florida

Dear Sir:

We would like to express our very sincere appreciation for the prompt and excellent medical attention our three year old son received on the night of 12 January. We were sent to the hospital from McCoy AFB. Dr. Pardee was prompt, concerned and showed interest in the child and in us as parents. He did not hesitate to call the surgeon for consultation and explained things to us as he went. The corpsmen on duty were courteous and efficient. We certainly felt that our son was well cared for and would just like to say to you and your staff "thank you".

Sincerely,

Hospitals Thanked For Good Service

Editor: We hear so much bombastic, frightening and discouraging news — may I offer one piece to cheer those wondering if anything of good news is ever published?

My mother has been a patient in the Sanford Hospital several times, receiving such excellent and cheering care from her fine doctor (Dr. Perez) and the nursing staff that each time she recovered, when by all medical prognosis it was impossible. Now, she is excellently cared for in Sanford Manor Nursing Home.

I was in Orlando Naval Hospital. The very dedicated and efficient Dr. Nackley brought about a most gratifying recovery. Also, the unprecedented esprit de corps and efficiency of all the nurses and aides excels anything I have ever seen or experienced in hospitals — and I have seen many.

By the way, a pat on the back to you. Your paper is fine — and the print not too fine for even an old lady with impaired vision.

INTERLUDE—Captain Lawson, Hospital Commanding Officer, called the visit he enjoyed with the Holiday on Ice girls "the most enjoyable part of my day."

"Holiday On Ice" Girls Visit Naval Hospital

MADE THE PAPER—The girls got a chance to see their own photo's in a local newspaper.

Nine girls from the Holiday on Ice show, playing in Orlando last week, created a temporary "Holiday in the Ward" at the Naval Hospital when they spent the afternoon visiting patients. Under the guidance of LCDR W. P. Davis, Hospital personnel officer and NTC Special Service's Officer, Lt. G. L. Johnson, the girls met briefly with the Hospital's skipper, Captain William G. Lawson and then toured four wards.

On the wards things got off to a slow start. The international group of skaters — one girl was from Germany, another from France and a third from Canada — started by introducing themselves with a "Hi, Sailor". Almost immediately one man said "I'm in the Air Force" while another protested "I'm a Marine!" Once the girls changed their lead to "Are you in the Navy?" things went a little smoother.

For the men in the Hospital, the visit was a more than welcome break in the daily routine. The girls found the visit worth while too. One of them commented, "A lot of stuff we do is just for publicity but, this visit...well, I think we got more out of it than the guys did."

CONVERSATION—Hobbies provided good topics for conversation between patients and the girls.

Sir,
On 10 December 1968 my wife presented me with a son, born by cesarean section. Aside from my wife and life itself this is the greatest gift I could bestow on me.

Your staff had as small part in the arrival of this newest member of our family, and I feel, in his survival and the successful recovery of my wife.

Their professional competence, their efficient and considerate care and genuine concern for my wife and baby greatly eased the pain and anxiety accompanying our sons arrival.

There are too many individuals involved to name in this letter. But to your obstetric and pediatric staff, the nurses and aides of the OB ward and to all who were involved in any small way please extend my sincere and heartfelt thanks.

May this coming year be a joyous and fruitful one to all of you. You and your entire staff are to be commended and our again I give you my sincerest thanks.

Sincerely,
Walter D. Baumann

Harmony With New 'Twist'

Folksy barbershop harmony will wear symphonic dress for a unique presentation in Orlando Municipal Auditorium March 15.

Under the direction of Hermann Herz, the "Symphony of Barbershop Harmony" will combine the Florida Symphony Orchestra with the 50-voice Orange Blossom Chorus in joint concert.

All the old familiar melodies like "Wait Till The Sun Shines, Nellie," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and "Coney Island Baby" take on an entirely new sound as a full symphony orchestra backs up the local chorus.

ORCHESTRATED originally for the Baltimore Symphony by a member of the Society for the Preservation & Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, the "Symphony of Barbershop Harmony" is a tribute to barbershop as one of the three pure forms of American folk music.

It is believed to be the only musical score ever produced for a symphony orchestra with this theme. The Orlando performance in the second half of Saturday night's program will mark its fourth airing in this country.

The first half of the big show will feature two top quartets, the Interstate 4, southern champions made up of two members from Orlando and two from Winter Haven, and the Rag Tag Quartet, another local standout group.

IN ADDITION to the choral numbers with symphonic accompaniment, there will be a pops concert in miniature, a capella choral selections and comedy.

Performance time is 8:15 p.m. Tickets are on sale at Streep's Ticket Agency, 641 N. Orange Ave., and from any member of the barbershop quartet singing society.

Secretary Chafee proud to be back.

Today, I have assumed office as Secretary of the Navy. I rejoin the Navy and Marine Corps team for the third time with great pride and a strong sense of anticipation. This team is second to none and enjoys universal respect for its professional competence, desire for excellence and dedication to the ideals of our nation. I pledge my best efforts in joining with Admiral Moorer and General Chapman to build on these long standing elements of success. The value of the flexibility and mobility of our Navy and Marine Corps forces is demonstrated daily, not only in Southeast Asia, but all around the globe. The challenges ahead of us are great, especially that of adapting seapower to the rapid changes of technology and international relations. I count on each of you for the same loyal support and assistance you so ably and willingly gave my predecessors. I am confident that as we strive together toward our common goals we will continue the Navy/Marine record of outstanding service to our country. I am proud to be aboard.

Signed: John H. Chafee,
Secretary of the Navy.

Surgeon Gen VAdm Davis takes oath

NNMC was again the host for the Change of Command ceremonies for the Surgeon General of the Navy. VAdm Robert B. Brown retired on January 31, from the post which he had held since 1965.

Admiral Brown received the Distinguished Service Medal for creating an "unprecedented state of readiness of the Medical Corps of the Navy," and "providing rapid response to additional medical requirements in support of the Vietnam conflict."

RAdm (now VAdm) George M. Davis, Jr. took the oath of office as the Surgeon General of the Navy and Chief of BuMed.

Admiral Davis said that he would refrain from making any promises but would try to assure that the Navy had the best possible medical care for all authorized personnel.

He also would use every mechanism now available to make the Navy more desirable and more competitive. Research (both scientific and clinical) was marked for expansion. Admiral Davis wants to continue in every available way to make the Navy attractive as a career.

The Navy Band played at the ceremonies and a Naval honor guard carried the colors. (See pages four and five for pictures of the event.)

Dear Captain Lawson,

For many reasons, I owe you this letter. Having been assigned as an in-patient from 12 August to 27 September 1968, I was amazed at the excellent operation of your facility following such a very short transition period.

During my stay as an in-patient, I was under the direct care and supervision of LCDR John B. Fenning, and his assistant, LT Joseph E. Pilon. Although offered as a non-professional opinion, I observed a very, extra heavy workload and an almost impossible schedule, to include emergencies, for these two doctors. Despite this, they made me feel that mine was a special case and gave it daily attention, including week-ends and holidays, in this case-Labor Day. This expression has been offered by all others with whom I have talked whether they be assigned to the orthopedic clinic, orthopedic ward (12) or other wards. My only description for these officers is 'outstanding professionalism and dedication'.

During this same period, I had the opportunity to observe the leadership of LCDR Ethel C. Eusebio. This officer runs a tight ship over there in Ward 8. Assisted by an excellent staff of corpsmen and nurses, my every need, want and desire was immediately attended. She is most deserving of all praise extended.

Presently I am assigned as an out-patient reporting regularly to the Physical Therapy Clinic headed by LCDR L.E. Melvin. A finer person I have never known. An expert in her profession and performs her duties in an exemplary manner. Excellent qualities of leadership.

May I commend LT Mary K Hay who served as night nurse for the week following surgery. Although she had duties in other wards she regularly checked each room of the SOQ and was readily available on call. She always made the right decision and acted promptly. An outstanding person.

Others who assisted me were Drs. Nascero, CDR C.J. McGrew and LT. James V. Snyder.

My congratulations.

Sincerely,

Marvin L. Stephens

OBSERVING THE DRILL-Capt. L. Young, DC, USN, Chief Recruit Dental Service and Capt. B. W. Brender, Commanding Officer of the Recruit Training Command observe one of the first dental procedures done in the temporary Recruit Dental Facility.

Dental Opens Interim Unit

On Tuesday, 4 March 1969, a ribbon cutting ceremony marked the official opening of the Interim Recruit Dispensary and Dental Clinic Facilities located at the Naval Hospital. These facilities, along with the Recruit In-Processing Facility will serve the Recruiting Training Command until construction of a new Recruit Dispensary and Dental Clinic facility is completed in late 1970.

The facilities at the hospital consists of two 31 bed recruit wards, a Dental Clinic of 13 chairs; dispensary facilities including X-ray, laboratory and optometry. In addition to the Interim Dispensary and Dental Clinic facilities, all the staff and facilities of the Naval Hospital will continue to be used to support the recruit population. The buildings used for these interim facilities were formerly hospital wards which were renovated and equipped with funds made available by the Bureau of Naval Personnel and Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. Major equipment items will be relocated to the new dispensary and Dental Clinic when it is ready for occupancy next year.

The Dental Clinic will provide the first operational use of a new concept in Dental operations. Eight of the dental chairs are located in two semi-circular arrangements that differ from the normal dental operating room in that they do not contain the cabinet work, instrument cabinets, etc., but are each supplied from a central instrument area. This arrangement results in less cost for equipment, a smaller instrument inventory and a smoother flow of patients. With the need to provide the maximum dental care for recruits before they are assigned to fleet units, this new concept should permit more dental care than is now possible in the conventional dental operations.

Dear Capt. Pariser —
 I wish to express my deep appreciation to you and your Staff for the wonderful care I received while a patient in Ward 10.

I especially commend and thank Dr. Phillips for his very skilled surgery — and also thank Dr. Davis, and Dr. Wallquist for their interest in my case.

To each nurse and nurses aide I extend my warmest gratitude for their many attentions. Their excellent care and cheerful natures added much to the happiness, as well as comfort, of each patient.

I shall always be grateful to you, Capt. Pariser, for your kindness in giving a full report of my surgery to the doctor at Elmendorf A.F.B. That meant so much to my daughter and her family.

Please accept my apology for this belated note — I've been unable to sit in comfort for several weeks because of a slipped disc.

Again, many, many thanks to you, the doctors and nurses.

1. During the period 24 October 1969 - 7 March 1969 I was a patient at your activity. During this hospitalization I had two major operations and was treated for eight extremely severe gall-bladder attacks.
2. The attention to my problems, the depth of concern, the continuing interest, the constant desire to minimize my discomfort, all coupled with the extreme professionalism displayed by the pertinent individuals merit the highest praise and commendation. This outstanding effort was not confined to members of your organization who dealt with me daily. The staffs of such departments as x-ray, pharmacy, and laboratory, as well as those in the Collection Agency and Patient Affairs, were all exceedingly helpful, prompt, and very solicitous of my welfare. There never was a day, Christmas included, when I failed to receive visits by doctors well aware of my problems. Suffice it to say that I could not have asked for more professional nor personal interest than what I received, whether it was in the ward, intensive care, or at the emergency clinic for unusually early-morning treatment for a gall-bladder attack.
3. To cite by name all those individuals who provided services and support to me would be extremely difficult. Frequently, I was hardly in a condition to realize who was helping me. However, I have attached a list of those individuals who dealt most directly and frequently with me. I regret that the list fails to bring to your attention all the personnel who have helped me; I realize only too well that all your personnel felt that they were merely doing their duty.
4. To you and your command, my utmost thanks not only for a job well done, but a job done with compassion, interest, and professionalism.

Dear Mr. Secretary:

This is to highly commend Captain W. G. Lawson, MC, USN, Commanding Officer U. S. Naval Hospital, Naval Training Center, Orlando, Florida and his entire staff.

We wish to especially commend Doctor I. S. Wiesner and Doctor M. A. Nocero (ranks unknown) of this hospital who provided outstanding treatment to my sister, Mrs. Gwendolyn Opal Duke, the wife of Norris H. Duke, a retired navyman.

Mrs. Duke was admitted to the U. S. Naval Hospital in Orlando during the night of 12 February, 1969 and was released on 19 February. She is continuing to receive outstanding treatment as an outpatient, and for all of this, we are truly grateful. I am exceedingly happy to report that she is feeling better now than she has in years.

Due to my real concern for my mother's and my sister's health, I was very reluctant to accept the promotion to my present position as it necessitates being headquartered in our Capitol city and consistently traveling throughout the State supervising our several field offices. However, now that Captain Lawson and his staff have demonstrated their real concern for retired military personnel and their dependents, I can enjoy a much greater peace of mind. As you can imagine, I am sincerely grateful to all parties involved.

This is the first such letter that I have ever written. This is mentioned due to the fact that I hope that these words of commendation and gratitude will not be taken lightly.

Dear Captain Lawson:

I entered the U.S. Naval Hospital on February 19, 1969, as the result of a heart attack. My overall impression of your hospital and the people assigned to it is exceedingly favorable.

My Doctor, (Lt. Cmdr.) Jack E. Riddings, I feel is not only an outstanding doctor, but also an outstanding individual. I sincerely believe that without Doctor Riddings' ability and God's divine healing power, I would not be alive today.

Unfortunately I did not learn the names of all the nurses and corpsmen in Wards 7 and 8, who assisted in my recovery. However, to nurses Loucensky and Bryant; Corpsmen Maxim, Scott, Ebert and Jones; and those nurses and Corpsmen, whose names I cannot cite, I would like to express my thanks and appreciation for the wonderful job they are doing.

Lt. Gray and Mrs. Smith should also be commended for the excellent preparation and variety of food being served at the hospital.

Having spent most of my Army service in positions of Command I know that the efficiency of any organization is only as good as the ability and leadership of the Commanding Officer. So, much of the credit for the over-all efficient operation of the hospital should go to you.

Captain Lawson, to you and your people, my deep appreciation and thanks.

The Commanding Officer,
US NAVAL HOSPITAL,
Orlando, Fla.

Sir;

During my 28 years of active duty in the US Air Corps and Air Force, injury or illness required a very considerable amount of medical attention in many service hospitals. General hospitals included Walter Reed for 18 months and Brooke General for 4 months.

Since retirement in 1951 much treatment was received at Orlando Air Base Hospital and once at Wilford Hall General, San Antonio, Tex.

Since July of this year I have required much treatment for bronchial asthma in your activity. The courtesy, efficient care and attention received from all concerned has been a pleasant revelation. Never before have I encountered so gratifying an equivalent.

I deeply appreciate the efforts of Doctors Nocero and Bilotta whose prompt and effective treatments have made my life much easier.

The care and attention of the nurses and enlisted men in Ward 8 is extremely commendable and also appreciated.

The courtesy and interest of the Navy Nurse on duty at the reception desk in the Outpatient Clinic is a repeated source of pleasant surprise, almost wonder.

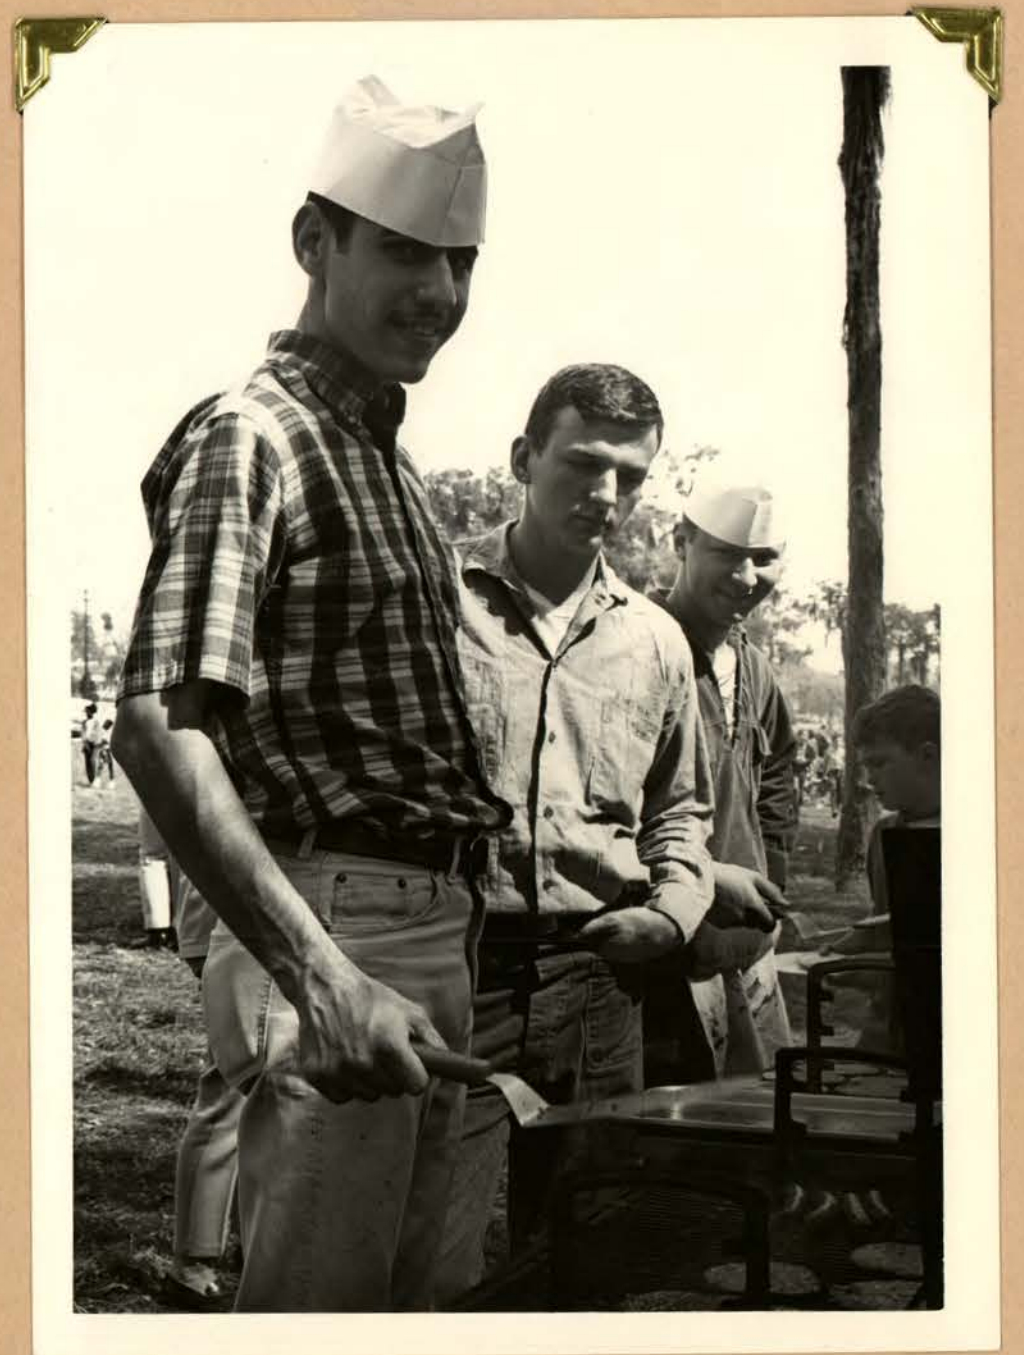

I sincerely thank you for the magnificent efforts that have led to the efficiency of the Orlando Naval Hospital in such a short period of time. This especially in view of the twin problems of adapting an outmoded, sprawling complex in conjunction with the need to organize a completely new organization.

29 March 1969

Dear Sir:

I think it is worthy to bring to your attention the commendable medical work done by HM 3 William Wolfe.

On 23 March 1969 I brought my 12 year son in for emergency treatment of an eye injury. HM 3 William Wolfe recognized an eye hemorrhage which was thought to be an inflammation of the eye.

I am most grateful to this young corpsman without whose knowledge and alertness my son's condition might have become more serious than it is at present. I think he should be encouraged to go further with his medical training. I think he has a good aptitude for a career in this field.

Sincerely Yours,
Mrs Howard C. Ducker

Commanding Officer of the Navy Hospital,
Dear Sir

Please accept my Sincere Thank You for the good, kind and efficient care given my son Clyde C. Clutter.

He was admitted on Mar. 9 a Sunday afternoon, with a heart attack. The swift care at that time gave him almost two more weeks of life.

I feel God willed that Clyde come home for Christmas after eleven years absence, also feel the wonderful care and attention given to him at the Orlando Navy Training Center Hospital was a blessing.

To know he was not alone when he died is a comfort to me.

Please extend my thanks to all who worked for Clyde's recovery. Everyone is so kind. A special Thanks to Dr. Nocero and Mr. LAPPENAN, Nurse Hay, the nurse on duty the night of Mar. 22, and St. Hilling of Patient affairs.

May God Bless each of you.

Dear Hospital Officer's Wives,

I would like to commend all the members of our club on what I regard as a highly successful first year of organization. Each one of you have contributed time and talents which has made this year most enjoyable. I personally wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to all the members and officers for their devotion and loyalty. MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

It is our good fortune to have as members of our club a group of congenial, talented and capable women. Because of the efforts put forth by each of you, we have enjoyed a successful, rewarding year.

It has been my pleasure to serve as president for the past year and I extend at this time to each member of the official board and to each club member my sincere thanks.

THE LAST WORD!

It is with a little bit of sadness and also a sigh of relief that I realize that this is literally my last word! For this is the last issue of Ahoy There for the year.

May I first of all thank my staff for without them there would have been no newsletter. Many thanks to Nancy, my assistant editor, without whom I would have given up long ago; to Ann, Helen, and Cynthia, my reporters whose interviews for "Profiles" were always interesting and whose "Happenings" kept us informed on current "goings-on". Thanks to Hicks and Kathy whose covers we looked forward to each month; to Sharon and Roberta who handled the circulation each month and to Marsha for taking over the last two months as Sharon and Roberta await the birth of their little ones. Thanks to Ashley for her informative book reviews and to Terry for her mouth watering recipe suggestions. Special thanks to Marilyn for information on each month's luncheon and to others who contributed information; to Commander Wells, Mrs. Mansfield, secretary to the Commanding Officer and Administrative Officer, and to the boys in the print shop who so ably printed and stapled our newsletter each month. It's impossible to adequately thank each of you, but may I simply try! Each of you had a hand in shaping the newsletter each and every month - thanks a million for your cooperation.

And now may I say that although it has been a bit of a headache - I have enjoyed editing this our "first newsletter" and in many ways I will truly miss it. The satisfaction of hearing the ones of you say that you enjoyed "Ahoy There" and looked forward to its delivery each month is thanks enough for me! Thank you all and goodbye!

Meet The Staff

HM2 Claire Eichbrecht

"You will be all right now, just try to relax," are words that have been spoken often by this week's Meet the Staff Personality—HM2 Claire Eichbrecht.

Before arriving on board in September of 1968, Claire was stationed at the U. S. Naval Hospital at Portsmouth, Virginia. Although Claire is not now actively engaged in Hospital Corpsman work because of her assignment to the Staff Personnel Office, she still finds time to visit some patients.

Claire has been associated with the medical field all of her life in one way or another. Her father is a Technical Sergeant in the Air Force medical field.

When asked why she chose the Hospital Corpsman field as her job in the Navy she said, "I think it was because I like contact with people, which you get everyday in the caring of the sick. I also like the atmosphere of a hospital and in general I like studying medicine."

Plans for the future will include marriage for Claire in the latter part of May. She is marrying a former Hospital Corpsman whom she met while she was on her last tour of duty at Portsmouth, Va.

"In addition to being a housewife, I hope to go on to college after leaving the Navy in January of 1970 and attain a Bachelor of Science degree," said Claire.

Somehow Claire finds the time from her busy schedule to indulge some of her favorite hobbies—sewing, reading, and music.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

Lieutenant Eisenhower poses on church steps with his bride, the former Mamie Geneva Doud. They were married in Denver, Colo., on July 1, 1916, a year after the young officer was commissioned from the U.S. Military Academy. After graduating in the top third of his class scholastically, young Eisenhower began his military career as an infantry second lieutenant, assigned to the 19th Infantry at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

He Served His Country

Naval Training Center personnel joined the rest of the nation—indeed most of the rest of the world—in mourning the passing of General of the Army and former President Dwight David Eisenhower.

As soon as it was learned that the General had passed away at 12:25 p.m. Friday, March 28, flags at the Naval Training Center, Recruit Training Command and Naval Hospital were lowered to half mast.

The Center went into an official state of mourning with all but essential facilities closed down. Following directions issued by President Richard M. Nixon, Monday was designated as an official day of mourning.

At 8 a.m. Saturday morning the Center's saluting battery began sounding its solemn salutes. A single shot from the battery was fired as the flag opened into the Florida breeze. Other shots followed, one each half hour, until sunset.

On Monday, the day of the official state funeral for the late president, a memorial service was held by RTC's recruit population on the Recruit Drill Field.

A final memorial service was held aboard the Center for staff military and civilian personnel on Tuesday in the Center Chapel.

These were the official trappings of mourning aboard the Center.

There were unofficial, individual feelings too. While young recruits could not perhaps understand the emotion that caused many of the ex-military men passing the General's coffin in Washington to draw to an almost forgotten position of attention and render a salute, those who were older both understood and shared this feeling.

A political opponent once called General Ike a "father image" to Americans. The statement was meant to cost the General votes and yet, what finer tribute could be paid to a man than to say that in the middle of the 20th century that a man was a father to the peoples of the United States of America.

Naval Hospital

Dear Sir:

Enclosed find my check in the amount of $28 to cover the cost of food for my father, R. A. Burt, while hospitalized there last week. When he was discharged Saturday, the young man explained that collections office was closed and asked that I come out again Monday morning. I certainly planned to do that, but found my father to be such an invalid I could not leave until my husband returned to the city last evening. Today I was told that it would be o.k. to mail the check.

I do want to thank you and the wonderful staff you have there at the hospital for the care my father received. At the age of 87, I know that he was even a greater care than the average sick person; yet, your nurses and corpsmen were just so patient and kind to him. I would like very much to commend all those who work on Ward 11.

Again thanking you for the professional and staff care my father received, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. Wm. C. Strickland

To the Hospital Commander:
Sir;

Last week I returned home after a 3 week stay in the N.T.C. Hospital.

I would like to thank Mr. Julian and Mr. Bidwell for their ability and kindness. From the first time I walked into their clinic until the day I was discharged I had complete confidence in both of them.

No matter what department I had to go to or what technician had to come to me every one was pleasant.

All the Nurses (both military and civilian) T.P.N's and the aides on Ward 10 were always thoughtful and understanding.

I would especially like to commend B Corp Waves B. Berthiaume, Jean Brunner and M. Fawc for the long, hard hours they work and for their helpfulness ---- not only to me but to everyone.

Orchids to an outstanding Naval crew from an Air Force wife.

Sincerely,

NAVY NURSE:

APPRECIATION, GRATITUDE AMONG HER REWARDS

By WANDA SNOW
Sentinel Staff

One of the results of being a career Navy nurse, according to Cmdr. Adelyn M. Yankoski NC, USN, is having a well-traveled miniature poodle.

There's much more to being a nurse in the Navy, though. Today they celebrate 61 years of "helping people."

THE NURSE Corps, U. S. Navy was officially established on May 13, 1908. An act of Congress authorized one superintendent and as many chief nurses, nurses and reserve nurses as necessary.

Commander Yankoski, chief of nursing service at the Naval Hospital, Naval Training Center, has witnessed some of the rapid expansion of Naval nursing program. She arrived in Orlando in May, 1968 to help set up the hospital. In the past year, its expansion has been so great that a new hospital is planned for the near future.

THE NAVY nurses have always been on the move. In fact, they had a head start on Florence Nightingale. A Navy surgeon wrote about the characteristics of nurses in 1811: "humane disposition and tender manners; active and healthy... neat and cleanly." And they still "attend with fidelity and care upon all the sick committed to their charge..."

COMMANDER Yankoski has found that being a nurse in the Navy is a lot like being a nurse anywhere. It's not all clean sheets and smiling patients. Yet there are many rewards, the greatest perhaps being the honest appreciation and gratitude of those you help nurse back to health.

Being a Navy nurse has professional advantages too. Naval hospitals have extensive research programs, efficient modern equipment for more thorough patient care, and continuous in-service training programs.

Nurses can specialize in the field of their greatest interest: nuclear nursing, research, anesthesiology, teaching, administration, operating room management, general nursing, clinical areas, etc.

"HYPERBARIC Nursing" is the Navy nurses' newest in-service training program.

As she looks toward retirement from the Nurse Corps, Commander Yankoski is considering Florida among the first on her list. She enjoys lakefront living and golf, as a matter of fact, all outdoor activities. "I'm beginning to take on boating and fishing too," she said. Meanwhile, her poodle may be thinking of writing his memoirs, "Travels with Adelyn."

The Naval Hospital, Orlando has established a Blood Donor Center for the collection of blood in support of the WESPAC (Western Pacific) Whole Blood Program. The WESTPAC Whole Blood Program is a program serving our combat forces in Vietnam.

Whole blood collected at the Center is processed and shipped to McGuire Air Force Base, Philadelphia, Pa. for further shipment to hospital facilities in Vietnam. More than 80 recruits from Recruit Training Command volunteered on the first day of operation and they donated a total of 60 pints of blood for the program.

At the present time donations are being sought primarily from members of Recruit Training.

Seaman Recruit D. L. Adkins, of Company 88, opened the center by donating the first pint of blood. Adkins is a native of Dallas, Texas and will be graduating from RTC in several weeks.

Lt. D. L. Collings, MC, USN, provides instructions to each recruit concerning the program and screens each applicant for eligibility as a blood donor.

HM3 Geuther Receives Citizenship

"I do." These two words were given by HM3 Heide Geuther as she took the Oath of Allegiance to the United States. Heide became an American citizen Tuesday, June 24, in the Main Court Room of the U.S. Courthouse and Post Office Building in Orlando.

The Honorable George C. Young, United States District Judge, presided over the naturalization proceedings in which Heide was one of 40 individuals to receive citizenship.

The posting of the Colors was provided by the Naval Training Center. Guest speaker for the occasion was Lieutenant Commander James E. Toms, JAGC, of the Legal Department of the Naval Training Center.

In his message to the new citizens LCDR Toms stated, "My hopes for America's future are that we come to a full realization of the most remarkable ideals conceived by man: a government of the people, by the people, for the people; and peace on earth--good will toward man."

Heide is presently assigned to on-the-job training in the Electrocardiogram Division at the Orlando Naval Hospital. When queried as to how she felt now that she was an American, Heide replied, "I am very proud."

Although Heide does not intend to make the Navy a career, she stated that she had and is receiving invaluable training that would certainly help her in her civilian pursuits.

Hospital Corps Celebrates 71st Anniversary

ADVANCEMENTS—Standing with 62 members of his staff who have just received promotions, Captain William G. Lawson, MC, USN, is proud of the enlisted men and women of the Hospital Corps who have received 183 advancements since the Naval Hospital was established on 1 July 1968.

SILVER STAR MEDAL—HM2 (then HM3) James A. Machmer receives congratulations from Captain Lawson after being awarded the Silver Star Medal. HM2 Machmer was cited for his, "... conspicuous gallantry and exceptional professionalism under fire". While administering a blood transfusion to a wounded Marine, the bottle was shattered by enemy shrapnel. Determining that his blood was compatible with that of his patient, Petty Officer Machmer administered a direct transfusion and completed this lifesaving treatment in total darkness while under fire from enemy". The conclusion of the citation from the President that, "...By his courage and selfless devotion to duty, he undoubtedly saved the life of one Marine and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service", is the fulfillment of the mission of the Hospital Corps—to keep as many men at as many guns as many days as possible.

TO THE NAVAL HOSPITAL STAFF:

The Hospital Corps of the United States Navy celebrates its 71st Anniversary June 17.

Founded by an Act of Congress in 1898, the Hospital Corps had earlier beginnings when a surgeon's mate served in the ships of the Revolutionary War and "loblolly boys" were assistants to the surgeon in the early and mid-1800's. Pharmacists Mates served with distinction since the establishment of the Corps through two world wars and continue to serve under the title of Hospital Corpsman which was adopted in 1948.

Throughout the years members of the Hospital Corps have earned the respect of our nation for their valor in action and dedication to duty in war and in peace.

In 1946, Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal awarded the Hospital Corps a special commendation for its outstanding record of service and devotion to duty during World War II—the first time in military history that a single Corps has been so honored.

As a testimony to their courage twelve of the 21 Medals of Honor presented to Naval personnel during World War II and the Korean War were awarded to Hospital Corpsmen. In Vietnam, the Hospital Corpsman continues to display the courage and skill that has been their hallmark for 71 years. The saving of lives in combat is witnessed by the 18 Navy Crosses, 80 Silver Stars, 158 Bronze Stars, 3271 Purple Hearts and numerous other decorations awarded to Corpsmen for service in Vietnam. Not recognized by medals, but an important part of their lives is the medical services the Corpsmen bring to the Vietnamese people.

The "esprit de Corps" of the Hospital Corpsmen begins with their intensive training in Basic Hospital Corps School, is enriched during their initial assignment and further training in a Naval Hospital, and is brought to flower in their assignments to duty aboard the ships and stations of the Navy and with the Fleet Marine Forces where they provide the best medical care to our sailors and marines, as they have done for seventy-one years.

The Naval Hospital, Orlando is proud to have on its staff 213 members of the Hospital Corps. These men and women are dedicated to the mission of the Hospital Corps—"To keep as many men at as many guns as many days as possible." This complex mission requires from each member of the Corps a versatility neither demanded nor expected of other enlisted ratings in the Navy.

Wherever you find the Navy, wherever you find the Marine Corps, there you will find the Navy Hospital Corpsmen. In times of peace, he toils unceasingly, day and night, often in routine monotonous duties. In times of war, he is on the beaches with the Marines, is employed in amphibious operations, in transportation of wounded by air, in the front battle lines, on all types of ships, submarines, aircraft carriers, and landing craft. In short, wherever medical service may be required, the Hospital Corpsman is there, not only willing but prepared to serve his country and his fellow man above and beyond the call of duty.

All Hands at Naval Training Center, Orlando are proud to salute the Hospital Corps on its 71st Anniversary and joins with Navy men and women everywhere in offering congratulations and appreciation for a job WELL DONE.

As the Hospital Corps marks its 71st Anniversary, I join with your fellow staff members in extending our very best wishes. From your beginning as a Corps on 17 June 1898, you have been a source of pride to the Navy. In peace and in war, you give selflessly of your time and talents in bringing the best of medical care to Navy and Marine Corps personnel and their families. It is a great honor for your colleagues in the Medical Department to share the gratitude of the entire Navy for your service throughout the years.

I know that in the years ahead you will continue to meet every challenge as you have done so successfully in the past. Your performance here in Orlando in the first year of our hospital has been a source of pride and satisfaction to myself, the staff, and our patients. I salute each and every one of you and offer my heartiest congratulations, and a sincere WELL DONE.

SURGERY—HM3 Heidi Geuther is instructed in suturing technique by CDR. W. M. Phillips, MC, USN. Hospital Corpsmen must be proficient in the minor surgery requirements and are prepared for this responsibility by a continuing training program at the Naval Hospital. HM3 Geuther one of the 22 WAVEs at the hospital participates as does her male counterparts in all the duties required of a trained hospital corpsman.

TRAINING—HN D. Omness takes a post-operating blood pressure in the hospital's recovery room under the guidance of Lt. Louise Coughlin, NC, USN. HN Omness recently reported to the Naval Hospital from Basic Hospital Corps School and is undergoing a period of further training before he is assigned to a fleet or shore station.

MEDAL OF HONOR—HMCS (then HMC) William R. Charette is greeted by General David M. Shoup, USMC, then Commandant of the Marine Corps in the White House Rose Garden where the late President John F. Kennedy hosted the holders of the Congressional Medal of Honor. Senior Chief Charette was awarded the Nation's highest decoration by the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower for gallantry during the Korean War. The citation accompanying the award is a tribute to Senior Chief Charette and the Hospital Corps of the Navy.

Hospital Corpsmen Earned Reputation

WASHINGTON...He is 22 years old and probably from the southwestern or midwestern United States. He is a high school graduate and more than likely has gone to college. He has been in the Navy for about four years and the chances are very good that one of those years was spent in Vietnam. More often than not he asks for a second tour "over there." His outfit celebrated 71 years of service on June 17.

Who is this dedicated young man? He is a Navy Hospital Corpsman. He may be part of the staff of a large, modern, military hospital, or he may be the medical department on a destroyer or with a Marine battalion.

This man is a highly trained specialist who has earned a high place in the annals of Navy history by his courage, knowledge and devotion to duty in war and peace.

The Hospital Corps has a long, proud history. In 1799, Congress authorized an Act which provided that some of the members of a ship's crew were to be charged with the specific duty of attending to sick and wounded men in a place on board ship set aside for that purpose. They were known as "loblolly boys" for the porridge or loblolly they carried to men who were unable to feed themselves.

The "loblolly boys" later became known as surgeon's stewards and the heretofore lowly corpsman found himself ranking second after the leading petty officer of the ship. In later years, this title changed to apothecary, to bay man and finally, in 1898, with the establishment of the Hospital Corps, he became the hospital Corpsman.

Today's hospital corpsman is a far cry from the boy who carried the surgeon's instruments during the Navy's early days. Well-educated and well trained, he is a versatile and vital part of the Navy.

The corpsman begins his training at one of the Navy's two Hospital Corps schools at Great Lakes, Ill., or San Diego, California. He studies a concentrated 14 week course covering such subjects as anatomy, physiology, minor surgery and the principles and techniques of patient care.

After he completes this "basic training", he is assigned to a hospital in order to gain experience in patient care on a ward. When he finishes this phase of the training, he may specialize in one of a wide variety of fields including submarine medicine, pharmacy, X-ray, medical photography and medical administration.

Completion of this advanced training will find the corpsman ready for assignment in the field. Known not only for his skill but also for his long record of courage under fire, a corpsman is a welcome, reassuring sight to the rest of the nation's fighting men. The pages of history are full with the deeds of the corpsmen who put their lives on the line to care for their charges.

The traditional "well done" is appropriate on the 71st anniversary of the Hospital Corps, and yet it does not say quite enough. For the men and women who owe their lives to the skill of the Hospital Corpsman, "well done" doesn't begin to tell the story. How do you thank someone who would routinely risk his life for your well-being?

Hospital Corps 71st Year

AN OPEN LETTER FROM THE SURGEON GENERAL TO ALL HOSPITAL CORPSMEN ON THE 71ST ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDING OF THE HOSPITAL CORPS

As Surgeon General of the United States Navy, I am pleased to extend my most sincere congratulations and very best wishes to the men and women of the Hospital Corps of the Navy on your 71st Anniversary.

Since the beginning of the Corps, 17 June 1898, corpsmen have served the Navy and Marine Corps afloat and in the field in a most outstanding manner.

From the beginning of the present conflict in Southeast Asia, your corps has expanded rapidly to a current strength of over 31,000. My personal appreciation for the experience and guidance afforded the newer members of the corps by the senior petty officers cannot be overemphasized. The response by all members of the corps to the increased demands placed upon the Navy Medical Department has been a source of great pride to me. Your superb performance in Vietnam and throughout the world is a tribute to the Navy.

I am confident that you will continue to serve our nation in peace and war in the best traditions of the Naval Service as you have done so ably in the past. Congratulations and WELL DONE!

NTC MARKS 1ST ANNIVERSARY

Since the Naval Training Center, Orlando, was commissioned one year ago, today, there have been many physical changes in the landscape aboard the Center which had been the site of Orlando Air Force Base since December 1940.

One year ago this morning formal and traditional commissioning ceremonies were held here establishing the Naval Training Center, the Recruit Training Command, the Naval Hospital, and the Navy Finance Office. Additionally, command of the Naval Training Device Center, whose members had arrived at Orlando in July 1967, was shifted to the Chief of Naval Materiel from the Chief of Naval Research on this date, one year ago.

Since the start of the military construction program in May 1967 the U. S. Navy has expended $33.4 million in new construction at the Navy's third, and most modern Training Center. This figure includes such major projects as the erection of recruit barracks, staff barracks, chapel, reception center, administration building, mess hall, training building, utilities, drill field, training pool, gym, fieldhouse theater, various warehouses, community center, ship mockup, the second increment of the Advanced Undersea Weapons School, sidewalks, and grassing.

At the Recruit Training Command during the past year eight buildings were completed. These are: the training building, which houses 26 classrooms and the closed-circuit television studios and allied training facilities; 4600-man mess hall, four recruit barracks; reviewing stand; and a Community Center for utilization by recruits. This Center includes a Navy Exchange retail outlet, barbershop, laundry, dry cleaning facilities, tailoring pickup station, portrait studio, telephone exchange, vending machine lounge, post office, and a branch of the First National Bank of Orlando.

Buildings now under construction at the Recruit Training Command include the fifth and sixth barracks, the combination gym, theater fieldhouse, and swimming pool; recruit chapel; receiving barracks; training ship mockup; the administration building and reception center.

A major milestone was reached at the Naval Training Center in October with the arrival of the first recruits. The first graduation was held December 12 and saw recruits from all 50 states being sent to the fleet who will be able to tell their grandchildren that they were the first recruits to be "trained in Orlando".

Since that first graduation most young men that joined the Navy from their hometowns in the Southeastern sector of the United States have come to Orlando for their first glimpse of Navy life. To date, the Recruit Training Command has graduated 8,939 young men into the Navy following nine weeks of intensive training.

Of this number, 4,612, representing 59 percent of the graduating sailors, went directly to advanced schooling where they specialize in more technical aspects of Navy life prior to receiving on the job training in their specified fields in the fleet.

In addition to members of the regular Navy, the Recruit Training Command also trained 1,276 members of the Naval Reserve during their yearly two-week training cycle, and 205 Sea Cadets, who are Navy League sponsored youngsters whose two-week training program is similar to that of the Reservists.

The largest percentage of recruits trained, so far, have come from Florida providing 22.3% of the total number of recruits trained followed by Georgia with 16.4%. Texas and Tennessee follow with 10.5%. Arkansas provided 9% of the recruits while North Carolina sent 8.7%. Alabama and South Carolina 8.4% and Mississippi totaled 4.4% while Louisiana accounted for 4% and Virginia 2%.

All the other of the 50 States added up to 9.4% as the majority of their native sons were trained at the other two Naval Training Centers located at Great Lakes, Illinois, and San Diego, California.

One of the smaller, but certainly an important activity, especially to the Navyman and civilian employees aboard the Naval Training Center, is the Navy Finance Office, also commissioned on July 1, 1968.

Since that date, up through mid-June, the Navy Finance Office has paid out a military payroll of $8.5 million and a civilian payroll of $17 million.

Over the past year one of the busiest establishments at the Naval Training Center, Orlando, was the Naval Hospital. From July 1, 1968 through the first of June the hospital staff handled 143,863 outpatient visits; brought 513 babies into this world; admitted 4,550 patients; filled 199,128 prescriptions; handled 202,742 lab procedures, took 74,142 X-rays; held physical examinations on 32,735 persons; and immunized 224,447 people against various diseases.

The wing of the hospital that houses the Dental Department saw 133,703 people visit their area as they handled that many dental procedures.

In addition to the statistics compiled from the major organizations that were commissioned on July 1, 1968, some interesting "fact and figures" were gleaned from various departments and divisions aboard the Naval Training Center. For instance the Pass and Identification Division of the Security Department issued a total of 18,634 decals that are affixed to vehicle bumpers authorizing Navyman, civilian employees, retired military, and vendors entrance to the Naval Training Center. Of this number, 103 decals were issued to Flag Rank officers which are general and admirals.

The Chaplain's Department conducted 854 Divine Services at the Naval Training Center. Attending the services were 118,733 men and their dependents and 91,262 recruits. There are seven Chaplains attached, five of whom are Protestants and two Roman Catholics. One of the seven is attached to the Naval Hospital. In addition to conducting Divine Services, the Chaplains' Department held 430 classes on moral guidance subjects with recruits; 2,207 personal counselling interviews; performed 39 weddings and officiated at 22 funerals.

Regular Divine Worship, each Sunday, at the Naval Training Center includes four Catholic Masses, seven Protestant Services, one Jewish Service, one Christian Science Service and one Latter Day Saints Service.

In addition to the Chaplain's Department there is another activity that also satisfies the inner man... the Center Mess Hall. Since the new mess hall opened on September 23, 1968, Navy cooks have prepared and served approximately 3,400 recruits and 200 staff personnel daily, at an average daily cost of $4,880.

An average meal reads something like this: 264 gallons of coffee; 700 pounds of breaded shrimp; 600 gallons of milk; 500 pounds of frozen green beans; 1,300 pounds of fresh cucumbers;

1,400 pounds of fresh potatoes; 3,000 pounds of bread; 1,000 pounds of veal roast.

Since the day the mess hall opened the hungry recruits and the sailors of the Naval Training Center have consumed 631,434 pounds of meat and poultry and 37,698 pounds of seafood. The cooks have dispensed 797,500 pounds of potatoes and 845,494 pounds of canned vegetables. The Navyman evidently believe "breakfast is the most important meal" as they have eaten 125,870 dozen eggs and 163,200 doughnuts.

They have drunk 292,000 gallons of fresh milk and 43,900 gallons of chocolate milk in addition to 160,000 gallons of fruit drink and 9,885 gallons of orange and grapefruit juice. Additionally, and in true Navy fashion, the recruits and the staff have consumed 970,000 cups of coffee.

Within the past year the Naval Training Center's contribution to the economy of central Florida amounted to $45,081,000. With the continuation of the military construction program and the expansion of activities aboard

NAVAL TRAINING CENTER RECRUITS FORM LONG FIGURE ONE
... Navy's Orlando operation is one year old today

Navy Unit Marks First Birthday

By SKIP JOHNSON
Sentinel Staff

The Orlando Naval Training Center will be one year old today, but there will be no celebration to commemorate it.

There will be no cake cutting, no party, no parade, and the only blowing of bugles will be reveille and taps.

But celebration or no celebration, the day will be a milestone for Orlando and the U.S. Navy.

Not only was the training center commissioned July 1, 1968, but so was the Recruit Training Command, the Naval Hospital and the Navy Finance Office.

Additionally, command of the Naval Training Device Center, whose members had arrived at Orlando in July 1967, was shifted to the Chief of Naval Materiel from the Chief of Naval Research.

Since that day—a hot, muggy day in Orlando—the Recruit Training Command has graduated 8,939 men into the Navy. The first ones arrived in October, and the first graduation ceremony, on Dec. 12, sent men from each of the 50 states into the fleet.

Also since that day, the mess hall has served 1.3 million meals at a cost of $1.8 million. The finance office has paid $25.5 million in salaries to civilians and military personnel. The dental department has taken care of 134,000 persons. The chaplain's department has conducted 850 services for more than 200,000 persons. And the hospital has admitted 4,500 patients—including 515 women whose babies were born there.

Since the start of the military construction program in May 1967, the Navy has spent $33.4 million on new construction at its third and most modern training center.

During the last year alone eight buildings were completed. These include the training building, the 4,600-man mess hall, four recruit barracks, reviewing stand and community center.

Within the last year, the training center's contribution to Central Florida's economy totaled $45 million. But during the coming year it is expected to increase to $51.8 million.

Dear Sir:

I am a retired officer who has recently been given an annual physical examination at your hospital.

I wish to thank you, and in particular, Lt. B. R. Lowery M.D. for the exceptionally thorough examination and personal attention. Dear Captain,

May I take this opportunity to express my thanks and appreciation for making the facilities and staff under your command available to me in my time of need. The care which I received has been outstanding.

When I was hospitalized with congestive heart failure, Dr. Nocero did a remarkable job in coping with the situation. He is, in my opinion, a very good informed doctor.

Again, most recently, Doctor Giddings ministrations have been outstanding. It is rare in this day and age when one meets up with a practitioner as painstaking, thorough, solicitous, and dedicated as I found Doctor Giddings to be.

Further, the nurses and corpsmen have been wonderful and helpful in making my stay as comfortable as possible. Especially so Nurse Louzenski with whom I had the most contact during my stay.

Although I am sure you are aware of the qualities of your staff, I want you to know, for whatever they are worth, my feelings on the subject.

Again my thanks and best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

DAYTONA BEACH — The Medal of Honor winners who are guests here this week for a series of receptions and the Medal of Honor 400 stock car race come from all walks of life and from throughout the nation.

How each of these unusual men won the nation's highest award for bravery is a story in itself. Their feats leading to the award are recounted briefly here:

WILLIAM R. CHARETTE, Winter Park: As a medical corpsman with the First Marines in Korea in 1950, Charette threw himself on a wounded man, absorbing the blast of a nearby grenade. Though bleeding from facial wounds and dazed by shock, he tore off part of his own clothing to bandage the wounded man, later protecting another injured Marine with his battle vest. During heavy enemy fire he repeatedly moved about standing upright to lend more effective aid to the wounded.

Dear Sir,

I wish to express the gratitude of myself and my 17 year old son, Mark R. Chase, for the assistance so cheerfully extended Mark by HML Roland Flower, Urology Clinic, during May, June and July 1969.

Mark became seriously ill on 27 May and was taken to McCoy Dispensary. He was examined by Dr. Friedman, who noted extreme urology problems, referring us to Dr. Wm. Daniel after determining he could not be seen at your facility immediately. Dr. Daniel advised forcing fluids, medication, and additional tests. He made appointment at Urology Clinic for 29 May.

Upon arrival at Orlando Naval Hospital Urology Clinic we were advised an IVP was to be performed to determine the nature of Mark's problem. At this time we were introduced to HML Flower. An IVP had been attempted several months previously at McCoy. This resulting in vein collapse and after 3 attempts the patient lost consciousness. HML Flower advised us he would take precautions to eliminate this problem, explained them to us, and then proceeded with the precautions and testing.

The patient had been flooded with fluids and many X-rays were done before any conclusions could be made by the doctor. I was kept informed of the progress, by HML Flower, as he made trips from Surgery to X-ray with the films.

Medication was prescribed by the Urologist and we were advised to return 26 June for another appointment and another IVP, to be performed at X-ray. Results of this IVP were poor due to improper handling of appointment.

On 3 July HML Flower called and said due to Problems on the 26 June X-rays Dr. Julien wished another IVP be scheduled on July 7. HML Flower stated he would perform the testing at 11 AM. Mark and I reported to the Urology Clinic and the IVP was performed with excellent results.

It is a pleasure to have medical services extended by a technician of HML Flowers capability. At all times, this busy technician was performing a very technical procedure and yet reassured the patient with a highly professional medical bearing, a pleasant manner, and much appreciated concern. Mark and I take this opportunity to thank HML Flower for his kindness and concern.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Marlin L. Esh

Recently, I had some routine dental treatments and instructions from Technician J. Dorman. It is most gratifying to know that your organization has such capable personnel.

Due to malocclusion, I naturally take extra precautions to preclude the need for periodontal work. Technician Dorman has, in the two visits I have had with her, been more helpful in this area than anyone I have seen in several years.

She is a very pleasant and most conscientious person and as a result, does exceptionally fine work.

I appreciate the support which I have been getting from your organization. I know Technician Dorman would also appreciate learning from you of the fine job she is doing.

1. I am well aware of the unfavorable ratio of medical support personnel to patient population, and I know you receive a great many complaints for services that are difficult, or impossible, to render. As a result, you probably receive many more complaints than kudos. May I offer a well-deserved kudos?

2. Several months ago, my wife, Barbara S. Miller, had to have a serious periodontal operation at the Florida Sanitarium and Hospital. The treatment and operation were quite complex and the total cost was well over $1,000 which was refunded to me 25 July 1969. Through the diligent efforts of Lieutenant Hilling of your staff, including much paper-work and research, he was able to make a successful claim through the CHAMPUS System.

3. I sincerely appreciate the personal effort and attention on the part of Lieutenant Hilling, who cheerfully and unselfishly devoted a great deal of time in my behalf.

The case was unsuspensable - patients were always first - dispositions of personnel were remarkable and I feel you should truly be proud of these people under the able direction of Lt. Cmdr. E. Joyce.

I speak to you as a present school teacher and former Air Force Nurse.

At present I'm continuing care under a very fine surgeon, Dr. Lemming, of whom I'll write later.

Dear Capt. Larson,
You are a surgical patient at your hospital very recently (Aug. 13-19) due to some technical circumstances,
I was assigned to ward 6, the Maternity Unit.
I just want to congratulate you on your excellent staff there!
At a time, when they undoubtedly carried a double workload, or worked under somewhat adverse conditions, they were always of an efficient, courteous, friendly & pleasant manner.
This held true from your ward nurses, L.P.N.'s, Aides, Carpenter - and of course the Doctors! -
I have been in and out of Service Hospitals, State Side as well as Overseas. Service was always good! Somehow, I've never felt compelled to write a "Thank you" note, as I do at this time. So far this was - if I may phrase it in such a way - a "most enjoyable operation & stay in the hospital".
There was dead "personal touch"
so rare in a hospital...
Thank you all again,
from a most grateful patient.

1. On 12 and 14 August, 1969, I was examined at the Dental Clinic of the Naval Hospital Orlando for a toothache apparently caused by a peridontal condition. Home treatment was prescribed, but on the afternoon of Saturday, 16 August, the pain was so severe that I sought emergency treatment. Upon arrival at the Dental Clinic about 1800, the uniformed personnel on duty promptly informed the Dental Duty Officer who, upon learning the nature of the case, conferred by telephone with Commander T.W. Mc Kean, the doctor who conducted the examination on the 14th of August.
Commander McKean immediately proceeded from his home to the Clinic and performed an extraction quickly and with almost no discomfort to the patient, even though he worked without his regular technical staff.

2. The prompt, efficient and cheerful service rendered by the Dental Staff is deeply appreciated. I wish particularly to cite the courteous and solicitous manner and the obvious professional competence of Commander McKean. An experience such as this is most gratifying to retired personnel.

Guess Baby's Name

By JO ANN ROBINSON
Staff Writer

"It's an astronaut!" Dr. J. E. Winker of the Orlando Naval Training Center Hospital made the announcement to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Byron Chunn of Orlando following the birth of a 7 lb. 8 1/4 oz. boy Sunday afternoon at 5:10 p.m., just 53 minutes after Apollo astronauts Aldrin and Armstrong became the first men to land on the moon.

IN HONOR of the occasion, the Chunn's had already decided to name the baby David Joseph Aldrin Chunn if it should be a boy. MU 2 Joseph B. Chunn, father of the baby, told reporters he and his wife decided to name the baby after one of the astronauts if it was born either the day of the moon landing or the day of the moon walk.

"We decided that because it was something new for us and something new for the world — having a man on the moon, that is — to name the baby after Aldrin," the father said. "We picked Aldrin because that name fit in so well with the other names we gave him."

Dr. Winker decided that the description "astronaut" was the perfect way to tell the mother it was a baby boy.

CHUNN said that when he brought his wife to the hospital at 3 a.m. he was "hoping it would arrive as close to touchdown as possible."

Chunn, a musician in the Navy Band at the naval Training Center, said he has been in Orlando since September, and will probably be stationed here at least until March, when his enlistment expires. The Chunn's are originally from South Bend, Ill.

3 Named After Astronauts

By RON WIGGINS
Sentinel Staff

Central Florida has three moon babies and counting, area hospitals report.

In each case, the parents made their own indelible record of America's moon landing Sunday by naming their progeny after one of the moon walkers.

RHONDA NEIL Maguire, was the only lunar lass and she was born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert James Maguire of Eau Gallie at 10:05 p.m. She tipped the scales at eight pounds, which on the moon incidently, would be about 1.3 pounds.

Closest to the 4:17 p.m. lunar landing mark was David Joseph Aldrin Chunn of Orlando, born at 5:10 p.m. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Chunn.

HIS FATHER, a Navy Band musician, said the couple had planned on naming the baby after one of the astronauts if it was born on the day of the moon landing. "We picked Aldrin because that name fit in so well with the other names we gave him."

Michael Neil Pemberton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald J. Pemberton of Apopka earned his middle name by being born at Orange Memorial Hospital within three hours of the moon landing.

Dear CAPT LAWSON,

On behalf of the members and committee men of MCAS Troop #282 of Beaufort, S. C. I wish to express our deepest thanks to you and all concerned at the hospital for your kind and generous hospitality shown to us when we recently visited you on the occasion of the Apollo 11 Moonshot.

You made each trooper feel like he was a very special guest. The impression that you left with them will always be a most happy memory. The Mess Hall deserves a word of thanks as the food there rated outstanding in their report back.

I trust that the enclosed plaque might become at least a small memory of a bunch of boys who are indeed grateful to you for helping make it possible for them to see the historical launching of the first men to visit the moon.

Sincerely yours,

Nurse Attends Coronary Course

Lieutenant Commander Shirlee Y. Thomas, who is stationed at the U. S. Naval Base in Orlando, is attending Coronary Care Classes at Tampa General Hospital in Tampa.

This course is believed to be the first in Florida to be constructed in the way that a post-graduate course is. It will continue for four weeks and is designed to prepare staff nurses and supervisors to function adequately in coronary care units or wards.

Nurses study such things as the philosophy of coronary care, applied anatomy, the nurse's role, electrocardiography, diagnostic procedures, the use of drugs, emergency treatment such as external heart massage, the law and coronary care, the emotional and psychological effects of stroke, and diet for the cardiac patient.

She graduated from the Missouri Methodist School of Nursing in 1957. In 1959, she joined the Navy, because she wanted to travel. Since graduation, LCDr. Thomas has been a surgical nurse in San Diego, California, in the surgical wards in Yokosuka, Japan, and OB and Ortho in Memphis, Tennessee. Staff nurse in Da Nang, Vietnam, and Charge Nurse in the Intensive Care Unit and Recovery Room at the Orlando base.

One of its purposes is to train nurses from places where there are few if any personnel knowledgeable about advanced techniques of coronary care.

Miss Thomas will return to Orlando to help establish a coronary care unit on the base.

The Florida Heart Association is sponsoring this coronary care program. It was working closely with hospital administrators in all parts of Florida under a grant from the Florida Regional Medical Program (FRMP).

The FRMP is one of 55 in the country. It is sponsored by the federal government with the purpose of encouraging cooperation among local health services which will improve the quality of medical care for victims of heart disease, cancer, stroke and related diseases.

HEART MASSAGE—Mrs. Grace Brazer applies external heart massage, while Lieutenant Commander Shirlee Thomas practices cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Both are emergency techniques.

DR. MCGREW & FAMILY SPEND HOURS AT EDGEWOOD BOYS' RANCH

TOUR RTC—Boys from the Edgewood Boys' Ranch recruit graduation in July, tour the Recruit Training Center after attending a STUDY OCEANOGRAPHY—Mrs. Helen Wahl, a trustee, and one of the boys get an explanation on oceanography at the Naval Training Device Center.

EXPLANATION—During their day at the Center the boys were given an explanation of what goes on at the Advanced Undersea Weapons School.

Dr. Clinton J. McGrew, Jr., his wife, Marion, and family have one of the most rewarding hobbies of any Naval family stationed in Orlando. Dr. McGrew is on the board of trustees of the Edgewood Boys' Ranch. The Chief of Medicine and Chief of the Outpatient Clinic here at the Naval Hospital spends part of three or four and sometimes more days a week at the ranch. Marion McGrew spends every Wednesday at the ranch assisting as secretary.

The McGrew family also takes in boys from the ranch for the weekend. Dr. McGrew advises the boys on their medical needs and boys who are military dependents are treated at the Naval Hospital.

Jack Lynd, director of Edgewood Boys' Ranch, has been with the ranch since its beginning in May of 1966. "Aunt Minnie" Rouse has leased 116 acres of land on the shore of Lake Hiwassee. The ranch is located on Steer Lake Road about three miles southwest of Orlando.

A $45,000 building is under construction to house the boys with plans for building three more living quarters and a dining hall in the future. With the completion of the first living quarters the ranch will be able to accommodate 35 boys with an expected enrollment of 100 after the other facilities are completed.

The only requirement of eligibility is that the boys be first-offense delinquents between the ages of 10 and 16, live in Central Florida and are committed by the Judge of Orange County Juvenile Court as an alternative to going to the State Industrial Training Schools.

The purpose of the ranch is to provide boys with Christian leadership, love, security, discipline and the pursuit of happiness to which every American boy is entitled. Before a boy can be accepted at the ranch his parents must agree to return to the church of their preference and work with the pastor of that church in an attempt to work out the problems that may have initiated the boy's misbehavior. A condition of the boys return to the family is that the family be ready to work with him when he is released.

"If the boy is rehabilitated and sent back into the same environment that existed before he came to the ranch his chances are only 50 per cent that he will make it", Dr. McGrew stated.

"But, if the parents can work out their problem or problems before the boy is returned the boy has a 95 per cent chance of making it", Dr. McGrew added.

The ranch staff places emphasis on four areas in the routine of daily living. These four are spiritual, academic, work and social.

The boys attend a daily family devotional period with his ranch family. They attend the church of his family's preference in the community. The ranch exposes the boys to a routine of Christian living by programming their community functions with various groups and Christian families, such as the Dr. McGrew family, who have volunteered to work with the ranch in this area.

The ranch strives through individual tutorial sessions to bring the boys up to their academic level. During the school year the boys attend school in the community.

The ranch prepares the boy for his life labors ahead through a routine of daily work assignments that encompasses the work necessary to maintain the facility. Each boy is assigned different work assignments every two weeks.

The ranch has a graduate social worker on the staff to work with the boy's with reference to medical, psychological, dental and psychiatric needs.

A typical day in the life of a boy on Monday through Friday during the school year is as follows: 6 a.m.—Reveille and make beds; 6:15 a.m.—Calisthenics; 6:30 a.m.—Breakfast; 7 a.m.—Police Kitchen and Quarters; 7:55 a.m.—Leave on school bus; 3:40 p.m.—Arrive from school; 3:50 p.m.—Change to work clothes; 4 p.m.—Work assignments; 5 p.m.—Recreation; 5:45 p.m.—Showers and relax; 6:30 p.m.—Supper; 7 p.m.—Police Kitchen and

Quarters; 7:30 p.m.—Study hall; 8:30 p.m.—Chapel devotions; and 9:30 p.m.—Taps and in bed.

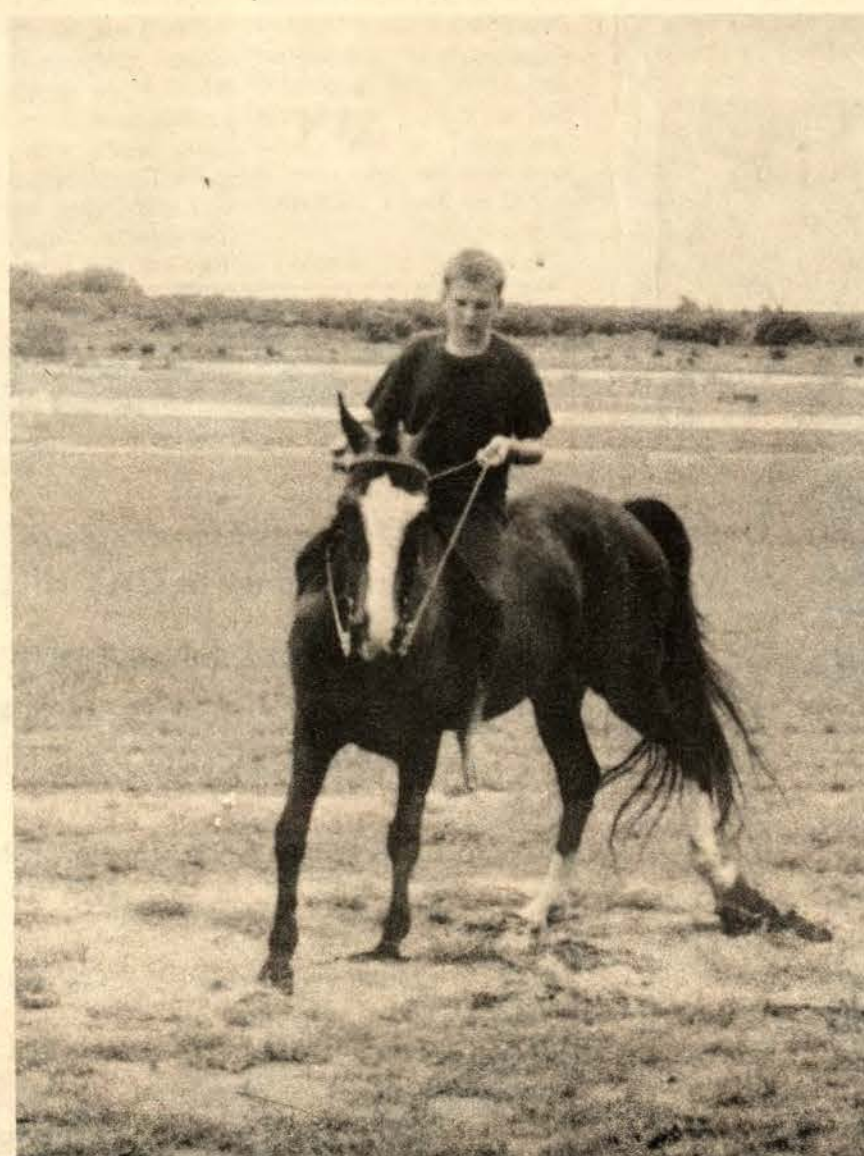

With this program it is worthy to note that 95 per cent of the boys that have entered the ranch were either failing in school or were actual drop-outs.

These same boys are now all above average in their school work and many are on the honor roll.

The ranch has rehabilitated 80 boys and sent them back to their families. Only three boys have failed to respond and had to be sent to the State Training School.

RECREATION—At the ranch one of the boys exercises one of the horses they can ride. The boys learn how to care horses.

INTERESTED BOYS—Three boys from the ranch get a detailed explanation of one portion of the Naval Training Device Center during their tour.

Meet The Staff

CHIEF ANDY

When a Navy Journalist meets a man who's been in the service since '39 one of the standard questions he asks is "what is the difference between the Navy today and the 'Old Navy'?" This week's Meet the Staff personality, HMCS Anthony Andy is such a man.

He joined the Navy in 1938, went into the Reserves in 1945 and was called back to active duty in February 1951 for Korea. He has been on active duty since.

To Chief Andy there really isn't much difference between the Navy of '68 and the Navy of '39. "The Navy doesn't change that much," he noted, "only the people do."

It is in the area of people that the Chief sees the real difference. "The men we are getting in the Navy today are a lot smarter, better educated than ever before. They can think. It's better for the Navy and it makes the Navy better but it causes problems too. You just can't use the same kind of leadership on these kids."

HMCS Andy reported to the Naval Hospital in last February when he went to work setting up the Patient Affairs Division of the hospital. Hospital Personnel Officer, Lcdr Davis gives the Chief much of the credit for getting the Division on its feet.

Chief Andy, his wife Velma and their youngest daughter Mary Elizabeth, 5, live at 646 Balfor Drive, Winter Park. The Andy's older daughter is married.

Before reporting to Orlando, Chief Andy was Regimental Chief for the Corpsman attached to the 8th Marines at Camp Lejeune, N.C. Prior to the Camp Lejeune assignment he was with Carrier Air Wing 6 aboard the USS America homeported in Norfolk.

Besides his present assignment as Enlisted Assistant to the head of the Patient Affairs Division of the Hospital, Chief Andy is a member of the Hospital Advisory Board to the NCO Club and the Hospital Golf Committee. His favorite sports are Golf and Bowling, "in that order."

WAVES Celebrate 27th Anniversary

The Naval Training Center Picnic Grounds was the site of much excitement and laughter on Friday, July 30. The occasion was the celebration of the 27th Birthday of the WAVES.

The traditional cake cutting ceremony highlighted the afternoon cookout. Those participating in the ceremony were Captain Bernard W. Brender, commanding officer of RTC; Captain William G. Lawson, Navy Hospital; Captain Jack Miller, commanding officer of NTDC; and HM3 Heidi Geuther, a representative of the WAVES.

The total number of WAVES now aboard the Naval Training Center has reached a high of 43 enlisted personnel and more than 35 officers. The WAVE representative at the present time is Commander Ruth Halverson of the Naval Hospital.

The acronym "WAVES" stands for Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service. President Franklin Delano

Roosevelt signed the legislation which authorized the enlistment and commissioning of women in the United States Naval Reserve on July 30, 1942. More than 100,000 WAVES served on duty at 900 shore stations during World War II.

The first director of the WAVES was Mildred McAfee, the President of Wellesley College. Captain McAfee led the WAVES through the war years, and returned to her position as college president in 1946.

In 1948, the WAVES became an integral part of the Navy. The Women's Armed Forces Integration Law, which was signed by President Harry Truman on June 12, authorized the enlistment and appointment of women into the regular Navy and the Naval Reserves.

The present and seventh Director of the WAVES is Captain Rita Lenihan, USN. Captain Lenihan assumed her duties in August 1966 and has seen the WAVES expand by 20 per cent during her tenure. She presides over an organization with of activities in the United States for two years, after which they may be transferred to another the staff of most of the major shore-based Naval commands.

Waves serve in all ratings except those which require the physical strength of a man, however, the only ships they serve on are hospital ships and transports.

After completion of ten weeks of recruit training, WAVES are sent to Naval duty station in the U.S. or overseas.

Women in the Navy are subject to the same regulations as the men and have the same compensations, benefits and privileges. They attend the same basic training schools and receive the same instruction as male personnel.

Miss All-Veteran's Day selection Sept. 27

Tension and excitement will be in the air tomorrow night when more than 13 young ladies compete for the title of "Miss All-Veteran's Day." Two of these young ladies will be Miss Naval Hospital and Miss Naval Training Device Center.

Miss Deborah Martin will be representing the Naval Hospital in the beauty contest to be held Saturday night, September 27, at the Statler Hilton-Inn in Orlando. Miss Paulette Lebo is to represent the Naval Training Device Center in the contest which is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Miss Martin is the daughter of Master Chief Gunner's Mate and Mrs. Elmer Martin Jr., of Winter Park, Fla. Master Chief Martin is presently assigned to the Security Department where he works as Assistant Shore Patrol Officer. Chief Martin plans to retire next year after 30 years of Naval service.

Deborah has followed in her father's footsteps to the extent that she became a member of the U. S. Navy in January of this year. She arrived at the Hospital in July from San Diego, Calif., where she completed training as a dental technician.

One of the main interests in Deborah's life is music. While attending Louisiana State University in 1967 to 1968, she majored in music. "I love music because I can express myself while playing or singing. Music can be made to fit one's moods," said Deborah. Auburn haired Deborah is 5 ft. 3 in. and has green eyes. She lives with her family at 2029 Gunn Road in Winter Park.

Miss Paulette Lebo is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Lebo of Winter Park, Fla. Her father is employed by the Manufacturing and Production Branch of NTDC's Modification and Maintenance Engineering Department. She has just completed her second summer as a Federal employee. This year was spent at NTDC after her initial summer of working with Defense Contracts Administrative Services. Paulette stands 5 ft. 6 in. and has brown hair and hazel eyes. She is a 1961 graduate of Edgewater High School and has completed one year at Florida Technological University. She returns to FTU in October.

She has lived here since 1965 when her family moved from New Cumberland, Pa., where they lived when her father was employed at Mechanicsburg, Pa.

Paulette lists playing the guitar as one of her hobbies. She is an English major at Florida Tech. Those of you who have not yet purchased your tickets for the beauty contest still have time to get them. Tickets may be purchased from Center Public Affairs Lieutenant Hilling of the Naval Hospital or from J03 Tracy Pennartz of the night of the event.

CONGRESSMAN'S INTERN PROGRAM EXPLAINED

DEBBIE HOUGHTON

America can still be proud of its young people today. Not all modern teenagers are high school dropouts or campus dissidents. This point was skillfully demonstrated to 67 attendees at a joint luncheon meeting sponsored by the Deck-Orators Toastmistress Club, Calliope, Pathfinders and NTDC Toastmasters Clubs, last Wednesday at the SPO Club.

Two high school students, Debbie Houghton of Trinity

RICK HURT

Preparatory School and Rick Hurt of Boone High School, participants in U. S. Rep. Lou Frey's Intern Program for a Positive Youth Outlook on Our Federal Government, spoke of the program showing its aims and goals. They also pointed out its value both to the participating students and to the nation which can benefit from the leadership training of its young citizens.

The two students showed color slides and discussed their eight-day visit to the nation's capital. They, with other Central Florida high school juniors, met with members of Congress, government officials, and embassy personnel from various countries. Attendees at the luncheon learned of the Youth Action Council, through which Central Florida's young people seek to let the voice of youth be heard on various aspects of government operation and current events in a positive, constructive manner.

Guests at the luncheon included Mr. Frank Daley of Congressman Frey's Orlando office, Captain Enders P. Huey of the Naval Training Center, Captain William G. Lawson of the Naval Hospital Orlando, Captain Bernard W. Brender of the Recruit Training Command, and Commander Maurice E. Beaulieu of the Naval Training Device Center. Toastmaster of the Day was Hugh Burgay of the Pathfinders Toastmasters Club, while the Invocation, Pledge of Allegiance and Closing Thought were presented by Calliope Club members John Davies, Ernie Cowan and Bob Kany. Table Topicmaster was Walt Simon of the NTDC Toastmasters, and presiding officer was Deck-Orators president Sandra Davis.

Capt Huey will be guest speaker at the Deck-Orators Toastmistress Club's Founder's Day meeting on Oct. 1, at 11:45 a.m., at the SPO Club. Interested personnel are invited to attend.

Local Navy Nurse Wounded By Gunman

5 Sep 1969

A Navy nurse from the Orlando Naval Training Center Hospital was in good condition at Tampa General Hospital Tuesday after being shot in the head by an unknown assailant Sunday night.

The Hillsborough County Sheriff's Department said Lieutenant Commander Edna T. Joyce, 42, 2001 Glenridge Way, Winter Park, was traveling to Orlando from Bradenton on U. S. 301 about 9:30 p.m. Sunday.

A CAR DREW up behind her car and a shot was fired through the back window and struck Miss Joyce in the back of the head. The slug lodged between the skin and the skull, a sheriff's department spokesman said.

The nurse was able to continue driving approximately two or three miles until she came to an area where she could get help. She was taken to Tampa General Hospital where her condition was listed as serious until removal of the bullet Monday.

The sheriff's office said it has not yet been able to question Miss Joyce.

Remember the game we played as kids back at the turn of the century--one child whispers a sentence into someone's ear and second child does the same and so on--until ten people later; what started out as "the water in the pond is stagnant" ends up as "the girl across the pond is pregnant"?

Which brings us to congratulations - to NANCY and CHARLES DAVIS on the birth of a daughter NANCY LAUREN on August 27, and to ASHLEY and JOHN NACKLEY and their son JAMES MOSES born on September 4, and to TRUDIE and GEORGE MITCHELL and newcomer SARAH LYNN who debuted on Sept. 5--the latter two babies making an arrival during "Planned Parenthood Week", which indicates extreme skill and timing displayed by JOHN and GEORGE!

THESE WERE THE SUMMER AIDS OF 1969

Ninety-one youths participated in the 1969 Summer Aids program at five Navy activities in this area. Some of the jobs they performed are illustrated in the accompanying photos.

Administered by the Civilian Personnel Department of NTDC, the Summer Aid program was coordinated by Carol Dean and Lovetta Farrington of Code 222.

Fifty-three of the youths were employed at NTDC, 21 with the Naval Training Center with nine at the Naval Hospital, six at the Commissary Store and two at the Navy Publications and Printing Service Branch Office.

Miss Dean said the youths expressed satisfaction with their learning experience here. The final training session was the most popular among the student aids, she said. At this session, students already in college shared their experiences with the high school aids.

Silver slippers for milady and a doghouse for Fido, both were there with a lot of other useful and ornamental items in the Winter Park Memorial Hospital Auxiliary White Elephant Sale in Central Park.

Early morning darkness and cold did nothing to stop the stream of morning buyers. With the sun not yet appearing in the east the shoppers were out and buying.

Auxiliary members came dressed in slacks, thermal underwear and wool stockings to waylay the chill of the early hours but by 10 a.m. they were shedding their garments one by one as the temperature rose.

Not a cloud in the sky to mar the day. People carted off armloads of treasures and trash.

The snack bar was dispensing coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and the Sugar and Spice booth was busy selling holiday goodies.

As always, the sale was fun, lots of chatter and laughing. At the end of the day the clean-up committee silently folded its tents and headed for home.

An individualist

By Chaplain Christopher B. Young, USN

The other day we watched a local college boy in a local store trying on a jacket of current fashion. He spent a good ten minutes before a mirror, posing at different angles, adjusting his collar, flaring the belted jacket, smoothing his sun-kissed locks and sideburns.

We couldn't resist a stage whisper about him and the jacket. He overheard us and stage-whispered a response to the effect that at least he was an individualist, dressing to please himself, no slave to the Establishment. Our stage-whisper in return was that he was in an Establishment-run store, wearing Establishment-produced shoes and socks, trousers, blouse, watch, ring, undergarments, allowing Establishment-barbers to tained highways, to an Establishment-built and furnished home, to eat a meal bought with Establishment-father's money, cooked by Establishment-mother's time and sweat, under lights furnished by powerplants serviced by Establishment-personnel.

While the mother washed the dishes using decadent, bourgeois techniques, he went out to gather his friends for a romp in a local Establishment-maintained park and protest the slings and arrows of an outrageous, outmoded Establishment.

To me true individuality is expressed not by a pathetic brand of conformity to the lowest common denominator of contemporary young society, but rather by going forth to meet the shadowy future without fear and misgiving and trim his hair.

"Mirror, mirror on the wall? Who's the fairest of them all?"

He left the store and drove off in an Establishment-produced car lubricated and powered by Establishment-manufactured petroleum products, on Establishment-designed and constructed and main-with a manly heart, not bucking but building, not groaning but growing, not harping but helping, not sighing about yesterday's mistakes, but singing about tomorrow's possibilities.

But, alas, I'm part of the Establishment.

Dear Mr. Lawson, WD

My thanks have been delayed until now as I have felt so uncomfortable since leaving the hospital really didn't feel like writing - Went over to the beach for a few days and think maybe it helped some. + to

I would like to pass on to the entire staff on Ward 8 my appreciation for the service, sympathy and interest they afforded me while there. Would be hard to describe the efficiency and personal concern of all of the nurses both military and civilian. The almost daily visits of Commander Zerkowich and Maun were also a great morale booster. In addition have never been associated during my entire military career with nice young men like the four craftsmen assigned to Ward 8. They really did everything possible to make my stay as pleasant as could be under the circumstances.

As you probably know Dr. De Christia and I are still fighting the battle. He started the text Monday, will be interesting to see what shows up. His patience and interest have been wonderful.

Am looking forward to seeing you and Mrs. Lawson again real soon but in a social basis I hope.

Dear Dr. Lawson:

I wish to express my appreciation for your arranging an appointment for my son Gregory with Dr. Bates yesterday. I am happy to report he found no major deficiencies.

I saw Dr. Julian last week and he concurred that since my kidney stone problem has been arrested for five years that an annual checkup would be in order. Dr. Julian is a very fine officer and certainly a credit to the medical profession.

I would like to commend medical corpsman HM-1 Roland Flower for the pleasant and efficient manner in which he handles patients. I have never been treated nicer, even when the Air Force was running the hospital, than when I was in the Urology Clinic last week.

The officer in charge of your Pharmacy, Lt. Walker, arranged to fill my prescriptions so that I would not have to drive the ten miles to the base, since I am out of town much of the time. This was a real help to me.

Again, I certainly thank you and your staff, for the fine way they are operating the Navy Hospital.

With kindest regards.

Sincerely,

Bill

Sir:

I wish to take this opportunity to express my appreciation and thanks for the wonderful professional service and care I received during my recent stay at your hospital. It was necessary for me to undergo surgery for the removal of a large tumor, which was done by Dr. Elting.

Dr. Elting seems to manifest real concern in one's case, instills confidence and is willing to go that extra step beyond what is regarded as ordinary duty. The latter also applies to the nurses and corpsmen.

Thanking you and every one in Ward 8 connected with my case, I remain,

I was recently admitted to the Naval Hospital by Dr. Wallquist, Emergency Clinic, sent to Intensive Care for 2 days, and then to Ward 4 under the care of Dr. Wilson. I wish to convey my sincere thanks to an efficient and kind staff in these 3 Wards.

I wish I could remember the names of the doctors and staff in Intensive Care because I watched them perform their duties for 48 hours, shift after shift, and I marveled at their professional efficiency and kindness.

I especially wish to commend Dr. Wilson, Dr. Wallquist, Miss Edwards and Miss Bowen (nurses) for their professional services during my distress. They treated me with speed, thoroughness, and sincerity, and I have the upmost respect for their ability. I also, wish to mention Waves (Sandy and Judy) on Ward 4 who do everything possible to make their patients comfortable in a most pleasant manner, and Mr. Stark in X-Ray.

I would appreciate having these people personally advised of this letter, and if possible, incorporated in their personnel records.

Mrs. Mansfield

Dear Sir:

Having been a patient at the Naval Hospital, for about four weeks and wish to express and comment on some of the finest and dedicated doctor's that I have met in the Military Services.

Dr. Finney, one of the most outstanding physician's and surgeon's in healing the sick, his integrity is beyond and above medical profession in treating all patients with utmost care.

This man is to be regarded with the greatest respect of his chosen and gifted profession of medicine of our country.

Sincerely,

Annette K. Troutman

P.S. There are not many doctor's such as Dr. Finney who rides out on his bicycle after 6. p. m. to check on his patients after he has made his calls previously at ward 10. In our books, we as his patients think of him as a prince of a doctor.

Captain Wm. G. Lawson
Commanding Officer
Naval Hospital
Orlando, Florida 32813

Dear Sir:

I'd like to call your attention to my recent stay on Ward 4. Having been a member of the Staff since 1962, I had the opportunity to view the operation from a different aspect - that of the patient.

I especially was impressed by the thoughtfulness and individual care given by Mrs. Wassmen on the 2nd shift along with Waves Kirschnick and Kahlenbeck. I found these three especially to be exceptional in their dedication to their duties and responsibilities which primarily is care and comfort of the patient.

I am feeling stronger and better every day that passes and hope to be back to work, at least part-time on Monday 1 December.

Yours very truly,

Virginia L. Gilbrook

Dear Capt. Lawson:

I want to thank you and all the hospital personnel for the wonderful treatment I received as a patient there.

I was so pleased and quite impressed knowing how busy you were that you took the time to speak and always with a pleasant smile. Due to my past condition I had the opportunity and experience in all phases of Hospital Administration and I feel qualified in saying you are the finest.

Also I have never seen a more co-ordinated Surgical Staff. Dr. Wittmann is and was superb. Not only as a Surgeon but his manner of Dr. Patient relationship is of the finest caliber. He gives his all to his patients. Dr. O'Dell was extremely fine. She gave many hours toward my recovery. Mrs. Eltin and State were always there when needed. They let you know they cared.

The Naval nurses were magnificent, especially Miss Joyce who runs Ward 10 with the utmost care and precision, always with the patient's care and interest at heart. Miss Strenkel is a marvelous nurse and very efficient. In an emergency she is great. Miss Fitz and Miss Westover were especially fine.

The Corps Waves were helpful and nice, but Treatment Wives Misses Ross, Higdon, Harsh, Marquette, Kalhanback and Miss Kirschnick were excellent.

As to the civilian personnel Mrs. Jewell is a fine nurse and very competent. As assistants to the nurse Mrs. Nance and Mrs. Anderson are very good.

Please extend my special "Thanks" to all the fine Physicians that were called in consultation on my case. Especially Drs. Wells, Nacero, De Arriagatha and Schmitt. All in all I can truly say I had the best Medical care available anywhere, any place. I do appreciate most enthusiastically with gratitude and humility all that was done for me. All of you will always have a very special niche in my heart. Again my sincere thanks to all of you.

Affectionately,
Mary (Mrs. Joseph) Higdon

Dear Sir,

About a month ago I was a patient in the hospital for surgery on my neck. Prior to this, extensive tests were required and visits to various departments of the hospital. Everywhere I went I was treated with pleasant courtesy and cared for in a most efficient manner. The careful concern of Doctors Fowler and Howerly is appreciated more than I could ever express.

The attitude of all your personnel made me stand very tall for the Service. Please convey to all concerned my deep gratitude for their professional dedication and care.

Most sincerely,

Dear Sir:

For the last year I have been stationed in Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam, as the area Dental Surgeon. During this time my wife and three sons have resided in Orlando and have upon numerous occasions been treated at your fine facility. Upon every occasion whether at the allergy clinic, surgery clinic, or emergency room, they have had the most personal, prompt and outstanding care in every sense.

This is of course a most important consideration to a familyman away from home and has decreased the worry factor in regards to health problems for me considerably. Please relay my deepest appreciation to your staff and enlist-ed people for their outstanding professionalism and performance of duty.

My deepest thanks.

THE CHAPLAIN'S MESSAGE

Mary had a life placed in her hands. She gave herself to her Son, and a new chapter of history began. You and I have life placed in our hands: family, patient, staff, shipmate, friend, stranger. History can be made by the way we give of ourselves -- and what we are and have. A Christmas prayer might be that we give and not count the cost; fight and not heed the wounds; toil and not seek for rest; labor and not ask for reward; and pray with faith and not doubt the answer!

Staff Writer

Temperatures fell steadily in Orlando from midnight on as local weather bureau officials issued warnings for protection of shrubbery, crops, automobile radiators and exposed water pipes tonight.

A light drizzle in Orlando turned into snow in Jacksonville during the night. You had to look carefully to see it, but light snow flurries were definitely reported in three sections of Jacksonville.

TEMPERATURES in the Orange, Osceola, Lake and Seminole County areas are expected to range from the mid-20s in northern Lake and Seminole Counties to near 32 in Southern Osceola County, Matthew Garfinkel, meteorologist in charge of the Orlando station, said.

Dear Sir:

Recently I had a fixed bridge replaced at your Dental Clinic. I know that you probably receive far less favorable comments than critical comments on your Dental service. That is the reason that I wanted to write you and let you know of the very fine service that I received from your Dental Staff.

The Dental Officer, who treated me, was J. W. Canal, Commander, USN. He certainly went out of his way to give me the best possible service. His professional manner and the pride shown in his profession reflects credit not only in himself but also in your hospital and the United States Navy.

I again say that I would like to be counted as one of your satisfied patients and express my appreciation for your excellent service.

Sincerely,

Six receive awards at Hospital

Friday the 13th was a lucky day for six staff members of the Naval Hospital. Captain W. G. Lawson, commanding officer, Naval Hospital, presented the six with awards at a ceremony in his office.

Hospital Corpsman Second Class Thomas N. Nalley received the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service in connection with combat operations against the enemy in the Republic of Vietnam while serving as a corpsman with the First Marine Division from November 27, 1968 to October 6, 1969.

Initially assigned as Senior Corpsman of Company D, First Battalion, Seventh Marines, he participated in two major combat operations, as well as in numerous small unit activities, repeatedly distinguishing himself by his courage and composure under fire.

Typical of his actions was the occasion on February 16, 1969, when Company D came under a heavy volume of automatic weapons and rocket propelled grenade fire from a large and well-concealed North Vietnamese Army force while conducting a search and destroy operation in Quang Nam Province.

Chief Hospital Corpsman Ralph M. Fisher received a Certificate of Commendation for outstanding performance of duty while serving with the Fifth Marines, First Marine Division in the Republic of Vietnam from November 22, 1968 until October 1, 1969.

Chief Fisher was initially assigned as Petty Officer in Charge of Medical Supply with the First Battalion where he ensured the timely procurement of vital medical supplies and greatly enhanced the operational effectiveness of his section.

Chief Dental Technician Charles T. Maddux received the Navy Unit Commendation while serving with the 13th Naval Construction Regiment providing construction support in the Republic of Vietnam from September 1, 1966 to July 31, 1967. Exercising outstanding technical competence, zeal and determination in the face of seemingly impossible obstacles of adverse weather conditions and rugged terrain, the 13th Naval Construction Regiment planned and executed major construction operations estimated at over $25,000,000.

Hospital Corpsman Second Class Robert S. Whitman received the Navy Achievement Medal while serving as a Corpsman with Company D, First Battalion, 26th Marines, Ninth Marine Amphibious Brigade in connection with operations against the enemy in the Republic of Vietnam.

On the evening of April 18, 1969, Petty Officer Whitman was accompanying a squad assigned to ambush an enemy force near the Nam Bridge in Quang Nam Province. Disregarding his own safety, he fearlessly moved with his unit to the designated area and alertly observing the enemy, he quickly warned his comrades, enabling them to aggressively engage the hostile force.

Hospital Corpsman Third Class Stanley J. Galko received the Navy Achievement Medal while serving with the First Marine Division in connection with combat operations against the enemy in the Republic of Vietnam from December 9, 1968 to October 12, 1969. Initially assigned as a Corpsman with the First Battalion, Fifth Marines, he displayed outstanding professionalism and initiative despite extremely adverse conditions and the difficulties of a combat environment. Hospital Corpsman Third Class Donald J. Baker received the Army Commendation Medal for distinguishing himself by meritorious service during the period of October, 1968 to September 1969, while serving as Medical Corpsman with Advisory Team 19 in Quang Tri Province, Republic of Vietnam.

Throughout this assignment Petty Officer Baker obtained outstanding results despite the adverse conditions incident to a combat environment.

Four receive Vietnam awards

Four officers at the Naval Hospital received awards earned in Vietnam during a ceremony on February 17 in the office of Captain William G. Lawson, commanding officer, Naval Hospital.

Lcdr. Christopher Breese Young, hospital chaplain, received the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service while serving with the friendly foreign forces engaged in armed conflict against the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese communist aggressors in the Republic of Vietnam from February 1967 to April 1969.

Lcdr. Young provided a comprehensive religious ministry to U. S. Naval Support Activity, DaNang and remote detachment personnel. He worked tirelessly under extremely difficult conditions, and frequently came under enemy fire, particularly during the 1968 enemy Tet Offensive, when he courageously boarded lighterage division craft as they transited the hostile Perfume River to the beleaguered city of Hue.

In addition to these responsibilities, he voluntarily ministered to other U. S. military forces which did not have Chaplains. Lcdr. Young was directly responsible for the organization and leadership of a volunteer medical and dental team, composed of doctors, dentists, corpsmen and technicians, providing the only medical assistance received by a Vietnamese refugee village for a period of over 18 months.

As a direct result of his intense interest and tireless efforts, more than 2,500 patients received medical attention. Lcdr. Young employed keen intelligence and imagination in the production of a weekly half hour Christian television program which presented chapel programs and featured interviews and discussions with men from all the military services in the I Corps Tactical Zone.

Lt. Robert Alton Johnson, U. S. Medical Corps, received the Navy Commendation Medal for meritorious service while serving with friendly foreign forces engaged in armed conflict against the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong communist aggressors in the Republic of Vietnam from September 1968 to September 1969.

As medical advisor to the Vietnamese Marine Corps, Lt. Johnson provided advice and assistance in the fields of medical administration, training and planning. Recognizing the need for expanded medical facilities for the Vietnamese Marines, he coordinated the efforts of many persons and agencies in developing plans for a 200-bed hospital.

In addition he assisted in the expansion of the Medical Company into the Medical Battalion, assisted in improving the appearance and capability of the existing Division Hospital by adding a maternity ward and was instrumental in stimulating interest in preventative medicine and sanitation procedures.

On two occasions, Lt. Johnson replaced an operational field advisor. In that capacity, he participated in Operations Toan Thang II and Song Than 781, 801, 802, 803 and 804. During those operations he was exposed to enemy fire, both direct and indirect.

Lt. John A. Yauch, U. S. Medical Corps, received the Navy Commendation Medal for meritorious service while serving in various capacities with the First Marine Division in connection with combat operations against the enemy in the Republic of Vietnam from July 29, 1968 to July 25, 1969.

Throughout this period, Lt. Yauch performed his duties in an exemplary and highly professional manner.

Demonstrating superb leadership and resourcefulness, he skillfully administered medical treatment for personnel from numerous other units. Working tirelessly, he conducted Medical Civic Action Program and provided medical treatment for approximately 500 local Vietnamese civilians, greatly enhancing Vietnamese - American relations within his unit's area of responsibility.

Lt. Earl McKenzie III, U. S. Medical Corps, received the Navy Commendation medal for meritorious service while serving with the First Marine Division in connection with combat operations against the enemy in the Republic of Vietnam from July 26, 1968 to July 22, 1969. Throughout this period, Lt. McKenzie performed his duties in an exemplary and highly professional manner.

Following his initial assignment as assistant battalion surgeon of the Seventh Engineer Battalion, he was reassigned as battalion surgeon of the First Battalion, First Marines on February 1, 1969, and, in both billets he worked tirelessly to provide timely medical care for sick and wounded Marines. As battalion surgeon he personally treated or supervised the care of 2,782 military patients and 5,558 civilian patients, and directed 54 mobile medical evacuation.

Also supervising and training his medical personnel, he ensured that each patient was adequately treated despite the hardships of working in a combat environment. Directing a preventive medicine and sanitation program for his unit, he made frequent inspections and corrected sanitation problems. Taking an active interest in the Medical Civic Action Program in his battalion's tactical area of responsibility, he greatly enhanced Vietnamese-American relations.

Navy Medical Corps observed 1st Anniversary

After almost 99 years the Navy Medical Corps observed an anniversary for the first time.

To tell the truth until just recently no one has known when the Corps really came into being. Over the years the Navy medical officers have participated in the anniversary celebrations of other corps, but didn't have one of their own.

The Medical Corps became determined to establish their legislative origin and made a thorough search of the archives toward that end. Their search indicates that the Navy has had surgeons on ships since 1775. The first American Naval surgeon, Joseph Harrison, was aboard the Alfred on that date when its First Lieutenant, a young man named John Paul Jones, hoisted the first American flag ever to fly from a warship.

In August 1842, Congress authorized five bureaus within the Navy Department, one of which was the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, but it wasn't until the Act of March 3, 1871 that they found precise references to a Medical Corps. It therefore seemed logical that they assume the latter date as their birthdate and it was so proclaimed.

Section five of the Congressional Act is the portion in which the Medical Corps is mentioned. The Act made provisions for giving Naval rank and responsibilities for surgeons. The sentence mentioning a Medical Corps reads in part "...That the officers of the Medical Corps on the active list of the Navy shall be as follows..." A part of Section five also gives a good idea of how long ago this was by saying "...For contingent expenses of the bureau, freight on medical stores, transportation of insane patients to the government hospital, advertising, telegraphing, purchase of books, expenses attending the Naval Medical Board of Examiners, purchase and repair of wagons, harnesses, purchases of feed for horses, garden tools, seeds, thirty thousand dollars."

So with session three of the Forty-first Congress the Navy Medical Corps was born and since has grown in leaps and bounds. The medical officers, corpsmen and technicians in the Medical Corps are some of the best in the world and are utilizing the most modern of methods and equipment. The Medical Corps officers of the Naval Hospital, Orlando celebrated their anniversary with a social event Tuesday, March 3, and the designation of a special Medical Corps anniversary lecture by Dr. Harvey R. Langee, assistant professor of Psychiatry, University of Florida, College of Medicine, Friday, March 6.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO THE OFFICERS OF THE MEDICAL CORPS

With 3 March 1871 having been proclaimed by the Surgeon General of the Navy as the official birthdate of the Navy Medical Corps, I wish to extend my personal anniversary greetings to all Medical Corps officers of the Naval Hospital, Orlando.

As we celebrate this 99th Navy Medical Corps Anniversary, each one of you as members of the Corps can be justifiably proud of its heritage and sustained record of high quality medical care, continued advancement of Navy medicine, intensive training, and its fine esprit de corps. For your excellent performance, devotion to duty, and dedicated service in providing inpatient and outpatient care at this hospital, I want to express my sincere appreciation and gratitude. Appointments easier to make

As of March 8 the telephone numbers for the Outpatient Service have been changed. Appointments can be made for all clinics, except Obstetrics and Gynecology and Pediatrics by calling the Central Appointment Office.

The Pediatrics and Obstetrics and Gynecology clinics should be called directly for appointments. The new numbers are as follows: Central Appointment Office - 646-5665; Obstetrics and Gynecology - 646-4419, and Pediatrics -

646-5235. The one number listed for the Central Appointment Office will automatically feed into four other telephone lines making it much easier to obtain available appointments by telephone. The Central Appointment desk and Pediatrics will receive calls from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. and Obstetrics and Gynecology from 8:30 until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Fan Yawn retires at Naval Hospital

Miss Fan Yawn, Red Cross field director at the Naval Hospital and in the Red Cross service for 25 years, was honored recently upon her retirement in ceremonies held in the office of Captain W. G. Lawson, commanding officer, Naval Hospital.

Miss Yawn was presented a certificate of appreciation by Captain Lawson citing her contribution to the Naval Hospital since it was commissioned on July 1, 1968.

Miss Yawn, a native of Atlanta, Ga., came to the hospital when it was administered by the Air

"She planned, organized and directed all of the Red Cross casework, recreational and volunteer programs and trained hundreds of volunteer personnel. No holiday went by without her personal participation in programs designed to help the patients", said

Captain Lawson.

One of the patients at the hospital, Charles Ackerman, of Houston, Texas, presented Miss Yawn with a gift, symbol of the appreciation of the thousands of patients who enjoyed the services she arranged or more often personally offered.

Sailor of the Month

HM2 Marvin Holloway honored

Hospital Corpsman Second Class Marvin Holloway, Naval Training Center Sailor of the Month for June, has written a manual that may save your life.

HM2 Holloway is the petty officer in charge of the Emergency Room at the Naval Hospital. After being placed in charge in November 1969 he enthusiastically began to reorganize the entire support function which was in a state of flux due to several of the enlisted staff being ordered to other duty stations. This included preparation of an operating manual both for use of the corpsmen as well as the doctors standing duty in the emergency room.

Although extreme emergencies do not happen often, through the efforts of HM2 Holloway, the Emergency Room is prepared to handle any emergency that may occur.

"Through his imaginative and innovative ideas he has standardized procedures and tasks to a degree that the emergency room performs smoothly and effectively," said Captain William G. Lawson, Commanding Officer, Naval Hospital.

Through his own initiative many effective changes have been made in the physical layout of the emergency room. He has worked extremely well with all of the hospital staff personnel and remained calm and collected in the presence of numerous emergency situations that arise from day to day.

As senior corpsmen in the emergency room he has been vital in training junior men and in supervising their performance.

HM2 Holloway has attended Basic Hospital Corps School, Class "A" and Field Medical Service School. He served with the Fleet Marine Force in Vietnam prior to coming to the Orlando Naval Hospital, where he participated in several combat operations. He is presently being considered for career designation under the STAR program.

HM2 Holloway is married and he and his wife, Linda, and their eight weeks old girl, Paula, live at 1302 E. Harding St. Orlando. He was born in Fairfax, Okla.

He graduated from Shidler High School in Shidler, Okla., and attended Southwestern State College in Weatherford, Okla., for one year.

Curtin, and Capt. William G. Lawson, commanding officer, Naval Hospital, Orlando.

ART OBJECT—An object of much interest and comment in the office of Captain William G. Lawson, commanding officer, Naval Hospital, is a nearly seven foot tall Chinese bronze. Admiring the bronze is Chaplain Christopher B. Young, left, and Capt. Lawson. Chaplain Young loaned the object to the Hospital last year. It is from the collection of Maynard family of Winter Park. It was purchased from the home of a Chinese Embassy official in Baltimore during World War II by the late Stanley Maynard, a Winter Park realtor. The piece, which consists of three dragon and tigers entwined in separate units is topped by an ancient Chinese warrior about to slay the dragon. It is reputed to have been made in China in the late 18th or early 19th century. It was probably a decorative piece used in a residence or a temple in which incense was burned. Fortunately it does not need polishing.

This week's "Meet the Staff" personality hangs his whitehat in the Data Processing Division at the Naval Hospital. Data Processing Technician Second Class Wayne Stark arrived at the Naval Training Center in June 1968 following 12 weeks of Data Processing School at Bainbridge, Md.

Petty Officer Stark is responsible for the processing of all in-patient statistical data required by the Bureau of Medicine. He performs this task with the aid of accounting machines, interpreters, sorters, reproducers, collators, calculators, and other electronic methods familiar only to those in this modern field of data processing.

In addition to operating this sophisticated gear, he also wires control panels when required on all the hospital's data processing equipment.

"Petty Officer Stark is an expert in his field and attacks each problem with cheerfulness and displays the maximum industriousness and cooperation in all his daily undertakings," said DPC William D. Hays, his immediate superior.

The second class petty officer entered the Navy in November 1967 at his hometown of Georgetown, Tex., after attending Accounting and Automation School in Austin, Tex.

He recently received orders to the USS

Stark has managed to remain single and eventually plans to return to school following his next duty assignment.

Dear Sir:

I wish to commend Captain Wm. G. Lawson, USN, Commanding Officer of the U.S. Naval Hospital at Orlando, Florida.

Firstly, in his reception to commercial tradesmen. I've called for many years at many military installations but rarely have I encountered such a genuine welcome. Although strict, Captain Lawson remains impartial and fair to all with special considerations or privileges granted to none. Through precept and leadership, he has imbued all his personnel with a similar attitude. Pharmacy, Nursing, Technical and Medical Department personnel are all receptive and sincere in extending all courtesies to visitors ... (I should add, within the limits of time availability.) It is a pleasure to work with the many doctors, nurses and corpsmen assigned to the Orlando Naval Hospital.

Secondly, Captain Lawson has done a remarkable job of keeping morale high. A desire to improve performance, to be friendly and receptive comes from well-motivated people. This is observable through the smiles and good humor of all the technicians, the sincere dedication to duty of the nurses and the friendly, academic camaraderie of the doctors.

Third, and very importantly, the reaction of goodwill throughout the community stems primarily from the incredible improvement of medical care and attention since this hospital has been a Naval Hospital - as contrasted with prior years under another branch of the armed forces. This is significant since many of the local residents are retired military personnel and they spontaneously comment that everything is vastly improved since Captain Lawson has commanded this hospital.

Since so much good is attributable to Captain Lawson, I felt it important that these facts be brought to your attention.

Commanding Officer,

Dear Sir,

It has been a long time since I was a patient in a naval hospital; if my memory serves me correctly it was in 1939 or 1940.

I was recently admitted to the Naval Hospital Orlando, for three days because of dental surgery in April, and am at present in an out-patient status. In the years between these two admissions, I have from time to time heard disparaging remarks concerning the services rendered by the staffs of naval hospitals; such remarks usually boiling down to the ineptness of personnel.

Being ambulatory most of the time, I had many occasions to observe, and in my humble opinion, to pass judgment on the services rendered me and others in attendance.

From the Family Services Admittance Office to the Pharmacy (my last stop upon leaving), I found nothing but marked efficiency, courtesy, a distinct feeling of a "desire to help" and clear cut instructions on how to comport myself and ease the problems incident to a short stay as a patient (both for myself and the staff).

One of the first things I learned from the Lab Technician was that Orlando Naval Hospital was sixth in size (patient-wise) in the world. When one considers the amount of traffic involved including active duty personnel - all services, retired - male and female - dependents etc., it is amazing that the hospital's mission can be accomplished.

I especially desire to thank a few individuals for the courtesies extended me including CAPT MC KEAN and his very busy section in the dental department; HML LITTLEJOHN for his profound administrative knowledge and knowhow and especially the nurses and corpsmen in Ward 11. I also noticed something in this Ward that would do any serviceman's heart good. Due to sickness and leave there was a corpsman shortage. Two of the patients - hospital corpsmen - in Ward 11 were constantly and without being asked, helping the duty corpsmen in their assigned tasks.

In conclusion, let me state that had the visit not been one of apprehension (the loss of all my teeth) it would have been a real pleasure to have been aboard.

Obviously the people under your command have great and high morale.

Please let me especially commend Dr. Julian. He is an exceedingly capable and efficient doctor.

Dr. Waldquist is also fine and they make a great team.

Hospitalman Demarcus was outstanding, even among very very good people.

My retired military privilege of medical care means a great deal more to me as a result of my experience at the hospital which you command. No better care and treatment could be had and I am sure that the very expensive civilian institutions are not as good.

All the other patients that I have talked with have the same opinion about what an excellent, no, superior organization you command.

LETTER OF COMMENDATION

TO: Cdr. Thomas R. Bates 653292
U. S. Naval Hospital
Orlando, Florida 32813

THROUGH: Capt. William G. Lawson, Cmdg. Officer
U. S. Naval Hospital
Orlando, Florida 32813

Last fall I started having trouble with my eyes, and upon getting an appointment with Dr. Bates his entire attitude was: What can I do to assist you?

His examination proved cataracts forming. His continued interest and examinations have followed through to this date, including the operation upon the right eye.

Before the operation he requested that I have a complete physical examination. This was done under the direction of your Dr. Phillips and it was thorough.

The attention I received in Ward 8 under Dr. Bates' instructions were superior, with all personnel in that ward doing all they could to make my stay comfortable.

With all the strife and criticism now leveled at the Military Service, it revives one's faith to meet men of the character and professional knowledge of Dr. Bates toward all personnel and their dependents.

Even though I was an Infantry Officer, may I steal a Navy expression and say he runs a tight ship.

It is requested that a copy of this Commendation be attached to the next efficiency report on Cmdr. T. R. Bates 653292.

Capt. George W. Taylor, Commanding Officer

Captain Taylor:

I request your indulgence as I relate below an incident reflecting professional credit upon a member of your present command. It took place last May while Captain William Lawson was Commanding Officer of the Hospital.

The writer was playing golf at the NTC on the afternoon of May 16th. I was seized with severe chest pains on the fourth green, nearest the Officers Club and farthest from the Golf Clubhouse. These had started ten to fifteen minutes before and steadily became worse. My golf partner hurriedly went for his automobile, picked me up and rushed me to the Emergency Room of the Naval Hospital. There treatment was quickly and correctly administered by hospital corpsmen under the competent direction of Commander Cecil B. Wilson, about whom credit for my recovery is given together with the Healing Hand of God.

According to Comdr. Wilson, to whom I talked on July 6th for the first time since being discharged from the hospital, I suffered a severe heart attack diagnosed as an anterior infarction. While Comdr. Wilson was obtaining medical history from me in Ward 7 the writer's heart ceased to beat. He was immediately aware of same and attempted external massage but without results. My heart had gone into fibrillation and he ordered and administered electric countershock which revived me. I was later referred to the Evans Central Florida Cardiology Group and taken to Florida Sanitarium and Hospital. Further treatment there to date has been quite successful.

I have personally expressed sincere thanks and gratitude to Comdr. Wilson for his part in saving my life. As his new Commanding Officer, I want you to know what a competent and efficient doctor and officer you have in Comdr. Wilson, to whom I will always be indebted.

Sincerely yours,

Carlton Crenshaw

Dear Sir,

Dr. Phillips

Mrs Mansfield

Please express my sincere thanks to the following three people who were on duty Sunday night.

I believe the medic at the desk was Lawson or Laison. He was so kind and with this being a personal problem - he tried his best not to embarrass us.

Dr. Phillips explained to my 17 yr. old daughter about the exam and was so gentle even in his manner of speaking - that she wasn't at all nervous.

The nurse was so very nice too and helped Theresa - and we both appreciated EVERY kindness and courtesy extended us. I was worried about coming out there on an emergency - but thankful for people like them. (Nolan M)

Orlando, Florida

Dear Captain Lawson:

I would like to express my gratitude for the excellent treatment I received during the period 4 - 12 May 1970, while a patient in Ward 4 of your hospital.

While going through very difficult days for me (Post-Operative Gall Bladder surgery) everyone was so very kind and humane to me, and assisted me in every possible. In particular, I would like to call your attention to HM2 Linda Holmes, USN, and Mrs. Nance, LPN, who went out of their way to help and comfort not only me, but other patients as well. They are both true "Florence Nightingales" of today.

Furthermore, all the food I received was delicious, wholesome, and excellently prepared.

Thank you for allowing me to commend your personnel, military and civilian alike, including my outstanding Surgeon, Dr. Tobias, LCDR, USN, for a "job well done."

Sincerely yours,

Subj: Letter of Appreciation

1. I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the outstanding treatment and consideration rendered to me while hospitalized at Orlando Naval Hospital for treatment of a ruptured disk from 22 May to 9 June 1970. Prior to my hospitalization, I had spent only one day in a naval hospital during 29 years of service. I was very impressed with the fine services provided by the hospital staff and the humane manner in which they carried out their duties.

2. The professionalism exhibited by Doctors Fenning and Schmitt was, in my opinion, the best possible. Particularly noteworthy was the untiring interest in my treatment, comfort and well being on the part of Doctor Schmitt. CDR Halverson and her staff of nurses (LCDR's Small, Fitz and Joyce; Mrs. Stephenson and Mrs. Jewell) were very professional, considerate and congenial as were the corpsmen (HM's Urbanawiz, Hauck, Perry, Thornhill, Doggett, Pawlicki, and Guidry) of Ward 12. All exhibited a thorough dedication to duty in providing for the overall welfare of the patients entrusted to their care. In addition, the staff in physical therapy (LT Bong, HM2 Strohl and Hoody) displayed an untiring devotion to their work.

3. To these and others who contributed to the outstanding treatment I received during this time, my sincere appreciation for a job "Well Done." I will long remember and appreciate the many acts of kindness shown by your staff.

NTC celebrates 2nd anniversary today

Center celebrates 2nd anniversary today

The Naval Training Center is celebrating its second Anniversary today and can look back to a very full year, indeed. The tremendous Center growth which highlighted the first year has continued into the second. Of the new construction that has been completed, the most unique is the training ship mockup, Bluejacket I. This lan- quetted ships about three quarters the size of a Navy Destroyer Escort and contains some of the same equipment as a regular destroyer in- cluding sound powered telephones, damage control fittings, Deck fittings, and bridge and pilot house equipment. The ship also contains three air conditioned classrooms used for formal instruction in practical seamanship. Another facility of the Center which has been the object of much admiration is the new Recruit Chapel that was dedicated in October, 1969, by Rear Admiral James W. Kelly, Chief of Navy Chaplains. It is the second largest chapel in the Navy and the first Navy chapel built to be used exclusively by Recruits. In addition to the chapel's main sanc- tuary which seats ap- proximately 800 people, the chapel houses a small Jewish Sanctuary, a Catholic Oratory, meeting rooms, and space for immersion Baptismal Services. The Advanced Undersea Weapons School is in a new building overlooking Lake Baldwin. This building con- tains both classrooms and laboratories used for instruction of officers and enlisted personnel in the operation and main- tenance of undersea weapons. In March, 1969, the new CENTREX Telephone Building officially began operations when U.S. Congressman Lou Frey, of the Florida Fifth District received the first conference telephone call from Captain Elders P. Huey, Center Commander and two officials of the Winter Park Telephone Company. This new

Barracks No.6, the first building of the second Recruit Camp. New construction, is however, only one part of this year's story. The Naval Training Center General Mess won the Sixth Naval District nomination for the New Award and is a finalist in Navy wide competition for large mess ashore. The Sixth Naval District Talent contest was held at the Center with Lynne Topping, Miss Florida, 1969, presenting the awards to the winners. The East Coast and All-Navy Boxing Championships were held at the NTC Gymnasium in April, 1970. Quincey Daniel, USS Shenandoah, was named outstanding boxer during the All-Navy Finals; and Daniel and Alvas Gillespie, Naval Air Station, Point Mugu, Calif., went on to win division titles in Inter-Service Boxing Cham- pionships. The Naval Training Center also participated in two programs designed especially for youth of the area: The Sea Cadet program sponsored by the Central Florida Council of the Navy League; and the Federal Summer Em- ployment for Youth Program. The year in review was one of construction, re-organization, and carrying out the NTC mission of training qualified manpower for seapower.

"Any achievements by this command have been largely due to their individual initiative and collective efforts," Capt. Lawson said.

"Mrs. Lawson and I regret to leave our many friends and associates. It is our intent, however, to return to this area to enjoy our retirement years.

"I shall not say goodbye, but only so long for a while," was Capt. Lawson's departing remark before reading his change of command orders.

Captain George W. Taylor new Commanding Officer at Naval Hospital

After 14 years at Bethesda Naval Hospital Captain George W. Taylor Jr. became commanding officer of the Orlando Naval Hospital July 9 during a change of command ceremony.

Capt. Taylor relieved Captain William G. Lawson, who had the distinction of being the first commanding officer at the Naval Hospital. Capt. Lawson will report to the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery as Staff Director of Defense Medical Material Board.

Capt. Taylor was executive officer and chief of otolaryngology at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Also present at the change of command ceremony were: Vice Admiral George M. Davis Jr., Surgeon General of the U.S. Navy and Chief, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery; Rear Admiral Edward C. Kenney (Retired), former Surgeon General of the Navy; Captain Enders P. Huey, Commander, Naval Training Center; Captain Joseph M. Sanderlink, Executive Officer, Naval Hospital, Orlando; and Lieutenant Command Christopher B. Young, Hospital Chaplain.

"I look forward to this opportunity afforded me in becoming commanding officer here in Orlando," Capt. Taylor said during the change of command ceremony.

"Medicine means service and the patient is the most important person in the hospital. We shall do the best we can for every patient who enters our doors," Capt. Taylor stated.

"Our primary mission here is to provide the best possible medical care to recruits and men assigned to the Naval Training Center and other military activities in the Orlando area," Capt. Taylor added.

Capt. Taylor comes to Orlando after 14 years at Bethesda where he became the Navy's expert in ear, eye, nose and throat practice of medicine before moving into the administrative end of hospital work. In his departing message during the change of command ceremony Capt. Lawson said that "it had been an honor and great privilege to have served as the first commanding officer of the Naval Hospital, Orlando."

"The change over from an Air Force Hospital to a Naval Hospital, the commissioning and the initial operations of the hospital have only been possible by the combined efforts of many individuals and the outstanding support by the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. Commandant Sixth Naval District, Naval Training Center, Recruit Training Command, the businessmen and officials of the Orlando area, the local medical profession and community hospitals," Capt. Lawson stated.

"With the continued growth of the Naval Training Center and the development of the ultimate recruit population, this hospital is destined to become a major Naval medical treatment facility for all authorized patients in the Central Florida area.

"I especially wish to salute my staff-officers, enlisted and civilian—both past and present. These personnel have my deepest respect and sincere appreciation for their loyal devotion to duty, hard work and perseverance.

"Any achievements by this command have been largely due to their individual initiative and collective efforts," Capt. Lawson said.

"Mrs. Lawson and I regret to leave our many friends and associates. It is our intent, however, to return to this area to enjoy our retirement years.

"I shall not say goodbye, but only so long for a while," was Capt. Lawson's departing remark before reading his change of command orders.

Dr. Taylor was born in Mooresville, N.C. He attended Woodberry Forest School from 1933 to 1937. He received his Bachelor of Science Degree from Davidson College in 1941.

WAVES celebrate 28th anniversary at NTC

Local WAVES (acronym for "Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service") celebrated their 28th anniversary yesterday at the Senior Petty Officers' Club.

The program, under the chairmanship of PN1 Alice Hyson, NTC WAVE Master-at-Arms, featured a fashion show with models from the Pat Flesher Modeling School, showing the latest in casual and sports wear from Sears.

Not to be outdone, the girls from the WAVES barracks modeled WAVE uniforms dating the "Yeomanette" uniform of 1918 to present day uniforms.

Following the fashion show, a dinner was enjoyed by the girls and a traditional cake cutting ceremony was held with Captain Tollefson, NTC Chief Staff Officer,

The WAVES barracks, here at NTC, was established in May 1968, coinciding with the arrival of the first girls to be assigned to the Center. There are presently 45 WAVES assigned to the Center, and they fill billets at NTC, RTC, the Naval Hospital, and the Service School Command. Additionally, there is an average of eight WAVE students aboard the Center attending Personnelman "A" School at all times.

"We have a WAVE in charge of the NTC Photo Lab, a physical therapist, an EKG technician, and a lab technician assigned to the Naval Hospital, proving that WAVES just don't fill clerical billets," said PN1 Hyson.

Throughout the naval establishment 6,000 enlisted WAVES and 600 women officers are currently serving on active duty. Additionally, there are 15,000 WAVES serving with the Naval Reserve.

The history of women in the Navy began long before the official establishment of the WAVES on July 30, 1942.

As early as 1908, women were serving in a military status as part of the Navy Nurse Corps established that year. Nine years later, during World War I, enrollment of women began on a large scale to make an enlisted man available for duty at sea.

In March 1917, Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels inaugurated the Naval Research Program for Yeoman F., later popularized as "Yeomanette," thus providing the naval service with more than 11,000 women during the war. With the signing of the armistice, however, the need for Navy woman declined. By July 31, 1919, all Yeomanettes had been released from active duty, and it was again a man's Navy.

The ensuing years were quiet ones for women interested in naval service. With the outbreak of World War II, however, the U. S. Navy again faced acute personnel shortages to man its tremendously expanding fleet.

On July 30, 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a bill establishing the Women's Reserve which provided legislation that women could serve in, not merely with, the Navy.

This is what the local girls and their counterparts throughout the Navy celebrated yesterday.

Captain Rita Lenihan, Director of the WAVES, summed it up nicely in a letter to all WAVES on this occasion saying, "The service you are voluntarily giving your country is to many a puzzling paragon and to some a disdainful deed. Despite See WAVES (Cont. on page 9) for your wisdom and your foresight and to send you greetings on the 28th anniversary of the way, you have reasoned right that peace with justice is worth the sacrifice of profit and added, "In our time, three decades and three wars popularity. It is a privilege to commend you have seen the United States Navy pay dearly for the price of liberty. You have helped preserve that liberty and for your contribution you have earned the respect and admiration of your shipmates."

All hands aboard the Naval Training Center

This is to express my appreciation for the outstanding and extremely professional service and assistance provided by your hospital staff, and in particular, your emergency room personnel.

During the last few months, practically all the members of my family have been required to use your hospital facilities. John, with a broken arm, a broken hand, and more recently, a painful boil, Michael, with a serious infection in his leg, which is still being treated, Nina, with a leg burn, and myself with a cut chin.

The emergency room personnel, together with your orthopedic clinic personnel have provided the most outstanding medical assistance I have experienced during my entire military service.

I hasten to mention the excellent service provided my wife by personnel of your OBGYN clinic.

I hope in some way you will express my thanks and appreciation to your entire medical staff.

A Philippine luau was held Aug. 29 at the CPO beach area featuring dishes native to the Philippines in honor of Lt. Jerry Walker, Naval Hospital Pharmacy Officer, who departs this week for his new duty station at Philadelphia.

The 10-men attached to the pharmacy, under the direction of HMC Dee Diaz, their wives, and friends of Lt. Walker, spent many hours preparing the dishes featured on the menu.

The Filipino theme was also evident in the wearing of "barong tagalogs," a formal shirt worn for such occasions which is made from the fibre of the pineapple plant.

A centerpiece made up of roses carved from potatoes, carved radishes, and a bird carved from an apple, drew compliments from the guests. The centerpiece and much of the food was prepared by SD2 Eddie Pangilinan, an expert in Oriental cuisine, and Peggy Diaz.

Fried Rice
Shanghai Lumpia, a Philippine-style egg roll with ground meat.

Adobo, marinated pork and chicken.

Philippine style shishkebobs.

Tossed salad.

A Philippine tropical salad which combined macaroni with chicken and fruit.

The farewell party was a huge success and was much appreciated by Jerry and Fay Walker.

"It just goes to show what even a small division like ours can do by working together both on, and off, duty," added Chief Diaz.

Speed-up in entry and promotion for physicians

Some physicians will be able to enter the military in higher grades and others will be credited with more time in grade at promotion time, under a new system to become effective Oct. 1.

The speed-up in both entry and promotion is tied to training and experience. The changes are part of DoD Directive 1320.7. One change will allow up to three years' credit for a higher entry grade or promotion to physicians who possess an extra health-related degree not earned on active duty, or who have unusual qualifications.

Other changes will: Grant a half-year credit for each year of active commissioned service performed before becoming a physician, the credit not to exceed three years; Credit physicians in the 0-5 grade with an additional year for promotion purposes if they have a board certification in their specialty; and Allow selection boards to reach two years below the promotion zone, instead of the present one year, to select outstanding officers.

Sir,

I am the brother of Dexter Young, who is in the Hospital there in Orlando. I just got a letter from my parents and they told me how great all of you people were to them.

I am writing you to thank you for taking care of my brother so well and for being so helpful to my parents. I hope you will personally thank all those other people involved, especially Dr. Smyth, C.A. Wells, and Miss Melicks of the Red Cross.

I guess the best way for me to show my gratitude is by just saying Thank You very much and God bless you all.

Cordially

Dear Sir:

I would like to take this opportunity to convey to you the outstanding services that my son received at your hospital. My two-month old son required the services of your pediatrics clinic during the week of August 10th. Dr. Bowles impressed both my wife and myself with his professionalism and extraordinary concern for the health of my son and for the piece of mind of my wife and me. His explanation of the situation and his patience in answering our questions reassured us during a very anxious situation.

Mrs. Carusco of the pediatrics ward was extremely understanding and considerate of our particular needs since my wife was breast feeding the baby. This unfortunately cannot be said about Mrs. Peterson. On several occasions when Mrs. Peterson was aware my wife was coming to feed the baby, she disregarded our requests not to feed the baby.

With people like Dr. Bowles and Mrs. Carusco the Naval Hospital can be very proud of this outstanding pediatrics section. Thank you.

Respectfully yours,

Dear Sir,

Since today's world seems to be filled with many people who are dissenters, I thought perhaps you might like to hear from one who feels that your facility is doing a good job.

I would especially like to mention Dr. Fowler, and the corpsmen of the emergency room. Although our needs have been of a minor nature we feel that Dr. Fowler represents you very well. One could not help but appreciate his courteous manner and most of all, his interest. Regardless of the pressure of waiting lines of people, we never felt that he was practicing assembly-line medicine. Each case was treated as a special individual. At first I thought I had just hit a special day, however, we found the same attitude reflected in Mr. Littleton and in the Chaplain, when he stopped to converse with us for a few moments. In my opinion, that friendly hello or courteous manner, goes a long way. It seems to be half the battle in becoming well. We have appreciated your services.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sally Dussey

Dear Lieutenant Antonopoulos:

Some of us "live to eat" and many others "eat to live". I ate simply because the food was delicious, and the choices so generous and the meals so varied. Since I was on a regular diet I tried many things I shouldn't have (weight-wise), but I did not have willpower enough to deny myself a piece of the finest pecan pie and pumpkin pie I've had in years!!! When I got home I weighed myself and have not gained an ounce, so that is the biggest relief I can think of. I was certain I'd waddle out of Ward 4 like a duck, and quacking, too!!

Seriously, your thoughtful meal planning and its amazing variety gave me never-ceasing amazement at your ability to tempt jaded appetites.

Thank you for such pleasant memories of such fine meals, so attractively served, and so consistently delicious. General McDonald joins me in thanking you and all the other Kitchen staff who helped give me such a quick recovery from the traction "episodes" I underwent for 15 days.

As a recent patient in your hospital, I wish to express my appreciation for the considerate treatment I received while there.

Mrs. Mansfield

DEAR SIR:

I AM A SSGT AT MCCLY AFB AND I WOULD LIKE TO COMMEND ONE OF YOUR DOCTORS. SINCE I AM AN ENLISTED MAN, I DON'T REALLY KNOW THE BEST WAY, EXCEPT BY WRITING YOU PERSONALLY.

THE DOCTOR I WOULD LIKE TO COMMEND IS DOCTOR
FENNING, JOHN, COMMANDER, ORTHOPEDICS.

MY WIFE, VICTORIA, HAD AN ANKLE OPERATION LAST JANUARY 12. IT WAS, TO MY UNDERSTANDING, A VERY DELICATE OPERATION AND MY WIFE WAS IN A CAST 6 MONTHS. THE ANKLE HAS HEALED, AN ANKLE FUSION, BUT NOW THERE IS SOME FOOT PROBLEMS WHICH WERE NOT ANTICIPATED, SO MY WIFE MUST GO BACK INTO SURGERY AGAIN.

DR. FENNING GAVE MY WIFE THE BEST TREATMENT
I HAVE SEEN IN MY 17 YEARS SERVICE. ALOT TIMES, WHEN SHE MIGHT BE IN PAIN, HE WOULD SEE HER RIGHT AWAY,
NO APPOINTMENT. ONCE, WE COULD NOT GET OUT ON A FRIDAY TO SEE HIM, SO HE CAME OUT ON A SATURDAY MORNING JUST TO HELP HER. WHEN MY WIFE WOULD CALL HIM FOR SOMETHING, IF HE WAS NOT BUSY, HE WOULD TALK TO HER IMMEDIATELY.

IF HE WAS BUSY, HE WOULD RETURN THE CALL. HE GAVE HER HIS HOME
PHONE IN CASE HE WAS NEEDED ON WEEKENDS.

THREE DAYS BEFORE MY WIFE'S SURGERY IN JANUARY,
I FELL AT WORK AND CRACKED MY RIGHT ELBOW. THREE DOCTORS AND 10 X-RAYS AT MCCLY COULD NOT FIND THE FRACTURE, SO I HAD TO SUFFER THRU 24 HOURS AT MCCLY UNTIL THEY FINALLY SENT ME TO DR. FENNING. AS SOON AS I WALKED IN, HE KNEW WHAT IT WAS AND TOOK CARE OF ME IMMEDIATELY. I HAVEN'T HAD ANYMORE TROUBLE WITH IT.

MY WIFE JUST RECENTLY HAD AN EMERGENCY APPENDICITIS OPERATION AT THE HOSPITAL AND RECEIVED EXCELLENT TREATMENT.
DR. FENNING CHECKED ON HER EVERY DAY AS HE WAS CHECKING
ON HIS PATIENTS. MY WIFE WAS SCHEDULED FOR HER FOOT OPERATION ON THE 9TH, BUT CANCELLED. MY WIFE'S MOTHER CAME DOWN FROM ATLANTA TO HELP AND THEY WENT TO TALK TO DR. FENNING. HE WANTED TO OPERATE THE 12TH, BUT IT UPSET MY WIFE SO BAD, WE TALKED IT OVER AND HE SAID EARLY JANUARY WOULD BE BETTER.

SIR, I'M NOT VERY GOOD AT WRITING OR MAKING SENSE.
I JUST WANT YOU TO KNOW HOW ONE USAF FAMILY FEELS ABOUT ONE OF YOUR DOCTORS. HE IS THE GREATEST. IF I HAD IT TO DO OVER, I THINK I WOULD JOIN THE NAVY, HA! HA!

WOULD YOU PLEASE LET HIM KNOW HOW WE FEEL?
THANK YOU.

Sincerely,
SSET Jack N. Minton

Captain George W. Taylor, Jr., USN
Commanding Officer, Naval Hospital
Naval Training Center
Orlando, Florida, 32813

Dear Captain Taylor:

What a pleasure it was for me on Tuesday to personally meet you and express my initial appreciation and admiration for the excellent care, meals, and staff compassion which your entire staff gives its patients.
May I ask you to share this letter with all those who are involved, listed below, with the exception of Capt. Adelyn M. Yankoski and Lt. A. T. Antono-poulos who will also receive typed letters from me:

LCDR. Mary Carman, LCDR. Ethel Eusebio, and Mesdames Michela Fulton, Nance, Maria Parrish, Kate Swartout, McDaniel, Phyllis Burke, RN, John Wassman, RN, Carolyn Edwards, RN, and Hospital Wave Corpsmen Eileen Broderick, Kathy McFarlane and Judy Segobia, plus Mrs. Jane McCrae who mopped and cleaned so faithfully.

To Dr. J. Fenning goes my eternal gratitude for the relief from severe pain which his patient "hanging" tactics and exercises seem to have relieved me from so much misery. His work is so dedicated, so compassionate, and he gives the same understanding heart to each of his patients who all admire him as much as I.

Again my deep and eternal thanks to you and your entire staff for their devotion to duty, their patience and their compassion to one and all who enter Ward 4's doors. Individual notes will soon be written to each of the fourteen people who helped me so graciously and professionally, but I did want my letter to you to be my first. Sir, I salute you for your fine facility.

Sincerest Aloha nui,
Marion W. McDonald

My dear Captain Taylor:

I wish to thank you and your staff for the excellent treatment my wife, Jeannette, received last Friday when she was exceedingly ill at the Out-Patient Clinic.

Please extend my most heartfelt appreciation to Doctors Levinson, Auchenbach, Wilson and ~~Amerson~~ and to Nurse Kinney. I do not know of any place where so much consideration is shown to a patient.

I would consider it a very great favor if you would inform your staff about this letter at some future staff meeting.

Naval Hospital Medical Repair Department

RESEARCH—Chief Jim Crowl (left) and Gerald Smith display volumes of manuals needed to order parts for the medical equipment they repair at the Naval Hospital.

Hidden away, in an obscure looking building, at the Naval Hospital are two highly trained technicians that keep all the hospital equipment in operation. These men make up the Medical Repair Department and repair articles and machinery ranging from a common bedlamp to highly intricate X-ray machines.

The technicians responsible for all this gear are Chief Hospital Corpsman Jim Crowl and an ex-Navy medical repairman, who is now a civilian, Gerald Smith.

Chief Crowl is a 8498 which is "navalese" for medical equipment. This, of course, is in addition to being a qualified corpsman. Crowl's last tour of duty, before reporting to the Naval Training Center, was with the Marine Corps in Vietnam. Jim attended an advanced course in medical repair during the months of May and June at the Army's Fitzsimons General Hospital in Denver.

"This was a refresher course which keeps members of our trade up-to-date with the most modern equipment," said Chief Crowl. "Constant study and research by the individual medical field," added the Chief.

In addition to actual repair, in case of machinery breakdown, the Crowl and Smith team perform preventative maintenance on all hospital equipment.

"From a repair standpoint, an x-ray machine is the most technical piece of gear in a hospital although, to a layman, it looks like a rather simple piece of equipment," stated Smith.

"A time-consuming phase of our operation here," continued Smith, "is ordering parts for the medical equipment which we procure either locally or through the standard Navy supply system."

"In cases of emergency we have the facilities to fabricate parts until we receive the needed part from the manufacturer," added Crowl.

In addition to all the equipment on the hospital's wards Crowl and Smith's "fix-it" shop also performs emergency repairs on the sophisticated gear in surgery and the lab and repair the hospital's black-and-white and color television sets for use on the wards.

"A medical repairman must not only know the piece of equipment needing repair but also all the test and repair equipment associated with it," said Smith.

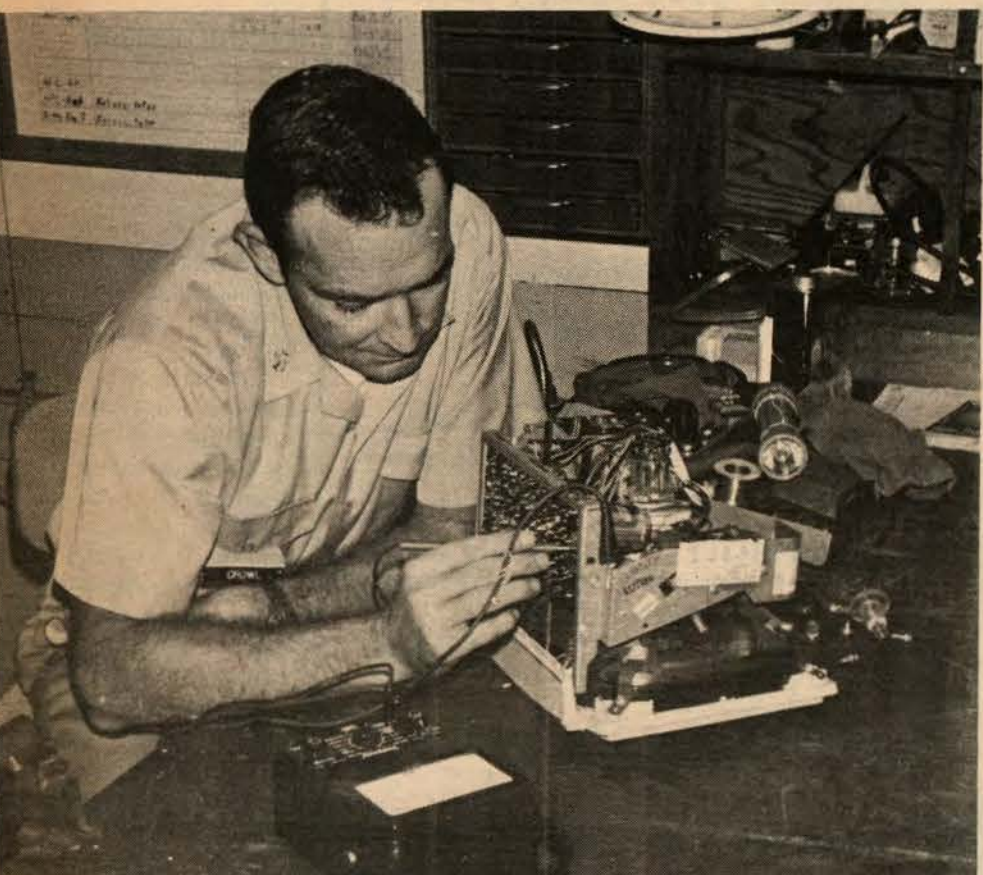

"If it has the word 'medical' stamped on it we fix it," concluded Chief Crowl, laughingly.

REPAIR—Gerry Smith repairs a broken immunization gun at the medical repair facility.

HERE'S THE TROUBLE—Chief Jim Crowl repairs a piece of gear as a Corpsman stands by to return the equipment to surgery.

TROUBLESHOOTING—Chief Jim Crowl checks out one of the 30 black-and-white sets that he and Smith keep in operation for the Naval Hospital's wards.

MINUTEMAN—Gerry Smith prepares to leave the Medical Repair for a ward on a cart that he built from available parts from the shop and salvage. The cart, complete with tool box, enables Chief Crowl and Smith to get to the repair scene in a hurry.

Dear Sir,

In connection with the treatment of my mother-in-law, Pearl Bonine, deceased, and the dedicated attitude of your personnel in her behalf, sir, may I thank you on behalf of my wife and myself.

My wife is truly impressed with the medical personnel with whom she had contact. So much so that I feel the desire to request your expressing our thanks to the personnel in attendance at my mother-in-law's final hours. We do not know their names.

We know that everything was done but to no avail.

Your "Naval Messages" impressed my headquarters and resulted in the utmost cooperation between Army-Navy-Airforce. My wife was in the air within 12 hours after receipt of first message which arrived here about 2330 hours on date of transmission. Again sir, thank you.

Respectfully,

Another modern and functional building was officially placed into operation Monday morning, October 19, in the Recruit Training Command area of the Naval Training Center.

The Recruit In-Processing Facility (RIF) is housed there, in addition to Recruit Training support units of the Naval Training Center and the Naval Hospital.

The Recruit In-Processing Facility is responsible for the housing, clothing, and the assignment of recruits, when they first arrive at the Naval Training Center. Recruits are assigned to this facility where they undergo their testing and basic indoctrination and exposure to Navy life.

Construction on this modern, air conditioned, structure started in June 1969 and was accepted by the Navy in September 1970. The facility is built to handle 8,000 men as they begin their transformation from civilian to sailor and was designed by architects from the firm of McElvy, Jennewein, Stefancy, and Howard of Tampa.

The facility, erected at a cost of slightly under 2-million dollars, was built by the South-Eastern Construction Company of North Carolina.

The Recruit In-Processing Facility also houses an auditorium designed to be utilized by 304 recruits. The recruits will attend various indoctrination lectures and view films on Navy subjects of interest to a new Navyman in this auditorium.

Supervising the construction was Lieutenant (junior grade) C.Y.K. Ching, a member of the Resident Officer-in-Charge of Construction office at the Naval Training Center.

Lieutenant David Arms is officer-in-charge of this new recruit training support building.

The conference was welcomed to the Orlando area by Rear Admiral Lawrence Heyworth Jr., Commander Fleet Air Jacksonville. Captain Enders P. Huey welcomed the personnel attending the conference on behalf of the host command.

Roger T. Kelley, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower and Reserve Affairs, addressed the conference Monday morning. After a press conference for General Leonard F. Chapman Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mr. Kelley, the Commandant delivered the luncheon address to the conference at the Officers' Club.

General Chapman told the luncheon gathering of 260 at the Officer's Club that, he wants to "examine with you our personnel needs—or rather demands—through the coming decade."

"A great deal is being said about the new style of our times. In fact the international vocabulary even has a new word for it—'mod'."

"Of course 'mod' is not really a new word, it is merely an old word compressed to fit the period. And even in its formation, 'mod' describes our modern world, because it is merely the old world compressed. "No, the earth just isn't as large as it once was," stated Gen. Chapman. "The President has pointed out our goals, and we are on our way," he added.

The General went on to say that the Navy-Marine Corps team has not been overlooked in this trimming down. Not only is our personnel strength being reestablished; but ships, aircraft and equipment are being deactivated and stored. None of this, however, decreases our team's basic mission. In fact, it serves to intensify its application.

Our Navy-Marine corps team—with fewer ships, fewer aircraft, less equipment and a small manpower base—must form a highly mobile, constantly ready and totally professional sea-based defense force. Our Navy-Marine Corps team is to be, without question, the American queen on the world chessboard, the General went on.

"In this new decade our supporting systems will probably have to focus on the identification of essential—or hard core—functions that either the Navy or the Marine Corps must do for themselves, said General Chapman.

This breaks down into a "demanding list":

--Determining requirements.

--Managing allotted funds.

--Controlling distribution and communications channels.

--Managing a highly mobile logistics system.

--Monitoring equipment programs support.

--And providing services not otherwise available.

"Most certainly the number of Navy and Marine Corps civilian managers required in 1979, will increase over those required now.

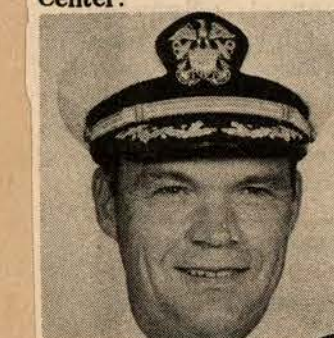

However, in preparing for the increase, we will have a constantly decreasing number of personnel with which to work.

"In other words, more chiefs, fewer Indians. If the predictions are correct and I think they are, there will be a major shift towards the GS-9 level," stated Gen. Chapman.

In concluding the General stated, "I challenge you to merge our missions and the human goals of our Navy and Marine Corps with civilian personnel into one dynamic purpose—the purpose of people serving people."

On Tuesday the conference received a briefing from Captain Frank H. Featherston, Commanding Officer, Naval Training Device Center. Following the briefing the conference broke up into discussion groups and each group toured the NTC Exhibit Center.

CAPT. FEATHERSTON

While in discussion groups on Wednesday, James D. Hittle, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Manpower and Reserve

Affairs, visited the various discussion groups.

On Wednesday evening the convention had a reception and dinner at the Robert Meyer Motor Inn in downtown Orlando.

A Personnel Management Evaluation Panel highlighted the fourth day of the conference with the remainder of the day spent in discussion groups.

After a Social Objective Panel and conference summary by Mr. Willey this morning the five-day conference concluded with the luncheon address by Admiral Zumwalt.

Civilians becoming specialized Civilian employees of the Federal Government are becoming more specialized in their fields now than at any other time, according to Robert H. Willey, Director, Civilian Manpower Management, Department of Navy and Marine Corps, Washington, in an exclusive interview with the editor of The Recruit.

Mr. Willey gave the State of Civilian Personnel in the Department of the Navy and Marine Corps address on Monday, the opening day of a five day Civilian Personnel Officers Conference here at the Naval Training Center.

"The Navy is primarily a technical and industrial employer of civilian personnel," stated Mr. Willey, because most civilian employees are working in technical programs, laboratories, shipyards, air stations, supply facilities, etc.

Because of the rapid draw-down in civilian personnel Mr. Willey told the 240 civilian and military personnel attending the 2nd World -

ROBERT H. WILEY

Wide conference that FY 1970 was a "trying year."

Civilian manpower was reduced by 48,000 employees or 11 per cent during FY1970. However, with retirements and finding employees jobs elsewhere, only 6,900 were really "separated by reduction in force procedures," Mr. Willey said.

"The way in which the large reduction was handled by military commanding officers, managers and their personnel officers is a credit to the Navy and Marine Corps," Mr. Willey emphasized.

Personnel policies are now being shaped along the lines of careers for civilian employees and not just filling a position when it becomes available, he added.

What we were looking for now is "career management" and "manpower planning."

Because the Navy and Marine Corps recognized the need for the services of civilian employees, the draw-down was skillfully managed," he added.

Career employees can now plan on an overseas tour of duty if they want it with assurance of guaranteed return rights at their current grade if they serve satisfactory tours.

Subject: Letter of Commendation

Dear Sir:

On 5 October 1970, I was rushed to the emergency room of the Training Center Hospital. The attention I received was prompt, courteous, and efficient. The professional attitude displayed by Dr. Fowler was outstanding. The services he rendered far exceeded the Hippocratic approach to medicine that I have received in any other military installation, including Walter Reed Hospital. He is to be commended for his professionalism.

Sincerely,

Senior Hospitalman Chief W.R. "Bill" Charette was back at his desk Tuesday morning like he has been since arriving at the Naval Hospital in April of 1968. The only difference was, what Chief Charette did over the past weekend.

This week's "Meet the Staff" personality spent the weekend in Washington, D.C. Chief Charette is the only enlisted man still on active duty in the Navy that has the honor of wearing the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Along with four other representatives of the Armed Forces, who have received the Nation's highest award, Chief Charette represented the Navy during the half ceremony October 8 of the Washington Redskins-Minnesota Vikings football game.

The halftime ceremony was in honor of Veterans Day and was seen on nationwide television.

Chief Charette will complete 20 years of Naval service in January. Bill is in charge of the I and E Office at the Naval Hospital.

He received the Medal of Honor as a Hospital Corpsman Third Class, serving with a Marine rifle company in Korea in 1953.

Chief Charette was onboard the guided missile cruiser USS Canberra in 1958 when the unknown soldier was selected for Arlington Cemetery, where he also received nationwide publicity.

Dear Sir:

Last week, I had need to avail myself of the facilities of the Dental Clinic. This was my first visit to this installation since the Navy took command. I was very much impressed with the smooth functioning of the clinic and I want to commend all hands concerned.

Mrs. Guthrie, the dental hygienist, assisted me in a very competent manner, and Dr. Pelladran performed some necessary work on my teeth with minimal discomfort. All members of the clinic with whom I came in contact were most courteous and considerate despite the large number of patients in attendance.

I express my sincere thanks and my commendation for a job well done.

Dear Sir:

My wife, Mrs. Mildred C. Parrish, has been a cancer patient at your hospital for the past fourteen months. During this time she has had one major operation and was later air evacuated to the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Maryland for additional treatment. A few days ago she was sent back to Bethesda for a second time.

I would like to sincerely express my appreciation to you and other members of your Command for the excellent attention and treatment shown my wife since she has been a patient there. I am especially grateful to Dr. Scheftad in the GYN Clinic who has given so much of his time, effort, and understanding in keeping my wife alive and as comfortable and reassured as possible. In addition, he has always found time to talk with my wife by telephone when she felt it necessary. I am sure this type of patient care is exceedingly rare these days.

The best testimony that I can give is that my wife and I both realize that she is alive today thanks to the efforts of Dr. Scheftad and other dedicated members of your Command. We sincerely want to thank all of you.

So immediately we all took the next flight out to Orlando, Florida.

THE COMMANDING OFFICER'S MESSAGE

If the joyous thoughts and meaningful deeds so clearly demonstrated during the Christmas season could endure all year long, how much closer would we be to attainment of peace on earth and the brotherhood of mankind. At Christmastime people are happier, friendlier, kindlier, and more mindful of the personal needs and noble desires of all mankind to live in harmony with and sympathy for all others. Let us rededicate ourselves to the tasks ahead and strive for the spirit of Christmas to transcend the New Year. May the guns be hushed, friends and relatives reunited, and the efforts of all men everywhere be directed to improvement of the environment and world peace. The staff of Naval Hospital, Orlando takes great pride and humility in the daily tasks associated with patient care, welfare and happiness of Navy and Marine Corps personnel and their families and the continuous search for advancement of the health of all mankind.

To each patient and hospital staff member, I extend my warmest wishes for a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year filled with renewed hope for Peace on Earth and Good Will toward All Men.

Recruits donate blood

Figures on blood donations by recruits in 1970 were released here this week by the Military Training Department at Recruit Training Command. It was revealed that recruit blood donations during the year totalled 4,093 units or more than 511 gallons. One of the programs supported by recruit blood donations is the Western Pacific Whole Blood Program. The blood collected from this program is sent to the Republic of Vietnam for use in military hospitals there. The WESTPAC Blood Program is strictly voluntary. During the past year the recruits have given 2,422 units of blood to this program. The quota requested for the program for 1970 was 2,471 units, and the recruits met 98 per cent of this, falling short of the 100 per cent mark because certain blood types were not available among the recruit population. Blood donated by recruit volunteers is used by the Naval Hospital for area military personnel, dependents or mass casualties. During the past year 1,622 were given for this cause over and above the Western Pacific Whole Blood Program.

Dedication of the $2.6 million recruit dispensary and dental clinic is scheduled for 3 p.m. today at the Orlando Naval Training Center.

Rear Adm. H. S. Etter, assistant chief for planning and logistics, and Rear Adm. E. C. Raffetto, assistant chief for dentistry, both of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Washington, will attend the dedication.

BUILT EXCLUSIVELY for training center recruits, the 84,000-square-foot facility will lighten the burden on the Orlando Naval Hospital, which until now has handled all recruit medical needs.

Dispensary-Dental Clinic dedicated

The Recruit Dispensary and Dental Clinic here at the Naval Training Center was accepted by the Navy at the 3 p.m. commissioning ceremonies, Wednesday.

The structure, which contains 84,000 feet of floor space, was designed and built for the exclusive support of Navy Recruits at a basic construction cost of $2,648,000.00. The facility is a three story, poured-in-place concrete skeleton frame with buff colored brick curtain walls and pre-cast panels and it follows the basic design concept established for the entire Naval Training Center.

Ground was broken in July 1969 and construction was completed on March 1. Architect for the building was Stevens and Walton, Inc., Winter Park.

The dispensary is a modern medical facility designed to provide a wide range of diagnostic and therapeutic services to Navy recruits. For recruits suffering other than minor medical ailments that require a few days hospitalization the dispensary is equipped with 150 hospital beds. The dispensary is also equipped with all necessary supporting services such as x-ray, laboratory, and pharmacy.

The Naval Hospital, Orlando, will staff, administer, and support the Recruit Dispensary as a professional and clinical service of the hospital. Extended hospitalization and specialty care of recruits will be provided by other professional clinical services of the hospital.

The Recruit Dental Clinic is located in the east wing of the first floor of the building and is the latest and most modern dental facility for the treatment of the Naval Training Center's most important product... the Navy Recruit.

The Dental Clinic houses 42 dental operating rooms, three oral hygiene treatment rooms, a fully

Hot stuff

Just one of the new features that abound in the Recruit Dispensary and Dental Clinic is the radar ovens, used in the preparation of the patients meals. Dinners much like those served on board airlines will be heated in about 30 seconds in these ovens before serving. The kitchen, one in each ward, are complete with sinks, warming ovens, and a refrigerator.

A unique feature of the clinic is the open-bay arrangement of the dental operatories where "four handed dentistry" will be practiced serviced by a central rotator and a central sterilizing room.

Hot stuff

Just one of the new features that abound in the Recruit Dispensary and Dental Clinic is the radar ovens, used in the preparation of the patients meals. Dinners much like those served on board airlines will be heated in about 30 seconds in these ovens before serving. The kitchen, one in each ward, are complete with sinks, warming ovens, and a refrigerator.

THE RECRUIT DISPENSARY AND DENTAL CLINIC

The Recruit Dispensary and Dental Clinic, a three story, poured in place concrete skeleton frame with buff colored brick curtain walls and pre-cast panels, follows the basic design concept established for the entire Naval Training Center. The structure, which contains 84,000 square feet of floor space, was designed and built for the exclusive support of Navy Recruits at a basic construction cost of $2,648,000. Ground was broken in July 1969 and construction completed on 1 March 1971.

The Recruit Dispensary is a modern medical facility designed to provide a wide range of diagnostic and therapeutic services to Navy recruits. Minor medical ailments are cared for at a completely equipped and professionally staffed sick call and treatment facilities. For the recruit requiring a few days hospitalization, the dispensary is equipped with 150 hospital beds and all necessary supporting services such as x-ray, laboratory, and pharmacy. To ensure the Navy Recruit receives proper nourishment during short hospitalization periods, the dispensary will operate a convenience food system utilizing pre-packaged foods and micro wave ovens to provide wholesome and steaming hot meals.

The Naval Hospital, Orlando, will staff, administer, and support the Recruit Dispensary as a professional and clinical service of the hospital. Extended hospitalization and medical specialty care of recruits will be provided by other professional clinical services of the hospital.

The Recruit Dental Clinic is located in the east wing of the first floor of the building and is the latest and most modern dental facility for the treatment of our most important product - the Navy Recruit. The clinic encompasses 42 dental operating rooms, 3 oral hygiene treatment rooms, a fully equipped oral surgery, and a modern laboratory. A complete dental service is provided in all the dental specialties. A unique feature of the clinic is the open bay arrangement of dental operatories in the operative branch. "Four-handed dentistry" is practiced here, serviced by a central rotator and central sterilizing room.

Patients and staff members of the Naval Hospital recently took part in the National Prayer Breakfast for the second consecutive year, in conjunction with an annual breakfast held at the Hilton Hotel on February 2, in Washington, D. C. Featured speaker at the observance was retired Rear Admiral George C. Crawford, USN, a patient at the hospital who related his experiences of World War II. Staff members also present, were from left to right: Lt.(jg) Barbara Brake, HN Jeffrey Grubba, Cdr Christopher Young, Hospital Chaplain, Captain Adelyn Yankoski, Chief of Nursing Service, and Radm Crawford in chair.

X-Rays for civilian employees

Annual Chest X-Ray Examinations will be available to civilian employees at the Naval Training Center on a voluntary basis on Friday, March 5 and Monday, March 8.

The Navy Mobile X-ray Unit will be located at the Base Theater parking lot from 8 to 12 a.m. and from 1 to 3 p.m. Each employee who wishes to have a chest x-ray should bring a white 3x5 card containing the following information: Employee's name, payroll number, activity and code, and date and place of birth.

Recruits donate blood

Figures on blood donations by recruits in 1970 were released here this week by the Military Training Department at Recruit Training Command. It was revealed that recruit blood donations during the year totalled 4,093 units or more than 511 gallons.

One of the programs supported by recruit blood donations is the Western Pacific Whole Blood Program. The blood collected from this program is sent to the Republic of Vietnam for use in military hospitals there.

The WESTPAC Blood Program is strictly voluntary. During the past year the recruits have given 2,422 units of blood to this program. The quota requested for the program for 1970 was 2,471 units, and the recruits met 98 per cent of this, falling short of the 100 per cent mark because certain blood types were not available among the recruit population.

Blood donated by recruit volunteers is used by the Naval Hospital for area military personnel, dependents or mass casualties. During the past year 1,622 were given for this cause over and above the Western Pacific Whole Blood Program.

New hospital filing system

Navy hospitals and dispensaries are now filing dependent outpatient medical records by the Social Security number of their sponsor. Dependents should make sure they know their sponsor's number when they make an outpatient visit so their records can be changed to the new filing system.

The officials said the new system will speed up outpatient record handling, with shorter waiting periods for records, and will help doctors and staff provide better services.

Navy Doctors, 100 years of service

An Act of Congress in 1871 established the Medical Corps as a staff corps and prescribed the relative rank of Navy physicians. The same act designated the senior naval physician as the Surgeon General. Navy doctors, however, had been serving with the fleet since the early days of America's history.

The first naval surgeon to go to sea went aboard the sloop ALFRED in 1775 — to serve with a young Lieutenant named John Paul Jones. Even before the United States Navy was formally established, these early Navy doctors were serving on board ships with names familiar to every American — Constitution, Constellation, United States.

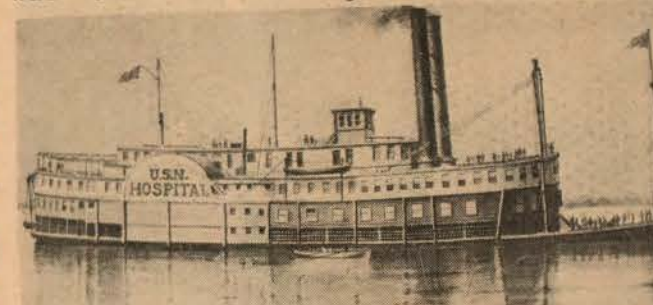

They were called surgeons or surgeon's mates, depending upon their level of education and skill. They were few in number, but they saw considerable action in the Revolutionary War, the War Against the Barbary Pirates, and, later, the War of 1812.

In 1828, the Congress prescribed more stringent standards for the selection of Navy physicians. The term surgeon's mate became assistant surgeon — and the act provided that "no person shall receive the appointment of assistant surgeon in the Navy of the United States, unless he shall have been examined and approved by a board of naval surgeons, who shall be designated for that purpose by the Secretary of the Navy Department." Navy medicine had taken a big step forward, but there remained much to be done.

In 1842, another Act of Congress established five Bureaus at the Navy Headquarters level; among those established was the Bureau of Medical Corps. In 1871, when the Medical Corps was established, there were 154 doctors on active duty. For 96 years, their predecessors had been primarily concerned with the treatment of battle casualties and serious injuries. The tremendous technological advances of the post Civil War period brought the first of many changes in their duties and responsibilities.

The practice of naval medicine has advanced considerably in the 100 years since Navy doctors first had a Corps to call their own. Their responsibilities have broadened to include the prevention of disease. As the Navy changed from part sail-part steam to all steam, preventative medicine became an equally important responsibility and Navy Medical officers worked very hard to develop improved standards for the health and well being of the crews who served aboard ships that could now spend longer periods at sea. For the Navy's doctors, educational requirements became greater, more training was required, and the end result was that the medical officers of the early 1900's were better prepared to meet their responsibilities in an increasingly sophisticated, ever expanding Navy. Today, there are over four thousand Navy medical officers on active duty. They serve at Naval hospitals, dispensaries, on board ships, with the Marines, and on the staffs of the major fleet and force commanders.

They are specialists and general practitioners; research scientists and hospital commanding officers.

In the seventies, this responsibility — the care of the men who follow the sea and the families they must leave behind — will remain the primary duty of the Medical Corps. With a century of service behind them, Navy doctors are looking forward to the challenges of this decade.

Dear Enders,

Thank you for the numerous thoughtful things you did to make my stay in the hospital a pleasant one. And speaking of the hospital - I cannot say too many good things about it. I have inspected many Navy hospitals during my life (When I was General Inspector for the Atlantic Fleet Admiral Blandy had me inspect every Naval hospital on the Atlantic coast) and I can honestly say that yours at Orlando ranks high on my list. Knowing what I do, and seeing what I did, I well know that our hospitals are understaffed in personnel and well over-worked. In spite of this I did not hear even one slight belly-ache or complaint. I was most favorably impressed.

I appreciate your taking time out of a very busy schedule to pay me two visits; I enjoyed your Play-boys and Shipmate; and I am deeply appreciative of the many courtesies you extended to Lurline.

Sincerely,

attendants, and particularly the nurses, did everything humanly possible to see to Mrs. Parrish's comfort and our peace of mind. Most of all, I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to the young ladies in blue (Corps Waves, I believe) for their exceptional sensitivity. Miss Helen Bowen, Miss Nance, "Katy", Mrs. Bryant, Dr. Winker, Dr. Shefstad, and a dozen more whose names I never knew or cannot recall.... our deepest gratitude for a job well done under the most trying circumstances.

Sincerely Yours,

Subject: Note of thanks

Dear Captain Taylor, I recently graduated from your fine hospital after a heart attack. From the time I was admitted to the EKG lounge by that lovely lady that gave me prompt and efficient attention to my last examination by doctor Wilson, I never dreamed such fine treatment existed as I had never in my life had to go to a hospital before.

There are among many in your staff that I want to express my thanks for the fine attention they gave me during my stay of two weeks in Ward Seven and Ward Eight. Of course there were several doctors that saw me at first but it was doctor Wilson (with the million dollar smile) that helped me get well more than anything else. He was a great man and I have seen a few in my years in the Navy, but doctor Wilson treated me like I was his own son. I only hope you will do all in your power to get him another stripe, by that time you wont have to worry as you'll be an Admiral then.

Then the other chap is Thomas Sansom and I believe he left Ward eight and is your cheauffer. There again like doctor Wilson, was a man that came in early in the morning with a big smile and gave all the patients such good care that pills and X-rays didn't hold a candle to his treatment. Ward eight lost a good man and you gained a real gentleman. I asked Tom if you had a Rolls Royce that he would be driving and he said he didn't think so. Now you see what happened? You didn't get the Rolls and they have gone bankrupt and out of business. Captain Taylor, that fellow doctor Wilson is the greatest not only as a medical man but what a guy to make you feel at ease and put your confidence in him.

Thanks to you and your fine staff, we might have to wait in the outpatient area to be seen, but once the staff sees us, the treatment is the greatest.
My very best regards to all.

Sincerely,

Lloyd G. Morse

Dear Sir:

On Sunday, January 24, 1971 my son was involved in an accident between a motorcycle and a car. The offspring was on the motorcycle and the car was parked - the result - only a few stitches in the boy's face, some rather painful pulled muscles and hurt pride.

After he hit the car, an ambulance was called and young Frank was taken to your hospital where he received emergency treatment.

The treatment given was excellent. The courtesy, efficiency and concern for my son, who really did not know that he wasn't hurt very badly, was outstanding. I particularly wish to commend Corpsman Terry Mulvania. My other son and my daughter were in attendance and both remarked on the fine job the corpsman did. Everyone, doctor and corpsmen, were a credit to you and your command.

Respectfully,

Frank L. Rebelman

My comments have been most comforting and I feel the greater part of it is due to the wonderful people in all the above mentioned departments. I am looking forward to getting back on duty because it is a pleasure and a privilege to work with a group such as they.

gent, efficient, and friendly manner.

I received the utmost courtesy from Patient Affairs, X-ray and Laboratory Personnel.

The meals were excellent and the food service personnel are to be congratulated for good service.

Outstanding is too mild a word to describe the care I received from Ward 4 personnel. Every nurse, corpsman, and civilian assistant was most considerate and attentive to my welfare. They anticipated my needs and took care of them promptly and cheerfully. They made me feel welcome, cared for, and secure.

Dear Sir,

On December 10, 1970 I had surgery at Orlando Naval Hospital, and I feel I must tell you what wonderful treatment I received. Never in all my life before have I been the recipient of such efficient and courteous care.

My doctor, Captain Shestak is expert and I feel extremely fortunate to be in his care. The personnel in his clinic are, without exception most thoughtful, and from my stand point, they leave nothing to be desired in the performance of their duties.

Captain Yankowski and Miss Mann were most understanding and helpful in every possible way as they always are. Along with them I wish to include Mrs. Kattenbach with her quiet, efficient, and friendly manner.

I received the utmost courtesy from Patient Affairs, X-ray and Laboratory Personnel.

The meals were excellent and the food service personnel are to be congratulated for good service.

Outstanding is too mild a word to describe the care I received from Ward 4 personnel. Every nurse, corpsman, and civilian assistant was most considerate and attentive to my welfare.
